Not Grandpa's Cadillac

TALKING CARS

JUNIOR DAMATO

QUESTION: Recently I saw an ad for the new Cadillac CTS Sport Wagon V/6. Is this car just another GM car with different sheet metal, or a real Cadillac? Have you seen or driven the car?

ANSWER: We just spent a week in a 2010 CTS Sport Wagon Black on Black 304 HP V/6. This car got more attention than any other late model car I have had for a while. The main comment was, "I have seen the car in books only." This is a real Cadillac, not just a different GM model with sheet metal. Our test car was a rear-wheel-drive model. Look for an all-wheel-drive and the popular V series 556 HP version as well. The sport wagon is just as it sounds, just missing the word performance. The 304 HP V/6 packs ample power combined with the six-speed automatic with driver control or sport mode. Our test car also had the 19-inch summer tires with polished alloy rims. The firm leather heated and ventilated multi-adjustable front seats wrap around your body and hold you in place. The ultra-large sunroof both lets sunlight in and hot air out. Fuel economy is 18 city, 27 highway, on regular unleaded. Cadillac is going after the younger buyer as well as the older buyers it currently has. The quality is built in every aspect of the car, and it shows.

QUESTION: I own a 2008 Pontiac G8. The problem is the brake lights stay on. I installed a new brake light switch and still have the same problem. I thought the new switch was defective and replaced it with another new switch and still have the same problem. Do you have any ideas?

ANSWER: In the old days, you would think the problem was a faulty brake light switch. With today's newer vehicles, whenever there is an electrical problem, a scan tool needs to be used and check for any codes in the affected circuit. In your case, a check of the body control module. A misadjusted brake position sensor will cause the brake lights to stay on. Then recalibrate the sensor; a Tech 2 scan tool is required. At our shop, we have most of the factory scan tools. It is expensive to own these factory scan tools as well as updating them every year.

QUESTION: I own a 2000 Jeep Cherokee sport and am having a problem with the R134a gas leaking. I had repaired the A/C evaporator core and dryer. The A/C charge only lasts a short time. I cannot see any tracer dye leaking. The local shop tests for leaks and cannot find any. Any suggestions would be appreciated.

ANSWER: You mentioned you repaired the evaporator core. There is no mention of replacement. If the system has dye in it and you cannot see any dye on the condenser, lines or compressor, you and I both know the evaporator box has to be inspected. The R134a gas does not evaporate; it is leaking out. Most shops will have a digital leak tester that has a small wand. The wand should be able to enter the drain tube on the heater box. I sometimes will make a small hole on the heater box case to test for an evaporator leak. There are some companies that sell A/C leak sealers. In some cases they do work. Every year when I mention A/C sealer I get criticized for it; sorry guys, I do use it at my shop.

QUESTION: In 2000, I purchased a new Buick. It was recalled for a coolant leak and fixed under warranty. The engine is loosing coolant again. My mechanic pressure-tested the cooling system and cannot find any leaks. What do you think?

ANSWER: A cooling system pressure test is very good for locating external leaks; however, seldom will it reveal internal leaks such as cylinder head and head gasket leaks. Before you do anything, have your mechanic buy a package of GM coolant pellets, a.k.a. stop-leak pellets. This pellets or supplement really do work to stop small internal coolant leaks.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 12, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A perplexing situation needs to be dealt with in order to avoid problems later on. Rely on both your own sense of what's right and the advice of someone you trust to help work it out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Let your sharp Taurean business insight guide you when considering a "dream deal." Without all the facts, it could turn into a nightmare. Remember: Investigate before investing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Sharing so much of your time and your gifts with others is what you do so well, and this week, don't be surprised if others want to share with you. Enjoy the experience. You've earned it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A difficult personal situation seems to defy efforts to resolve it. Perhaps you're too close to it. Take some time to reassess what went wrong, and then see where things can be set right.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Leonine pride could be piqued a bit when someone else appears to be standing in your light. Be patient and resist the urge to growl at the interloper. You'll soon be the "mane" attraction again.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A professional situation benefits from your clear assessment of the circumstances involved. On the personal side, that new relationship looks as if it will continue to grow.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) More good news about a loved one helps reassure others who could not share your more-optimistic view before. Continue to help everyone in need of your comforting presence.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creating new friendships could turn out to be the unexpected but welcome result of reconnecting with old friends. The weekend is a good time for fun and games. Enjoy!

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The more you learn about what you plan to do, the more likely you are to consider making some changes in your plans. This is good; don't resist it. Instead, go with it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A career change is still in your aspect, but a potential workplace change could be what you've been looking for. See what develops before making any drastic moves.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your energy levels are high this week, which should help you get all your workaday tasks done and still leave you with enough breath to handle some domestic challenges.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An unexpected fluke could cause problems with your travel plans. If so, use the time to troll for other available options, and you might be pleasantly surprised at what turns up.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy the company of lots of people, but you also can treasure the moments shared with just one special person.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Center Stage Performing Arts Studio to hold Broadway camp

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Katie Gassert (left) and Matt Doyle (right) are two professional actors, dancers and singers who will pass on their knowledge at Center Stage Performing Arts Studio's "Rising Stars Summer Broadway Camp 2010"

Mention summer camp and most people think of swimming, arts and crafts, and maybe archery. Local entertainment presenter John F. McDonald, Jr., will put a theatrical spin on day camp this month, however, when he presents the third annual "Rising Stars Summer Broadway Camp 2010" at Quincy's Center Stage Performing Arts Studio.

"Our camp provides young people with a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to work with some of Broadway's best and brightest performers from shows like last season's Roundabout revival of 'Bye Bye Birdie,' and 'Spring Awakening,' the 2007 Tony Award winner for Best Musical. We've even got a faculty member who has a recurring role on the television series, 'Gossip Girl,'" explains McDonald.

Designed for children in grades 3 to 12, with no prior performing experience necessary, "Rising Stars" will be held July 5 to 9 and 12 to 16 from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day. All classes will be taught by professional Broadway actors, dancers and singers, including Hingham native Katie Gassert, who is happy to be coming home from New York for at least a few weeks this summer.

Designed for children in grades 3 to 12, with no prior performing experience necessary, "Rising Stars" will be held July 5 to 9 and 12 to 16 from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day.

"I began studying at the Quincy School of Ballet when I was 4-years-old and by the time I was 9, I was in a production of 'The King and I' at Curtain Call Theatre in Braintree. I also did all the musicals at Hingham Middle School and in high school, too," explained the 2004 Hingham High School graduate by telephone from Manhattan last week. "I know what it is to fall in love with performing at a young age."

Growing up in Hingham, Gassert took voice lessons from Jean Knapp and was a student and later music director at the town's Kids' Cabaret. She also trained at Boston's Children's Theatre. In those early years, she was often joined by her sisters Maureen and Sara.

"My parents, Tim and Mary Anne Gassert, really encouraged us and remain very supportive of my career to this day," says Gassert, a 2008 graduate of New York University's Tisch School of the Arts who was featured in a national tour of the musical "Seussical."

"John Higgins, who ran the drama department at Hingham High School, instilled in me the importance of pursuing my dreams which is one of the things I want to pass on to the children in the camp. It is important that they know that passion, dedication, and hard work can make your dreams of a career in theater a reality."

Gassert is not the only camp faculty member originally from Massachusetts. Manchester-by-the-Sea native Matt Doyle will be commuting back and forth from a Bronx movie set to Quincy to join Gassert – his midtown-Manhattan roommate – in Quincy.

"I start rehearsals very soon on an independent film called 'McKinley,' which is a Romeo & Juliet story set at an all-male military school, so I will be flying back and forth from the set. I had committed to the camp before I booked the film and I did not want to back out from something so important," explained Doyle by telephone from New York last week.

Doyle, who spent two years in the New York production of "Spring Awakening" and was seen more recently with John Stamos in the short-lived Broadway revival of "Bye Bye Birdie," is not only a stage and film actor, but also had a recurring role on the popular teen television drama "Gossip Girl."

"I played Jonathan Whitney, the high school boyfriend of Eric van der Woodsen who is played by Connor Paulo. Jonathan and Eric were a really nice, non-stereotypical gay couple. Amidst all the drama, we were one of the sanest couples on the show," says Doyle, who appeared in seven episodes of the CW series in the 2008-2009 season. "There is a really wonderful group of people involved in that show. I've always been drawn to television, but never really expected the experience to be as pleasant as it was."

Doyle hopes "Rising Star" students will come away with a similar impression.

"We moved to San Francisco when I was 11 and so I did all kinds of theater camps in the Bay Area, and later in high school I attended one at NYU. For me, the greatest tool has been vocal performance and how to convey lyrics. What I want to teach the students this summer is not to be too theatrical, but to strive for honesty and to access the heart of a song. I can't wait to get to work with them, to get to know who they are and to help them learn."

"Rising Stars Summer Broadway Camp 2010" will take place July 5 to 9 and July 12 to 16 at Center Stage Performing Arts Studio, 152 Franklin St., Quincy. Applications are still being accepted. Simply go online at www.jmproductionspresents.com.

Girl Scout earns Gold Award

By Nancy White

The town may be a little safer these days thanks to a girl scout.

Meghann Salerno recently received her Girl Scout Gold Award for completing a project that involved purchasing an Automated External Defibrillator (AED) for the town.

The new defibrillator, a portable device used to aid in restoring a regular heart rhythm, will find its home at the Recycling Transfer Facility. An AED can save lives because it can used in those vital minutes before emergency responders arrive.

The Gold Award is the highest possible achievement in the organization, similar to the Boy Scouts' Eagle Scout recognition.

The criteria for a Gold Award project is very specific. The project must show leadership, longevity and impact on the community. The project is more than a good service project — it encompasses organizational, leadership, and networking skills. The project usually takes more than a year to complete.

When Meghann, a rising senior, started brainstorming for her project she thought of the Cohasset Fire Department. When she broke her knee two years ago, EMTs responded and she recalled them talking about their aging equipment, in particular the ambulance. She initially thought raising money for an ambulance

Water ban for Aquarion users in North Cohasset

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the time being most Cohasset water users are not going to be subjected to a water ban, but if this weather keeps up it is a possibility.

Aquarion customers in North Cohasset, Hingham and Hull were hit with a mandatory water ban earlier this week (see sidebar). On the other Cohasset border, Scituate water instituted a similar water ban limiting outside watering.

Water Commission chairman Chris Seebeck said the water treatment plant is in overdrive to keep up with the demand.

"We have been working almost around the clock producing water," Seebeck said. Over the weekend the plant was processing water for 20 hours. Typically the water plant is given a rest during the overnight hours and water is supplied from two water tanks.

Earlier this week the water plant was processing and distributing two million gallons of water each day, compared to a more normal million-gallon output. For comparison sake, in January, Seebeck said, demand is substantially lower with a need for 500,000 to 650,000 gallons of water per day.

"(The increase) is almost entirely irrigation," Seebeck said. Even those who don't typically water their lawns have been watering their plants and bushes to save them from the heat.

The upside is with water users consuming more water it means more revenues coming in for the financially

Avalon gets building permits

Construction could start this summer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Building permits — 43 in all — were issued last week for the Avalon Bay apartment complex.

Now the apartment complex, which has been years in the making, will be a reality in a matter of months — and Cohasset will have 220 new addresses.

Building Inspector Bob Egan issued 37 residential permits and six other permits for auxiliary structures for the complex.

Last month, the Avalon project became a local initiative project (LIP), or friendly 40-B, when the town signed an application to send to the state. The switch to a LIP enabled Avalon Bay to fund the project with its own capital — and added 20 additional units to the project.

The apartment complex with 200 units received a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals over six years ago. The re-classification as a LIP, which basically means the project has the support of town officials, enables Avalon to self-fund the project. Under the comprehensive permit scenario, funding sources from the state, which have dried up due to the economy, are needed.

With the additional 20 units, Cohasset will likely meet the 10 percent affordable housing threshold required by the state law. Because the state encourages rental units, all 220 units will "count" toward the town's affordable housing percentage. Cohasset has hovered at about 2.8 percent (176 units) affordable housing stock for decades.

Police Beat

Court dates, accidents and a three-town cow pursuit

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Summonses

• Officer conducting traffic enforcement at 9:39 a.m. on Monday (June 28) near Beechwood and Doane streets stopped a 2006 Dodge Charger, operated by a 51-year-old Scituate woman, for not coming to a full stop at the stop sign on Doane Street before turning right onto Beechwood Street, police said. Further investigation revealed the woman's license had expired in December. She is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and failure to stop at a stop sign. Her car did not have to be towed as a friend arrived to drive the car.

• At about 8 p.m. on Monday (June 28), an officer ran a computer check on a 2002 Hyundai Elantra that was illegally parked in a handicap spot at Town Hall. The computer revealed the vehicle's registration had been revoked for insurance purposes. The car also had no inspection sticker. The operator of the car, a 62-year-old Scituate woman, is being summonsed for operating with suspended registration, operating an uninsured vehicle and for not meeting RMV safety standards (no inspection sticker).

• A 20-year-old South Weymouth man is being summonsed to court for being a minor in possession of alcohol (beer) after and officer observed him at about 12:30 a.m. on Thursday (July 1) walk toward a car on North Main Street near the Little League fields with a case of beer. Further investigation revealed his backpack also contained about 12 cans of unopened beer. The beer was seized and he was issued the criminal citation.

Accidents

• At 10:16 a.m. on Monday (June 28), police responded to the report of a minor parking lot accident behind Atlantic Bagel. Police said a 2009 Chevrolet pickup truck operated by a 52-year-old Cohasset woman was backing out of the lot behind Atlantic Bagel when she hit the side of an unoccupied 2000 Nissan Altima, causing minor damage. There were no tows and no injuries, police said.

• At 6:31 p.m. on Friday (July 2), a 43-year-old Scituate man was riding his bicycle south on Route 3A in the northbound lane (against traffic). A 40-year-old Scituate woman was pulling out of Starbucks in a 2003 Toyota Highlander and was looking left (north) for a gap in traffic when the "wrong-way" rider hit her. The bike rider went over the hood and had minor scrapes on his arms and hands, police said. There was minor damage to the bike. The bicyclist refused medical treatment, police said.

• At 11:41 p.m. on Tuesday (June 29), police responded to an accident on Route 3A at Pond Street. Police said a 2000 Mercury Sable, driven by a 48-year-old Scituate man, was headed south on 3A. An uninvolved vehicle was ready to take a left onto Pond Street (toward the high school) when a 1998 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by an 18-year-old Cohasset man, that was headed north, was ready to take a left onto Pond Street (toward the water plant). The Mercury passed the uninvolved vehicle on the right and hit the Jeep, police said. Both occupants in the Mercury were transported to the hospital by ambulance. Both the Jeep and Mercury were towed.

As part of the follow-up investigation, police ran ID checks that revealed the 40-year-old passenger in the Mercury was wanted on a warrant out of Brighton District Court for operating after license suspension. After being treated at the hospital he was arrested on the warrant. During booking, police found he was in possession of crack cocaine. He was charged with the warrant and possession of Class B (cocaine).

Skirt incident

A Scituate woman reported to the manager of Shaw's on Sunday evening (July 4) that a man, who was behind her, lifted up her dress while she was at the meat counter. She yelled and he took off, police said. The woman contacted the store manager who called police at 8:10 p.m.

Police sent out an administrative message to area police departments to be on the lookout. Police will review the surveillance videotapes with Shaw's to try and identify the man, police said.

Minors

Four minors – three aged 20 and one 19 – were arrested and charged with being minors in possession of alcohol last Tuesday (June 28) at about 10:52 p.m. Police responded to a complaint about kids in the woods near the reservoir with alcohol. Police found the four young men, who are all from Cohasset, with beer and who had a fire going.

Three were placed in a diversion program upon payment of court fees and the fourth will return for a further court date, police said.

Flowers

A concerned caller notified police that a vehicle was parked near the tracks on Pond and Spring streets and that the two occupants, a man and woman, were picking stuff up off the ground. The call came in at about 4 p.m. on Monday (June 28).

As it turned out, the duo was not trespassing on the tracks – which is an arrestable offense – but were picking some flowers they were interested in near the crossing, police said.

Cow pursuit

There was a three-town cow pursuit last week (Tuesday, June 29). Cohasset police were notified at 9:22 a.m. by Scituate that two Norwell cows were loose on Summer Street and were headed toward Cohasset. A few hours later, a caller reported two cows on the roadway by Beechwood Street and Mill lane. The owner of the cows was on scene, corralled them and took them back to Norwell, police said.

Civil matter

The owner of a local landscaping business complained to police last week that the Weymouth man paid to repair the forks on a forklift had not returned them. The work should have taken a day and it had been two weeks, he told police. Police advised him that at this point it is a civil matter and to seek restitution in small claims court.

Stereo stolen

Police and the Golden Living Center are investigating the apparent theft of the Bose Wave stereo system valued at $550 from the room of a 92-year-old female resident. Detectives are in the process of conducting interviews, police said.

No trespass

A gym off Route 3A has refunded a member's money and taken out a no trespass order against the woman who caused a scene when she disputed a bill that she had received, police said. The gym called police to report the 18-year-old woman was yelling and out of control about disputed charges. The incident was reported at 1:25 p.m. on Thursday (July 1).

Gypsies

A group of four gypsies from Agawam, Mass. in two white pickup trucks offering asphalt services were sent on their way last week (Friday, June 2). Police said the asphalt services being offered are not registered and the business is not legitimate. Detectives told them to leave town, police said. The initial call about the group came in at 12:34 p.m. on Friday (July 2).

On the roof

Police encountered two 15-year-olds as they were descending from the roof of the Deer Hill School at about 4:25 p.m. on Saturday (July 3). Police were responding to a call from a concerned citizen about youths on top of the school throwing things at traffic. Police made the teens' parents aware; there was no damage to the building. Reports that rocks were thrown at traffic could not be confirmed.

Intoxicated

Two Cohasset men, ages 57 and 38, were taken into protective custody at about 5:17 p.m. on Saturday (July 3) at Sandy Beach after police responded to a call about the men, who said they had been drinking and should not drive. An officer spoke to the men, confirmed that they were in no condition to drive. The dog in their car was turned over to the Hingham Animal Control Officer.

Checked out

A 13-year-old girl told her parents that a man in a pickup truck appeared to be following her and made her feel uneasy in the area of Wheelwright Park. Her mother reported the incident at 11:25 a.m. on Sunday (July 4). Officers located the truck and as it turned out, the man was test-driving the vehicle for a local garage and had been going slowly. Police said the driver checked out.

Fireworks

Police confiscated consumer-grade fireworks from a 50-year-old Cohasset man after receiving complaints about the use of fireworks near Great Brewster Trail (behind Town Hall) at about 7:27 p.m. on Sunday (July 4). The fireworks were turned over to the Fire Marshal's office where they will be destroyed.

We'll make you smile.

Aquarion: 'This is not an emergency'

To all users of the Aquarion Water Co. of Massachusetts system located in Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset. This is an important notice – please translate it for anyone who does not understand English.

This is not an emergency — Aquarion Water Co. routinely monitors for the presence of drinking water contaminants to ensure the safety of the water supply. On Tuesday, June 29, we were notified that a fecal indicator (E. coli) was detected in a raw water (untreated) sample collected on Monday, June 28, from the Downing Street Well. The well was removed from service immediately as a precautionary measure. The Downing Street Well is a seasonal water source used during times of high water demand.

During normal operations, water from the Downing Street Well is pumped from the ground and it is disinfected with chlorine to kill fecal indicators, including E. coli. The chlorinated water is delivered to you. Chlorinated water samples from the water distribution system were also collected on Tuesday, June 29. None of the chlorinated samples tested positive for E. coli. Only the untreated sample from the Downing Street Well tested positive.

This is not an emergency, you do not need to boil your water or take other corrective actions.

What should you do? What does this mean? E. coli is a fecal indicator and it was detected in the raw water at the Downing Street well before treatment. Even though the well with the fecal indicator is treated and the treated water did not contain any fecal indicators, the well is no longer in use at this time. The USEPA requires us to provide you with this notice and the following information on fecal indicators. "Fecal indicators are microbes whose presence indicates that the water may be contaminated with human or animal wastes. Microbes in these wastes can cause diarrhea, cramps, nausea, headaches, or other symptoms. They may pose a special health risk for infants, young children, some of the elderly, and people with severely compromised immune systems." The microbes that can produce these symptoms were not detected in the water after it was treated. Therefore these health risks are not present. These symptoms are not caused only by organisms in drinking water. If you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor. General guidelines on ways to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from the EPA Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 800-426-4791.

Please share this information with all the other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (for example, people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail.

What is being done?

We continue to evaluate the situation including the following actions:

- Investigate the source of the raw water contamination and remove it.
- The Downing Street Well was removed from service and will not return unless and until approved by the MassDEP.

We are in contact with MassDEP who is evaluating the actions we are taking to ensure safe water is being delivered to you. If a risk of contamination exists, you will receive additional notification.

For more information, call Aquarion's Customer Service Department at 800-928-3734 or visit the website at www.aquarion.com.

Aquarion: No E-coli in treated well water

Aquarion Water Co., which serves North Cohasset, was notified by its testing lab that E-coli had been detected in the raw, untreated water in the Downing Street Water well in Hingham. Tests performed on the water after it was treated indicated there was no E-coli present in the water that went to customers.

Under recent changes to water quality rules by the Department of Environmental Protection the company is nonetheless required to notify all customers of the situation.

Harry Hibbard, Aquarion Water Co., vice president said "The well had only been in operation for 27 hours when the company learned of the test results." As a precaution Aquarion shut down the well. Samples taken at several points in the distribution system confirmed no presence of E-coli in the water after it was treated. The well will not be reopened until DEP approves it. Aquarion is presently investigating the situation and will take further actions to identify and eliminate the source of contamination.

This is not an emergency. Customers do not need to boil the water or take any further precautions.

As the results of DEP's new Groundwater Rule, the company is distributing the attached "Drinking Water Notice," which will be printed or displayed in its entirety.

For more information and updates on the situation, call Aquarion Water Co. at 800-732-9678.

Aquarion Water Co. of Massachusetts, an Aquarion subsidiary is the public water supply company for some 18,500 homes and businesses, including Millbury, Oxford, Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset.

Demand for water is high strapped water department.

Unlike neighboring towns the parts of Cohasset serviced by town water have not been subject to a summer water ban in recent years. This year, Cohasset has been helping out Aquarion Water by pumping more water into their system in an effort to meet their demand.

The Water Commission was scheduled to meet on Thursday (July 8) and Seebeck said he planned to discuss the potential for a water ban.

"Hopefully we won't get there," Seebeck said. Thanks for the extremely rainy spring, especially March, the water department went into the hottest months with the reservoir at capacity.

"If the next two weeks are like the past five days we'll probably end up in a water ban," Seebeck said, adding typically the first stage of a water ban is voluntary. "If the weather goes back to normal we may be able to weather the summer without a water ban."

Seebeck said it is the amount of water needed by water users and the rate it is needed, "there is concern with pulling so much water out in such a short period of time."

"We have been able to keep up with demand without loss of water pressure," Seebeck said.

One of the side effects of the increase demand of the water is a likely delay in the implementation of the phosphate program. The Special Town Meeting in June allocated $50,000 to begin adding the chemical phosphate to the water exiting the plant. The phosphate is designed to prevent lead from old lead pipes and joints from leaking into the system and to lessen the occurrence of brown water due to manganese and other minerals.

However, the implementation of the phosphate program requires that the Elms Meadow well field be taken offline.

"Right now, we can't afford to take Elms Meadow offline," Seebeck said. The recently revitalized well field adds about 115,000 gallon of water per day into the distribution system.

Aquarion water ban

Aquarion Water Company of Massachusetts today activated the company's Mandatory Water Restrictions Program for customers in Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset effective Tuesday, July 6, 2010. The move is caused by the continued high water demands the company is experiencing as the result the current period of hot and dry weather.

Aquarion also had to take one of their wells offline at the end of last week. Aquarion Water Company was notified yesterday by its testing lab that E-coli had been detected in the raw, untreated water in the Downing Street Water well in Hingham. Tests performed on the water after it was treated indicated there was no E-coli present in the water that went to customers.

As a precaution Aquarion shut down the well. Samples taken at several points in the distribution system confirmed no presence of E-coli in the water after it was treated. The well will not be reopened until DEP approves it. Aquarion is presently investigating the situation and will take further actions to identify and eliminate the source of contamination.

Under the water ban restrictions, outdoor watering is allowed on an odd/even basis between 6 and 9 p.m. using hand-held watering devices only. The Restrictions do not allow permanent irrigation systems or unattended sprinklers to be used. Under the odd/even water schedule, odd numbered street addresses may water on odd numbered days and even numbered addresses may water on even numbered days using hand-held hoses only between 6 and 9 p.m. Hand-held hoses allow water to be directed to the specific area of need. Irrigation systems are to be shut off immediately.

Under Aquarion's Rules and Regulations approved by the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, failure to comply with the mandatory restrictions will first result in a written warning. Subsequent violations can result in the discontinuance of water service with termination and restoration fees ranging from a minimum of $50.00 to $325.00 depending on the day of the week, time of day and holidays.

"In this phase, we are asking customers to restrict their watering to plants, vegetables and shrubbery. Please allow nature to dictate the color of your lawn." said Harry Hibbard, Aquarion Vice President of Operations. "In addition, we are asking customers to eliminate all other nonessential outdoor water use, as well as to conserve water within the home."

"Rainfall for April, May and June is down by over 52% compared to a 50-year average for the same months," Hibbard said. "In addition, the lack of rain since June 21, combined with a significant heat wave, has prompted more outside watering by customers. This has placed a significant strain on our water supply."

Under the MA DEP Water Management Act, Aquarion is only allowed to pump an average of 3.51 million gallons per day (MGD) on an annual basis. "During the summer, we have found that water usage increases about 150% or more, and most of that increase is due to outside watering through the use of irrigation systems." said Hibbard.

Aquarion recommends several ways to use water wisely inside the home to help in the water conservation effort:

- Avoid running your dishwasher and washing machine with partial loads.
- Repair all leaks.
- Turn off the water while shaving, brushing your teeth and washing your face or hands.
- Fill water jugs and refrigerate to avoid running the water to get it cold.

Cohasset beaches had near perfect water quality results

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming.

The results are in and Cohasset beaches had near perfect water quality this week. All six sampling locations and recreational swimming areas are open for the weekend.

It's a good thing, too, given the heat wave that hit the region this past week many turned to the ocean to cool off.

"We couldn't have asked for better results," Health Inspector Tara Tradd said in an e-mail announcing the results.

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed or a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five week period.

There has been only one beach closing this year. In mid-June, the sample taken from the Sailing Club (across from Bassing Beach) was 199; safe level is 100. The beach was closed temporarily until a new sample could be taken.

Most of the time Cohasset beaches are well under the bacterial limit for closing because they are on open water and benefit from regular flushing; the two exceptions being Bassing Beach and the Yacht Club because of their location in the inner harbor.

Bassing Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock beach are tested weekly during the summer. The results are posted on the Department of Public Health's website. Testing results for all sampling stations are available on the Department of Public Health website dating back to the summer of 2002.

Tradd works each summer with a group of students at the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR).

"This year we have a large CSCR group so we have divided up into three teams," Tradd said. Each team has different responsibilities and the groups will rotate to learn each part of the process.

"The students are so enthusiastic and very talented I am so happy to be working with them," Tradd said. In the first week of co-sampling, the CSCR students reported they got the exact same results as the professional lab.

At each sampling location one sample is taken in a glass bottle then split the water between two sterile cups — one goes to the state lab, G&L Laboratories in Quincy, and the other to the CSCR lab. Six locations are sampled: off the docks of the Sailing Club and the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Little Harbor, Sandy Beach and Black Rock Beach.

At each site the temperature of the water is taken as well as the sample. Anything out of the ordinary like birds, jellyfish, boats, swimmers and seaweed are noted as they may or may not impact the results.

A heavy rainfall — and the first flush of stormwater that comes with it — impacts water quality especially in the inner harbor. As a precaution, after a half-inch of rain the harbor/Bassing Beach is automatically closed for swimming.

In an effort to improve communication about beach closures the Board of Health will be using a flag system as well as updating the office's voicemail with the results of the water testing each Wednesday afternoon.

A yellow flag flown in the harbor and a red flag with a crossed out swimmer will be posted at Sandy Beach will indicate no swimming.

The most common health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing water.

For more information on beach closures, please contact the board of health at (781) 383-4116.

Results indicate the number of colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters (cfu/100mL).

Stormwater committee presents annual survey

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Each year going forward the Stormwater Advisory Committee is charged with conducting an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset. This year they presented the results from the first annual inventory.

For the past six months the Stormwater Advisory Committee, a Selectmen-appointed committee of three, has been finding its footing and getting up to speed. One of their key roles is to serve as a forum and clearinghouse of sorts for stormwater issues.

Various stormwater/flooding hot spots, like Treat's Pond/Atlantic Avenue and Jacob's Meadow, have been controversially debated over the past few years. But other smaller flooding issues might have received less attention.

To that end, the stormwater committee conducted two public forums on flooding issues.

Neighbors of Treat's Pond were the largest group in attendance. But, representatives from smaller flood areas on Beach Street, Route 3A near JJ's, Sohier Street between Ripley and North Main, and Beechwood near the Aaron River Reservoir also came forward.

At the stormwater committee's recent presentation to the Board of Selectmen committee chair Noel Collins said these smaller flooding areas were advised to contact the Conservation Commission and other town boards to gather information.

"We wanted the residents to take preliminary steps to perhaps resolve the problems themselves," Collins said. The residents were invited back to speak to the stormwater committee on their progress. "We want to hear back from them within the year."

The development of a town-wide map of flooding issues, their frequency, the source, and the severity will be a tool to help identify the biggest areas of concern and therefore, focus. The flood survey is the first of its kind in Cohasset, but going forward will be updated annually.

In addition to the annual flood prone inventory, the charge of the committee, in short, is to serve as an advisory committee devoted to stormwater issues from public education to working with affected residents to recommending capital expenditures for stormwater remediation to reviewing reports for the EPA.

The committee said they planned to work on the public education piece as their next focus.

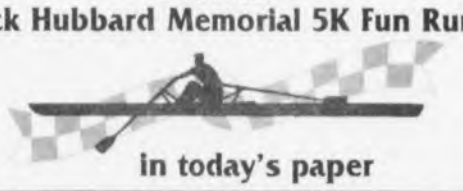
Stormwater bylaw

Stormwater has been a major focus for the town for the past few years. Living on the coast brings certain inevitable flooding.

The town has taken steps to manage and limit stormwater runoff generated by new development and construction. The stormwater management bylaw was passed by Town Meeting in 2008. The Conservation Commission, not the Stormwater Advisory Committee, oversees the stormwater bylaw.

The stormwater bylaw has been in use for over a year and next Monday, July 7, the Conservation Commission will present a progress report to the Board of Selectmen.

Choral Evensong Service at St. Stephen's Church



The Tour Choir from Christ Church Cathedral, Lexington, Ken., will present a Choral Evensong Service at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset at 4:30 p.m., on Sunday, July 11. Music included in the service will include the Service in F by Peter Aston; the Precis and Responses are by American organist and composer Gerre Hancock; two anthems, "Hail, Gladdening Light" by Charles Wood and "A Hymn to St. Cecilia" by Herbert Howells. The choir is directed by Erich Balling, canon musician for Christ Church Cathedral, and the organist is John Linker.

Evensong has a long tradition in the Episcopal Church, dating back to the mid-16th century, when the service was performed weekly in most parishes throughout England. Following the American Revolution, as the American Episcopal Church took root, the service was imported to this country and is regularly presented in many churches to this day. The service, consisting of lessons, prayers and psalms, highlights music.

The Tour Choir from Christ Church Cathedral is one of the premiere choirs in the United States. Consisting of men, boys and girls, the choir tours the world presenting services and concerts. This choir is perfectly suited to the Service of Choral Evensong. St. Stephen's Church, designed by Boston architect Ralph Adams Cram, is the perfect setting for this type of presentation. All are welcome.

BOAT BUILDING

The Cohasset Maritime Institute has launched a boat-building program that breathes new life into the "Hagerty" boat house, Cohasset's historic and best-known home to wooden boat building. Under the instruction of shipwright Richard Wilmore, Cohasset students (and adults) can now learn the skills and craftsmanship of building a traditional plank-on-frame wooden boat. There are two student sessions, July 12- 30 and Aug. 9 - 20. Each session is divided into a morning section from 8:30-11:30 and an afternoon section from 12:30 – 3:30. Students select either two mornings per week, or two afternoons per week with maximum enrollment of 6 students per morning or per afternoon. In the spirit of community, adults and students are welcome during all sessions. However, Friday's are billed as "skip work and learn boat building." Additionally, the weeks of Aug. 2 - 6 and Aug. 30 – Sept. 3 are reserved primarily for adults. Students must be entering grade 8 to be enrolled in the program. Younger students may enroll, but they must be accompanied at all times by a parent or guardian (21 yrs or older) participating in the program. There are no pre-requisites in terms of skills, experience, or tools needed. For more information or to sign up online, go to www.rowcmi.com

ALL IN ALIGN

There are three main elements in a wheel alignment, beginning with "toe," the angle of the wheels when seen from above. Take a look at your own feet. If your toes are further apart than your heels, they are "toe out." "Toe in" exhibits a "pigeon-toed" effect. The same goes with tires and wheels. "Caster," the second element of an alignment, is measured in degrees and is the angle between 0 degrees vertical and the inclination of the strut when seen from the side. If the top of the wheel tilts outward, the camber is positive; an inward tilt is negative. Finally, "camber" is the angle that the wheels make when viewed from the front or rear.

When's the last time you got your tires aligned? If you can't remember, then you need to call ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT today. Our ASE Master-certified technicians will be happy to make sure that your car's toe, caster and camber are all plumb and true. That will lead to a better and safer driving experience for you and your family. We can provide the preventative maintenance that can catch small and inexpensive problems before they become big and expensive problems. Call 781-925-3200 today. We are located at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

Hint: Having the wheels of your vehicle properly aligned on a yearly basis helps ensure tire-tread longevity and even wear.

Ospreys making local comeback

Team bands 24 chicks this year

By John Galluzzo
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

COURTESY PHOTOS

The ospreys of the South Shore are having a banner breeding year, one that will greatly contribute to the ongoing recovery of the species in the region.

Each year the story repeats itself. The first ospreys appear on the South Shore in late March and by mid-April they're already contemplating the year's task. They meet (they mate for life) after separate vacations in the south, build or repair a nest on a high or low platform, and prepare to raise their next brood of young. Barring an untimely death, this process may continue for 20 years for mated pairs.

Down below, their human supporters get to work in concert with them. In fact, in many cases, they start even earlier, while the birds are in Texas, or Cuba or Florida. They repair leaning poles, replace rotting nest platforms, even march out onto a frozen salt marsh to erect male perch posts, where dad sits while mom is on the nest. Then, the note taking begins: the first arrival, the first captured fish, the first sign that mom is on eggs, the first peek of a tiny osprey head over the edge of the platform. Then, the big day arrives.

That big day has been taking place for more than 20 years now on the South Shore. Joe Grady, the Duxbury Conservation agent, helped erect the first pole in the region to try to bring back the vanishing osprey in the 1980s. David Clapp, then director of Mass Audubon's South Shore Sanctuaries, joined him in the study and protection of the birds. Norman Smith, the longtime director of Mass Audubon's Blue Hills Trailside Museum in Milton, joined the crew with his raptor banding license. Together on the big day, usually around July 1, they set out to band osprey chicks with hopes that someday the birds will be caught again, and that a little piece of the osprey life history will be revealed. Since big day number one, Norman Smith has banded 220 young ospreys on the South Shore.

Yet, while the predictability of the natural cycles makes for a set routine, the birds themselves are sure to create variability in the emotional lives of the banding team.

Take, for instance, 2009. Due to the heavy rains of June and July last year, the lives of the birds were thrown off. Ospreys, expert fishermen, could not see well enough to the waters below to espy fish, and thus, their offspring suffered dearly. The Hull pair, visible from the George Washington Boulevard Bridge on the town line, did not even produce a chick, for the first time in nearly two decades. One pair in Duxbury resorted to feeding their young mussels. The reliable pair at Indian Point in Bare Cove Park was late. When the banding team arrived, expecting to find two- to three-week-old chicks, they instead found an egg, still warm, still being incubated. The team returned a month later to band the healthy chick, unsure of its potential for survival, as the adults would soon be on their way south.

The plan for 2010 was simple. Osprey chicks were being reported from Houghs Neck and Marina Bay in Quincy, the Substation Pole off Commercial Street in Weymouth and at Great Esker Park. Day two would consist of visitations to poles in Marshfield, Duxbury and Plymouth.

The team (sans David Clapp, now retired) set out on June 30, and immediately ran into a new experience, even after 20 years of such adventures. One member of the team, a young man helping to carry a ladder across the salt marsh at Rock Island Cove in Quincy, sank hips deep into mud, having to eventually uncurl his toes from his boots and leave his footwear behind to be extracted.

The results, though, were fabulous. As Norman Smith climbed the ladder and scanned the nest, to the dismay and even rage of the mother, he announced, "Three chicks, and they all look healthy! Three weeks old." He brought one down to show Linda DeMaggio, the local monitor. They were her kids just as much as anyone else's, as she'd watch them grow from afar. Marina Bay produced the same tally: three birds, three weeks old, all healthy.

Osprey chicks were being reported from Houghs Neck and Marina Bay in Quincy, the Substation Pole off Commercial Street in Weymouth and at Great Esker Park.

The meeting with Mike Doyle at Great Esker Park brought mixed news. There were chicks at the park, at the pole near the Reversing Falls, but the pair at Bare Cove Park, across the Back River, had not produced any young this year. "I checked the nest with a mirror," he said, somewhat sheepishly. "I read somewhere that was a good way to look at the nest without climbing up there." Great Esker, though, revealed three chicks, all well fed and strong. The Substation Pole brought three more and a nice surprise for the banders. The mom was banded. The excitement over a possible future recapture and band examination floated through the team's minds. Her life story was there, dangling loosely around her left leg.

Day two brought more success, 12 more chicks on six more poles. A visit to Saquish, at the extreme end of Duxbury Beach, produced a mystery, one quickly solved by Norman Smith. He dropped down from the ladder holding a whitish wing. "Second year herring gull, on eggs, attacked by a great horned owl. The head and wings were separated from the body, and the chest cavity was eaten clean out."

In all, the team banded 24 chicks in 2010, moving the total number from 220 to 244 in one season. By all accounts, the ospreys of the South Shore are having a banner breeding year, one that will greatly contribute to the ongoing recovery of the species in the region. Once thought lost to PCBs, which caused their eggs to be so fragile from lack of calcium that they crumbled beneath their mother's touch, the osprey is going strong. By August, the adults will fly south, and a month later, so, too, will their young. How they will know where to go, no one knows.

Then, in late March 2011, the process will begin again.

John Galluzzo is the adult education and citizen science coordinator for Mass Audubon's South Shore Sanctuaries and an occasional contributor to the Cohasset Mariner.

As Norman Smith climbed the ladder and scanned the nest, to the dismay and even rage of the mother, he announced, "Three chicks, and they all look healthy! Three weeks old."

A silver lining

Now that summer is truly upon us with its accompanying 90-plus-degree heat and humidity, some may already be hankering for those endless wet, rainy, cold spring days.

More than a few weary folk climbed the steps to the Cohasset Mariner office on South Street in Hingham this week looking a bit overheated and fatigued from the sultry days. They paused to chat a while in our air-conditioned environs before venturing back out into hot Hingham Square.

One thing we've observed from this extended stretch of unfriendly hot weather — preceded by a long winter and wet spring — is meteorological matters bring us staid New Englanders out of our collective shell.

Noted for being stuffy and rather cold in nature, with little small talk, weather conditions get us interacting with one another at the supermarket, gas station or just about anywhere around town.

Complaining about the weather is in fact a passion that we New Englanders all seem to share. Take a moment and think about how often you've grumbled about cold, dark and depressing days in the winter to anyone that would listen.

There was even some humor in our collective misery. In the depths of winter, we hear weather reports about how much worse temperatures and snow levels were in International Falls, Minn.; and in rainy springs, we overhear remarks such as, "If I wanted to live like this, I'd move to Seattle."

Here in New England we have four seasons, although Mother Nature does trick us from time to time and forgets to give us one of them. Last year, with such a cold rainy June, we were worried summer was on her list of omissions.

Things could always be worse. There are floods in some states, hurricanes brewing out at sea – and stifling heat in many places noted for great weather nearly all of the time. Here, at least, we have variety and never find weather boring.

As Mark Twain said, "There is a sumptuous variety about the New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration-and regret. The weather is always doing something there; always attending strictly to business; always getting up new designs and trying them on people to see how they will go. But it gets through more business in Spring than in any other season. In the Spring I have counted one hundred and thirty-six different kinds of weather inside of twenty-four hours."

So what's left for us to do? Like good New Englanders, when our weather gets up to its old tricks, we continue to grin and bear it (and moan about it to whomever we can).

What do people talk about in places like San Diego where the weather is practically perfect?

Celebrating 50 years of summer sailing

The Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) is hosting its annual summer launch party and 50th anniversary celebration Saturday, July 10. The theme of this year's party harkens back to the beach party movies of Elvis, Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello. All adult family members and friends of the CSC are cordially invited to attend — guests don't need to be active members, and past members are especially welcome. The club is extending a special free invitation to all the ex-Commodores.

The launch party is the CSC's main social and fundraising event, and features a silent auction to benefit the club. Donations for auction items are actively sought. In past years, these have ranged from handmade jewelry, gift certificates, tickets to Celtics, Patriots, and Red Sox games; golf outings; gourmet dinners; child-sitting services; yard care and lawn-mowing services; desserts; sunset cruises; sailing lessons; boat services; paintings and vacation home loans. Jim Porter is the chief donation wrangler and auctioneer. Contact him at jporter@bluefishagency.net or at 781-383-2029.

The festivities, which take place at the clubhouse, begin at 6 p.m. and will carry on to 11 p.m. The dinner spread, which centers around a lobster and barbecue chicken feast, will be served between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $50 per person, payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club, and are available by contacting Claudia McKeon at mckeonfam@comcast.net or at 781-383-6125.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Economic Development Committee, July 14, 7:15 p.m.
School Committee, July 14, 7 p.m. at the high school
Trioka, July 15, 7 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Showcase for our town

TO THE EDITOR:

As Cohasset residents and participants in this year's Cohasset Triathlon, we want to express our gratitude to Bill Burnett and his team for putting on such a well-run event. It has become not only a very successful charity fundraiser for JDRF and a signature event for area triathletes, but also a showcase for our town!

The face in the crowd

COMMENTARY

JANET WEIDMANN

Have you ever wished you had focused more clearly on the face in the crowd, the someone who anonymously helped out in a tight situation "saving the day" so to speak. If I could only have had the presence of mind to ask this someone his name so later I could find him on Facebook or the Internet simply to express my profound gratitude.

Bill Burnett welcomed the multitudes and announced that no one would be permitted back into the transition area after the morning announcements ended.

Last minute photos and swapping "good lucks" were exchanged for wetsuits, bathing caps in predetermined "wave colors" and goggles as we crowded the Cohasset beach. The first wave of elite swimmers was at the starting gate. The masses cheered them along as they took off running into the placid surf at the sound of the "Start." It would be another 45 minutes before the last wave left the starting gate. It was a blue sky, 70 degree, calm seas, banner day for us!

I was in the eighth wave — the pink caps for women and men over-50 age group. We all stood waiting in giddy anticipation for our turn at the starting gate. A year in training for this challenge was now only moments away. My siblings and I come from as far away as Texas, Georgia and Tennessee, and as close as Cohasset, to participate.

My brother, Tom, a seasoned Ironman at 60 years old, taught his three sisters how important it was to practice and prepare to the smallest of details. It wasn't until I reached above my pink cap at the start that to my utter dismay, my goggles were missing! Looking in my direction, my brother said simply "deal with it."

Of course dealing with it to me, meant a last ditch plea to the bystanders for a spare set of swim goggles. So, like any semi-rational middle age woman in a state of panic, I yelled out and was rewarded with a quick reply that there was a spare set of goggles up the beach in a bag where a wetsuit was packed away. Ten seconds remained before the start. I remember seeing someone race up the beach toward the bag. Two seconds – Start. Everyone raced into the water and I slowly trotted behind the mob of anxious contestants hoping for a miracle. Dealing with it I was now knee deep in frigid water when a shout peeled through the crowd behind me "goggles!"

Turning around I spied a bystander in a blue shirt holding out a pair of goggles from behind the viewing fence. Knowing I would be better off with them, yet suffering a delay, I ran back up the sandy beach grabbing the gift and saying my quickest yet sincere "thanks!"

Finishing the race and recounting all of our stories it became apparent that I owed much to this "face in the crowd: this anonymous person. If he is out there in range of this letter please let him know that because of his kindness and quick thinking I was not only able to swim under the best conditions but also go on to finish the triathlon placing first in my age group (56 to 60 years).

I dedicate this win to you – the face in the crowd

Storm-drain manhole rebuilt on sweltering day

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

A Couple of Hours in the Life of the DPW — Wednesday of this week while we were driving to Town Hall, we noticed the DPW hard at work on Ripley Road. (Yes, it was one of those sweltering days!) The project was the reconstruction of a storm drain manhole in Ripley Road that had partially collapsed, opposite Constitution Park. So, what's a storm drain manhole? Any time two or more pipes come together, from different underground directions, a place must be created where each of the pipes can be examined and serviced, if need be. That place is a manhole, which is an underground chamber, or structure, with a cover that is robust enough to carry the street traffic.

In this specific case, there is a very heavy cast iron ring that sits on top of the structure and holds the manhole cover. In this manhole, the cast iron ring was embedded in a ring of concrete that actually provided the support for the ring, since the supporting structure had partially given way. You can see that replacing the supporting structure of the manhole could avert a catastrophic collapse of the whole shebang. The included photo shows the heavy cast iron ring (to the right) that holds the cover (shown toward the top).

The manhole structure can be constructed of a variety of materials. For new manholes, they are generally constructed of concrete. The manhole structures are usually "precast" concrete, which means they are made in a factory and are brought to the job site in one piece ready to be lowered into the ground and placed into their final position. The pipes must then be fit to the structure. Only the cast iron ring and lid need to be added to make the assembly complete.

In the case of the manhole being rebuilt on Ripley Road, the DPW wanted to reuse as much of the old structure as possible, so it was repaired with solid concrete block. The old blocks that had deteriorated were removed down to solid material. The new concrete blocks are a special arc-shaped block that can be easily laid to form the necessary round structure of the manhole. They are solid, rather than hollow, so that they can safely carry the required traffic loads of the roadway. Please see the accompanying photo of these curved blocks stacked in a DPW front-end loader.

Once completed, the entire rebuild will be absolutely unnoticeable. The photo shows the manhole after it was put back together while it was waiting for asphalt patching. Another good job!

Little Harbor Project Paving — Thursday of this week we are scheduled to have a project meeting with the powers to be about the continuance of Little Harbor paving. Unfortunately, this meeting will be after our deadline for this article, so we'll let you know more later on. But, here's what we do know. The next road on our list to be paved is Jerusalem Road. However, Jerusalem will be paved is several sections, not all at once. Depending on the section, different paving techniques will be used. Some will be cold planed, like Beach Street. Other parts may be edge ground. This means that only the edge of the road will be ground down, not the whole road with. Some areas will be given a leveling coat of asphalt and then a topcoat. Others will be top coated, only. The meeting this week should get most of these details finalized.

Once the preparation and paving methods have been determined, we will be able to get going. However, the section of Jerusalem at Marsh's Corner (the Jerusalem and Atlantic intersection) will be the last part of Jerusalem to be paved. The reason is that a special storm water treatment system has been designed for this area to solve a long-standing drainage problem and to clean up that storm water before it is discharged to Little Harbor. Always looking for ways to save money, the Town has applied for a 319 Grant from the Commonwealth. 319 Grants are for the remediation of non-point source pollution. (Non-point source pollution is a fancy way of saying pollution that does not come from a specific source, but a general source like a roadway surface.) At the present time, we are waiting to see if we are awarded this grant and whether it can be used for this specific purpose. If this is approved by the DEP we will be able to solve our storm water problem in a very environmentally friendly way at low cost to the Town. We consider that worth waiting for. So, the paving will wait until this is resolved.

We have mentioned in the past that Atlantic Avenue will be paved this fall. It is fortuitous that we did decide to wait for this road since there are several construction projects that have cropped up recently which affect the road. First, there are two roadside catch basins that need to be rebuilt at the edge of Atlantic Avenue and a storm drain outfall pipe that needs to be replaced across Atlantic Avenue. It is clearly best to get this done prior to paving. Additionally, this week we found that there is also a water main that needs to be reconstructed from Atlantic Avenue up Meadow Lane. (Meadow Lane is scheduled to be paved in conjunction with Atlantic Avenue.) Again, this construction needs to be completed before paving. We'll keep you up to date as work progresses.

HEALTH NOTES

Sun safety suggestions

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

More than 2 million skin cancers are diagnosed each year in the United States. That's more than cancers of the prostate, breast, lung, colon, uterus, ovaries, and pancreas combined.

Perfect, crisp clear days are traps for seductive skin damage by the sun. It's time to begin to be careful and take appropriate precautions. On Tuesday, July 13, Cohasset Board of Health, together with the Melanoma Education Foundation, will host a Skin Awareness Program at Sandy Beach. We'll be giving out helpful information as well as sunscreen packets.

Spending time outdoors is part of a healthy, active life. But whether you enjoy tennis, hiking, gardening or running, take some precautions when you're out in the sun.

More than 2 million skin cancers are diagnosed each year in the United States. That's more than cancers of the prostate, breast, lung, colon, uterus, ovaries, and pancreas combined.

Most skin cancers are caused by too much exposure to ultraviolet rays. Much of this exposure comes from the sun, but some may come from manmade sources, such as tanning beds.

Follow these practical steps to stay sun-safe – they provide the best protection when used together.

Cover up

When you are out in the sun, wear clothing to protect as much skin as possible. The ideal sun-protective fabrics are lightweight, comfortable and protect against exposure even when wet.

Use a sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) of 15 or higher

Experts recommend products with a sun protection factor of at least 15. The SPF number represents the level of protection against UVB rays provided by the sunscreen – a higher number means more protection. Be sure to read the label before you buy.

Use 1 ounce of sunscreen, a "palm-full," to cover your arms, legs, neck and face. For best results, reapply every 2 hours – even more if you are swimming or sweating. Don't forget to protect your lips by using a lip balm with SPF. And don't skip it just because it looks overcast outside: UV light still comes through on hazy days.

Wear a hat

A hat with at least a 2- to 3-inch brim all around is ideal to protect your neck, ears, eyes, forehead, nose and scalp.

Wear sunglasses that block UV rays

Limit direct sun exposure during midday

UV rays are most intense during the middle of the day, usually between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. It's best to plan your outdoor activities outside that time frame, if possible.

Avoid tanning beds and sunlamps

Tanning lamps give out UVA and frequently UVB rays, as well. Both UVA and UVB rays can cause serious long-term skin damage and both contribute to skin cancer. Our advice: skip the tanning bed and try a bronzing lotion or self-tanning cream.

For more information, contact the Board of Health or Mary Goodwin, the Town Nurse at Town Hall or call 781-383-4116 or 781-383-2210.

Update on land for new Senior Center

A piece of land needs to be transferred from water commission control to general municipal purposes under the Board of Selectmen in order to construct the senior center on the targeted optimal site. To do so, state legislators need to approve the transfer because the land was originally purchased for water supply purposes.

In 1950, the water department purchased the land for water supply purposes. Until the MBTA commuter rail was restored, the land has a working well field used for public drinking water supply. The water is still used to in the Little League irrigation system.

The legislation enables an even swap of land between the water commission and the town. Town Meeting gave selectmen to make this swap at Annual Town Meeting 2009.

Selectmen voted unanimously in support of the amendment. Legislators were expected to vote on the amendment before the end of the legislative session on June 30.

Glenn Pratt, who is on the senior center ad-hoc committee, gave a brief update on the project recently. Over the past few months, soil analysis, perc tests and other engineering considerations have been completed. The project does have a feasible site for a septic system so it does not need to tie into town sewer.

Willing to work with Hull schools

The Hull Public Schools is looking for help. To that end, the Hull Superintendent of Schools and chairman of the Hull School Committee reached out through a letter to see if the Cohasset schools would be willing to discuss regionalization or consolidation of services.

The short answer from a recent School Committee meeting is yes.

In a phone interview, Cohasset School Committee Chairwoman Helene Lieb said the committee was willing to discuss the second part of the request, consolidation of services. "We're not talking about a physical regionalization of our school district," Lieb said.

However, other service areas, like transportation, athletics and food services could be discussed. In fact, in some ways, Cohasset is already working with Hull schools to provide student opportunities that otherwise would not be available. Cohasset and Hull share cross-country, track and field and sailing teams. In another consolidation effort, Cohasset and Hingham share a food services director.

"We left it very broad and we're going to talk and figure out where consolidation would be mutually beneficial," Lieb said.

There will be a to-be-determined summit meeting between the Hull and Cohasset school committees at some point.

Dispatch center moving ahead

Hingham call center could open in fall

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In both Cohasset and Norwell concerns were raised by the dispatchers and police union over the overnight manning of the police station, potential loss of jobs, and diminishing of the personal touch and local knowledge the town dispatchers bring to the job.

The four-town regional dispatch center could become a reality, perhaps, by later this year.

On Tuesday, the state legislature gave final approval to a bill creating a new regional dispatch center for Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, and Norwell.

Now, the towns can move forward with the building of the call center, which will be based in Hingham.

The special legislation, required to set up such an independent agency, allows the four towns to merge their 911 call centers, saving the communities a combined estimated $500,000 in its first year through reduced personnel and operational costs.

Senator Robert Hedlund and Representative Garrett Bradley were instrumental in the passage of the bill, which now awaits the signature of Gov. Deval Patrick. The center, which will be headquartered in Hingham, is expected to open later this year, possibly as early as October.

"As tax dollars continue to be stretched, it is more imperative than ever that communities consider regionalizing services," Hedlund said. "The legislative process can sometimes be slow, so I thank my colleagues for quickly moving this important bill through so that the towns can start to realize much-needed savings sooner."

Bradley also commented favorably on the passage of the bill. "I am thankful that we were able to pass this legislation to regionalize our public safety dispatch centers for the four towns," he said. "As costs continue to rise for our cities and towns, this legislation will save the taxpayers money and improve their public safety."

In a press release, both Hedlund and Bradley recognized the work done by the late Rep. Robert Nyman, D-Hanover, who co-sponsored the legislation in February and was instrumental in advocating for its passage.

The special legislation creates a new entity and allows the towns to begin negotiation on staffing. Town Manager Bill Griffin said a blended seniority list from all four towns would be created to determine staffing for the regional center.

Griffin said the center is moving forward on several fronts. The construction is being put out to bid and the design is being finalized.

As of April, all four towns signed the inter-municipal agreement for the regional dispatch center. It was the culmination of over two years of meetings between the towns' fire and police chiefs as well as the town managers/administrators. Cohasset signed the agreement in December.

The signing of the agreement did not come without controversy. In both Cohasset and Norwell concerns were raised by the dispatchers and police union over the overnight manning of the police station, potential loss of jobs, and diminishing of the personal touch and local knowledge the town dispatchers bring to the job.

The overnight manning of the police station is still under discussion and several different solutions are being discussed and evaluated by Police Chief Mark DeLuca, Griffin said. Whatever solution is determined could affect the potential savings the regional center will create.

The town currently spends about $250,000 for dispatch staffing and Cohasset's estimated share of the regional center staffing is in the range of $140,000 to $160,000, Griffin said.

The cost for Cohasset are expected to be between 25 to 35 percent less than what the town is paying now for dispatch services, Griffin has said. The new dispatch facility will be just one of 15 regional emergency response centers of its kind in Massachusetts. The towns are taking advantage of a state grant program designed to encourage these types of regionalization efforts.

Cohasset public safety leaders and town manager have said the regional dispatch center would save the towns money, find efficiency, and provide a better service to the citizens of the four towns.

With the opening of the regional dispatch center, which is expected to be sometime in late 2010, fire and police dispatch will no longer come from the Cohasset Police Station. All 9-1-1 and emergency calls from all four towns will be fielded at through the regional emergency communications center (RECC).

State grants, which total more than $3 million, will pay for the capital costs to design and build the center. Because the state favors a regional approach more annual grants, nearly quadruple what the towns receive now, are expected as well.

Erring on the conservative side, Griffin did not include any potential savings from the regionalization effort in the fiscal 2011 budget, which began last week.

Ripley Road project back again

Hearing slated for July 20

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The 40-B development at 25 Ripley Road will be back in front of the Zoning Board of Appeals later this month.

Almost a year ago the zoning board denied the project application, which proposed transforming the single-family home on the corner of Ripley and Sohier streets into seven condominium units. Two of the units would be deemed affordable by state standards.

Cohasset resident, property owner and developer, Will Charles, appealed the denial of the application to the state. The Housing Appeals Committee has remanded the application back to the Zoning Board with some very specific requirements for more information.

The public hearing on the project is scheduled for Tuesday, July 20 at 7:30p.m.

While the bones of the project remains the same some new and revised information and plans have been submitted, including a set of revised site plans, a list of the 20 waivers from local zoning being requested and a list of an expanded development team.

"We provided all the items required and we should be ready to go," Charles said in phone interview. "I think we will see Ripley Road come to fruition."

Charles said this project has been talked about for more than three years – ever since the appointed Housing Partnership Committee drew up plans for a similar project.

"From day one I've said this is not a Will Charles project; it's a town of Cohasset project," Charles said, adding the building is suited for a residential condominium development because of its central location in town and many rooms.

The Housing Partnership Committee abandoned their plans to convert the single-family house into affordable housing when they faced neighborhood opposition.

"We provided all the items required and we should be ready to go. I think we will see Ripley Road come to fruition."

— Will Charles, developer

The Ripley Road/Sohier Street neighborhood has long-held objections and concerns regarding the project. Its density would increase noise, parking and traffic issues. Some questioned the financial viability of the project as well.

Zoning board chairman Woody Chittick said the application was discussed in brief at the ZBA's meeting Tuesday night to ensure all members of the board could be present. Town Counsel will be in attendance to advise the board throughout the hearing, Chittick said.

The project is seeking a comprehensive permit under Chapter 40-B, the state's affordable housing law. Under Chapter 40B, the zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards, like Cohasset, are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

In July 2009, the Zoning Board, after making several requests for additional information, voted to deny the project. The reasoning was driven primarily by the last of evidence and complete plans presented during the public hearing process, which spanned several months.

Chittick said he was not surprised the project was remanded, especially with the stipulation for the additional information.

"The Zoning Board needs that information to re-consider the project," Chittick said. "The project was denied on a lack of information."

At last year's hearings, the Zoning Board gave the applicant specific items they wanted to see including a updated comprehensive site plan, a parking plan, a landscape plan, a lighting plan, a septic determination from the Board of Health, to name a few. None of the requested items were received.

The project has been in the news since 2007 when the Housing Partnership, a Selectmen appointed committee, proposed a similar affordable housing project on the same property. A year later, Charles took ownership of 25 Ripley Road and revived the plans for condominiums.

The current 2-1/2-story, 2,200-square-foot building has 13 bedrooms and seven bathrooms. It is operating on a septic system.

Residential brush to be accepted July 10

The department of public works will be accepting residential brush at the DPW parking area from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Saturday, July 10. Trees more than five inches in diameter, stumps, firewood, briars or weeds will not be accepted. This is for residential brush only, contractors not allowed.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local senators on five roll calls from the week of June 28-July 2. All of the Senate roll calls are on proposed amendments to the bill that would allow the construction of three casinos in Massachusetts. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

BRING CASINOS TO BAY STATE (S 2495)

Senate 25-15, approved a complicated and lengthy 123-page bill that would authorize three resort casinos to be built in Massachusetts.

Supporters said that this would create up to 15,000 new permanent jobs, 9,000 construction jobs and generate up to $600 million in annual tax revenue. They noted that Massachusetts is losing billions of dollars from its citizens who now go to neighboring states to gamble.

Opponents said casinos attract mostly low-income people who cannot afford to gamble and leads to crime, gambling addictions, higher divorce rates and domestic violence. They questioned and debated supporters' tax revenue and job-creation figures and claimed that they are bogus and inflated.

The House has already approved a different version of the measure. A conference committee will hammer out a compromise draft.

N

Senate 27-10, approved a Democratic leadership-sponsored amendment that would replace a proposal to reduce the income tax from 6.25 percent back to the 2009 level of 5 percent with an amendment to study the proposal.

The study amendment would require the Patrick administration to study and report on the changing competitive profile of Massachusetts including modifications in taxation here and in other states; a comparison of the level of state support for public secondary and higher education; workforce development between the Bay State and other states and a comparison of the level of student achievement between Massachusetts and other states.

Some supporters of the study said that the state cannot afford the loss of revenue and predicted that this tax cut would result in reductions to local aid, education, health care and human service programs. Others argued that they were open to a tax cut but not without first studying its impact.

Opponents of the study said that this increased sales tax is hurting consumers and retail operations, especially those on the state's borders. They argued that you can't tax your way out of a recession and urged the state to live within its means.

The roll call vote is on the amendment to study the tax cuts. (A "Yes" vote is for studying the tax cut. A "No" vote is against the study.)

N

Senate 13-24, rejected a proposal to eliminate the 6.25 percent sales tax on alcohol. The tax was approved and signed into law in July 2009 and imposes the tax on liquor, wine and beer purchased at package stores.

Some supporters of the tax said that the state cannot afford this revenue loss which would lead to cuts in important programs. Others argued that they would be amenable to eliminating the tax but wanted to first study its impact.

Opponents said that this new sales tax is unnecessary on a product that is already heavily taxed. They argued that the tax is hurting small mom-and-pop stores and stores in cities and towns on the border of other states with a smaller tax.

(A "Yes" vote is for repealing the tax. A "No" vote is against repealing it.)

Y

GIVE CASINO REVENUE TO SENIORS OR ALL PROPERTY TAXPAYERS (S 2495)

Senate 33-5, approved an amendment that would replace a proposal to give all the money from the state's share of gambling revenue from casinos to all property taxpayers across the Bay State. The annual estimated revenue from casinos is some $300 million.

The new amendment would instead give 1 percent of the state's casino revenue as grants to local cities and towns for local senior citizen property tax relief programs.

Supporters of giving 1 percent ($3 million) to seniors said that the property tax burden is hurting older property owners and noted that a large number of casino revenue comes from and should go back to seniors who enjoy gambling. They argued that the original proposal to give 100 percent of the revenue to all property taxpayers would not leave any money to be used for mitigation funds to compensate for the new infrastructure, social and other problems that would be created by casinos.

Opponents said that giving 1 percent to senior citizens is not nearly as generous and helpful as giving some $300 million to all property taxpayers.

(A "Yes" vote is for giving 1 an estimated $3 million of the revenue to senior property taxpayers. A "No" vote is against giving it to seniors and favors giving an estimated $300 million to all property taxpayers.)

N

REQUIRE CASINOS TO PAY FOR TREATMENT OF PATHOLOGICAL GAMBLERS (H 2496)

Senate 9-30, rejected an amendment that would require insurance companies to cover mental health treatment of "pathological gamblers." Casinos would be forced to reimburse the health insurance companies.

"Pathological gamblers" would include anyone with "persistent and recurrent maladaptive gambling behavior that disrupts personal, family or vocational pursuits."

Amendment supporters said that these gamblers should be covered for treatment just like others with mental health disorders. They argued that casinos are the cause of these gamblers' pathological behavior and should be responsible and pay the costs of treatment.

Amendment opponents said that it would be unfair to require casinos to pay the costs. They argued that this would set a dangerous precedent and lead to a slippery slope.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment requiring insurance companies to offer coverage and for casinos to reimburse the insurance companies. A "No" vote is against both requirements.)

Musical talent abounds at Deer Hill

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

These three well-executed and complex pieces were played by a group of students who started learning how to play their instruments about nine months ago.

On Thursday June 10, the Deer Hill School hosted its Deer Hill School Spring Concert. The showcased the students included in the 3rd Grade chorus, the 4th and 5th grade chorus, the 4th Grade band, and the 5th Grade band.

The concert opened with the 4th Grade band, which started the concert in the traditional style with a march. Go For The Gold March was written for the Olympics, and was characterized by the strong tones and swift tempo. The middle phrase was set to a slower tempo and legato tones, before returning to the original theme with the saxophones and trumpets carrying the melody. There was a well-executed drum soli at the end. The second piece, Kingsridge, is a familiar classic to anyone who has played in the Deer Hill band. It began with the melody in the brass, supported by the reeds. The clarinets took control of the melody, then the saxophones were layered on top, followed by the brass sections. The final section of the piece was a call-and-response between the brass and reeds. The final song in the 4th Grade band's set was Bring On Da Band. The beginning section is the melody being traded off between the drums and the rest of the band, followed by an impressive drum soli. The hard-bop driving rhythm was a major crowd pleaser, and brought the 4th grade band's portion of the concert to a satisfying end.

These three well-executed and complex pieces were played by a group of students who started learning how to play their instruments about nine months ago. The students already know enough notes to play a complex piece, know how to count music, stay in unison, and many other skills that make or break a band performance. The work that Mr. Biagini puts into teaching these students is staggering and the result is extraordinary.

The next group to perform was the Deer Hill (4th and 5th Grade) chorus, directed by Mr. Mafera. This afterschool choral group has been rehearsing together for the past year. The chorus opened their set with Glory Bound. Sung a cappella, the piece was a spiritual, set to the tune of "The Saints Go Marching In." In the middle, the piece splits into a round, the two parts blending very harmoniously. The second piece, Shalom Chevarim, was sung a cappella in Hebrew. Half of the chorus started, with the second group starting one verse later, so the entire song was sung in a round. The melody was beautiful and haunting, with the two parts blending flawlessly to complete the effect. The next piece, the classic Rock Around the Clock, featured three soloists – Caitlin Conrad, Lindsay Stelljes, and Kaitlyn Patterson. The piece was upbeat and spirited. The penultimate song was We Can Be Kind, featuring soloists Jane Greenip, Amanda Vierra, and Emily Moy. Accompanied by Mr. Mafera on piano, the chorus sang this inspiring song about putting one's differences behind in the name of world peace beautifully. Before their last piece, Mr. Mafera recognized the graduating fifth graders, of whom there was only one, Nicky Tolosko. The final song of their set, Yonder Come Day, was a Spiritual from the Georgia Sea Islands. This would have been sung by slaves when they worked through the night. The piece was sung a cappella, with split part harmonies. The whole set was very well-received by the audience.

The 5th Grade Band performed their set next, opening with Dance Celebration. Composed by the very popular Robert W. Smith, he got his inspiration for the piece from attending his daughter's first dance recital. The piece expresses joy in dance as an art form. The piece starts with the flute and clarinets passing the melody back and forth with the saxophones and brass, before intertwining the two parts. In the second movement, the saxophones played staccato while the clarinet's supported them in legato tones. The brass and tambourine added a spirited touch. The next piece, Latin Fire, was a tango in the Latin dance style. The percussion used interesting instruments to add a creative effect, punctuating the rest of the band. The ending was particularly strong, aided by the use of interesting syncopation commonly seen in Latin-style music. The final piece of the 5th Grade band's set was Rock Solid. Played in a hard-rock style, the piece included a great saxophone soli, before layering the rest of the band over it. At times, the percussion would drop out all together with the exception of cowbell for a very hard-rock effect. This was the last performance given by the 5th Grade band until they play at the promotion ceremony.

The final group performing for the evening was the 3rd Grade chorus, who opened with Old Folks At Home. Adapted from songs soldiers yearning for home during the Civil War sung, the southern ballad was accompanied by piano. The piece was well performed and very tight, which is particularly impressive considering the size of the group – the entire 3rd Grade participates in the 3rd Grade chorus. The second piece in the set, Hot Cross Buns, was played on the recorder. The curriculum requires that students are taught how to play some instrument as of 3rd Grade, so the school teaches the entire grade how to play the recorder. The hope is that it instills a love of instrumental music, which encourages the student to continue playing when they have the opportunity to pick an instrument and join the 4th Grade band next year. The students have been practicing the recorder for six weeks and both of their recorder pieces, Hot Cross Buns and Mary Had A Little Lamb, where very tight and well-performed. The entire class displayed a lot of musical talent. The final piece for the evening, Tideo, included choreography. The piece is reminiscent of American folk music, which was often accompanied by dancing. The piece was very well done and the audience loved it.

The entire evening was a major success. The students put on a commendable performance and it received an enthusiastic response from the audience. As Dr. deChiara, Principle of Deer Hill School, said, "I am just so proud of the work the students and teachers have done…it is a privilege to watch them grow." All present at the concert that evening could not agree more.

Kathryn Hillman is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy and will be studying art history at Fordham University next year..

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

BMWs are important part of staff

We would like to introduce you to another group of important members of our staff, the Beach Maintenance Workers, who help keep the beach clean over the course of the summer. As all can appreciate with the sheer volume of patrons, and seagulls, our BMWs are always kept very busy to ensure the beach is clean and tidy for all. The BMWs are responsible for cleaning the beach, assisting with chores (sweeping walkways, moving barrels) around the guardhouse, setting up and breaking down the beach.

Regan O'Donnell is new to the staff this summer.

This summer, all of our BMWs are Cohasset residents. They are: Adrian Dunne, Colin and Hugh Gideon-Murphy, Coleman Hernon, Alex Hurd, Ian Kennedy, Robbie Mahoney, Max Montgomery and Regan O'Donnell.

Colin will be a sophomore at Cohasset High School, while Coleman and Robbie are going to be juniors. Connor will be a freshman. This is Colin's and Coleman's third year and the second for Robbie and Connor.

Third-year BMW Adrian Dunne will be a junior at Thayer Academy. Hugh Gideon-Murphy will be a sophomore at Dublin School in NH and Tanner Gildea will be an eighth-grader at Boston College High School in the Arupe Division. One of the hardest-working BMWs on our staff is Max Montgomery. He will be beginning high school at Nobles and Greenough this fall.

New to our staff: Alec will be a junior at Boston College High School, Ian will enter the eighth grade at Milton Academy and Regan is going to be a seventh-grader at Derby Academy.

Please assist our BMWs by being responsible in putting all trash and recycling in the proper receptacles on the beach and in the parking lot.

could be the project. However, since then the town has purchased a new ambulance.

But, what the Fire Department did need was an AED for the only town building without one – the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF).

"I decided to help them with that," Meghann said.

Meghann made the decision to pursue her Gold Award partly because she didn't want girl scouting to end for her, "it was just the next step."

A side benefit is it is another accomplishment to put on college applications. Two other girls in the troop, Jenny Curley and Megan Richardson, were pursuing their Gold Award as well.

To achieve a Gold Award, two badges — one in leadership, the other in career related activity — must be earned, and then a project involving 65 hours of volunteer service must be completed.

Back in the fall, she presented her project outline to the Eastern Massachusetts Girl Scout Council and they accepted it. Then, the real work began.

One of the first steps of the project was to get in touch with Fire Lieutenant John Dockray, emergency medical services coordinator, to start the process.

The project had a large element of fundraising — the defibrillator costs about $2000. She sent out letters to families in the community, she placed flyers all over town and she spoke with business owners. She coordinated with Steve Bobo, the author of the Mariner's weekly Health Notes column, to have two columns on the subject.

The Gold Award is the highest possible achievement in the organization, similar to the Boy Scouts' Eagle Scout recognition.

Then, she set out to use her voice. She appeared at a service at St. Anthony's and at a meeting of the Rotary Club.

Being someone who had not done much public speaking — and what she did do, she didn't enjoy it — Meghann said this portion was a challenge.

"There were definitely some things I had to get over. (Before this project) I couldn't stand public speaking," Meghann said. "I couldn't stand making phone calls either."

But, now with the experience — and realizing success in those experiences — she is more confident.

"I've learned a lot of leadership skills and how to organize. Before this I couldn't get anyone to listen to me," Meghann said.

The Gold Award girl scout ended up raising more than $4000 during her project. The money was used toward the purchase of the AED and the rest of the monies will be used for training.

Meghann started in girl scouts in kindergarten as a Brownie, but when her original troop dissolved she joined up with her current troop led by Lillian Curley and Elizabeth Richardson.

Egan said he would be keeping an eye on the development as it goes forward and expects to go in each building at least four times. In addition, plumbing inspections, electrical inspections and sprinkler inspections will also be necessary.

Egan said he expects the construction process to move swiftly explaining a similar Avalon apartment complex recently built in Sharon went from tree clearing to fully occupancy in 14 months.

"This is without a doubt the biggest development Cohasset has had," Egan said. The only similar developments in recent years were the Shaw's complex and Cohasset Plaza – and those were not residential.

The complex will be sited on 62 acres off Route 3A. The entrance will be located across from Good Sport. The current Avalon property is the former location of several manufacturing companies, most recently the Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, an airport conveyor belt manufacturer that occupied the site from 1975 to 1995. It was also the site of D.S. Kennedy, one of the world's leading antenna manufacturers in the 1950s.

The steel buildings on the site, left behind from the land's manufacturing past, will be demolished this summer.

Avalon vice president of development Scott Dale said at a recent Selectmen's meeting that if everything goes as planned, Avalon hoped to be breaking ground on the project in the late summer. The tentative schedule has occupancy by summer 2011 and 95 percent occupied by the date of completion in early 2012.

Brendan Doonan was a one-man wrecking crew on Wednesday night and with a little help from his friends, that led Cohassset American Legion Post 118 to an 11-4 win over Braintree at Braintree High School.

Doonan pitched a complete game, allowing four runs, all in the second inning, and had a three-run triple in the sixth inning to help his team stay in the playoff picture.

Legion Baseball

He also snared a blazing line drive right at the pitcher to end the game.

"It was tight in the beginning," Cohasset coach Greg Taylor said. "Then Brendan settled in and got his curve ball back. Once that happened he pounded the strike zone and the defense played well behind him. They made some nice plays."

Taylor said Doonan's early trouble was related to the weather.

"It was really hot and he was having trouble gripping the ball," Taylor said. "When it cooled off he was able grip it better."

The win improved Cohasset to 8-7-1.

GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Spring tournaments are upon us. The one thing I love about sports is that the outcome of the game is not predetermined. One team may be the overwhelming favorite to win, but the two teams still have the play out the game to see who is the better team that day. The emotions are elevated in a tournament where the loser goes home and the winner continues their journey. Add the fact that you are playing your rival, and you have the ingredients for a special game.

I have often photographed this scenario as a staff photographer for Community Newspaper Company. Recently, I was able to be feel what it is like to be on the other side of the camera while rushing the court after my teammate scored the winning goal in the semifinals of a national tournament for team handball over our rivals, New York City, with no time left in overtime. It is a memory that I will cherish for a long time.

Team handball is a popular global sport that is best described as water polo on land. I first learned about it during the Sydney Olympics when I watched a few games on TV while teaching in China. It's high scoring and it requires speed, strength, and strategy to be successful.

Surprisingly, it is not a well known sport in America. Many people think it is the sport where you whack a blue ball in a racquetball court. It could not be further from the truth. Team handball is a sport where you can legally wrap up your opponent for a clean defensive stop; not many sports can make this claim.

I've been learning how to play team handball for the past two years. I found the Boston club after I did a search online, and I have been playing with my new family ever since.

The New England Freeze or Boston Team Handball club, depending on which side of the family you talk to, is truly a multicultural one. We have players from all over the world who call Boston home for a variety of lengths. Some are here 6 months, others are here for five or six years. Team handball is a way for them to make new friends in a foreign land.

It's a special relationship on top of the usual familial bond that you form in any given sports team where you practice and compete together over a long season. You help out a teammate on a defensive lapse, or you encourage him or her during a tough practice, as you are all working together to win.

This past year, we have been training diligently to qualify for the elite division of the National Club Tournament. It was the first time we had to finish in second place or better in a newly formed Northeast league to qualify. The league consists of Army and two teams from New York City, one of whom is the defending national champion.

After three tournaments during the year, we finished in second place, completing one of our goals of the season. We felt good about our squad heading into Las Vegas where the Nationals was being held.

We finished second in our group at Las Vegas to earn a tick-

Cohasset advanced in the 12 Year Old Williamsport District 8 Little League Tournament with a convincing 16-3 victory over Weymouth National on Tuesdasy night in a game halted after four innings due to the ten run rule.

Little League

Cohasset plays Friday at 8 p.m. in Canton against either Rockland or Milton American. The field is located at the JFK School on Dedham Street in Canton.

Last night's offense was provided by Ben Rice (3-for-4) with a grand slam and three runs scored, Brett Dooley (4-for-4) with four runs scored, Ryan McElhinney (2-for-3) with a home run and Justin Fein, who added an inside the park home run.

Matt Montefusco pitched the first 2-1/3 innings before reaching his pitch count and Danny Axelson came on and retired all four batters he faced. Cohasset sends Jake Burchill to the mound on Friday night and has every pitcher eligible to relieve if needed.

ATHLETE OF THE MONTH

Cohasset boys lacrosse and Cohasset baseball teams

If you win a state championship, an Athlete of the Month award is pretty sure to follow. This month was a little more complicated by two teams winning state titles.

In the spirit of fair play, we're giving the award to both the Cohasset High School baseball and boys lacrosse teams. The baseball team won the Div. 4 state title with a 15-3 win over Matignon on June 16 in Lynn. Earlier in the evening, the lacrosse team beat Norwell 10-8 for a Div. 3 state championship.

The baseball team is:

The lacrosse team is:

Summer's half over!

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

The Fourth of July has come and gone.

Back to School sales begin tomorrow.

When's football practice? Next week?

Summer is always over before it can get a running start and if you don't think so, you must be from another part of the planet.

So, in order to help our harried hackers, here are some things you have to do before the summer is over

After a round of golf at Ridder Farms in Whitman, instead of going to a 19th hole to review your round, wander over to Route 18 and visit Peaceful Meadows. It's the best ice cream you will find on the South Shore.

I've said it before and I'll say it again, if you haven't made your way to Highland Links in Truro, you are missing something special. It is golf the way it was played a century ago. Where else can you go golfing and whale watching the same time!

Since you like going on road trips, head north, before the snow falls, and here are three musts:

First, go up to Sugarloaf Golf Club in the Carrabassett Valley of Maine and enjoy a championship course. And if you want to hit a second shot off the 10th and 11th tees, that's OK. There is no other shot like in around these parts. They are so special. It's a US Open-quality course when its in prime condition, one of Robert Trent Jones, Jr.'s top efforts.

Second, take the logging trails roads west to Mount Washington Country Club in Bretton Woods, N.H. The golf course is OK, but there isn't a better place to have your favorite beverage than the piazza that faces the mountain. Just sit back and enjoy it.

Third, head home to the Bay State, but make a detour to the Shattack Inn in Jaffrey, N.H. Play the most difficult course in the world. If you can make it through all 18 holes with the same ball, you should have it bronzed, built yourself a trophy around it and place it on the living room mantle. Everybody loses at least one ball at The Shattack. It also has one of the gutsiest tee shots in golf, the par-4 13th hole. The hole is called Temptation and when you stand on the tee, you'll understand why.

Another worthy road trip would be a visit to the Ranch in western Massachusetts.

But, there are plenty of wonderful courses around here. You don't have to go on overnight trips (although they are the most fun) to enjoy a round of golf.

But do it!

Remember, Labor Day is. . . what next week? . . . The week after?

Don't put it off.

Another thing . . .

A handful of local golfers qualified for the State Public Links Championship last week at The Brookside Club in Bourne. Jeff Burkey of Pinehills and John Wynn of Granite Links were tied for fourth with 76s. Brian Neves of Sandwich Hollows was tied for seventh along with Bruce Wedge of Bay Point, Jim Stundis of Olde Scotland Links and Rick Cunha of Pinehills. They all carded 78s and will be play in the championship, which will be held on Aug. 10-11 at Quashnet Valley Country Club on Cape Cod. A gaggle of golfers qualified for the State Publinx at a qualifier in Brookline. Eric Daniel of Presidents Golf Course scored a 74 to finish second and qualify. Other local qualifiers at Putterham Meadows included Scott Guild of MGA Links at Mamantapett, Jake Maulin of Widow's Walk, Andrew Harvey of Olde Scotland Links, and Bob Meehan of Presidents . . . Jack Bandera and Brandon Sturtevant didn't think there 4-under-par 68 would standup at the Braintree Junior Fourball last week so they went to Green Harbor Beach in Marshfield. While checking out the scene, they got a call from Bandera's father, Jim, telling them they were still in the lead. So they put on their golf clothes and returned to Braintree in time for head professional Bob Beach to present them with the David W. Bailey Memorial Cup, which is given to the overall winning team. Bandera and Sturtevant beat Scituate's Jeffrey Durkin, 17, and Zach Rubenstein, 16, by three strokes. In the junior division, Hanover's Matt Deveney, 15, and Marshfield's Justin Henriksen, 15, fired a 73 to win by two strokes over Brockton 15-year-olds Mike Mason and Bill Kougias. Bandera is heading into his second year at Thayer, while Sturtevant will be a freshman at Stonehill College this fall . . . The upcoming Deutsche Bank Partners for Charity Junior Shoot Out will take place at The Golf Club of Cape Cod in Falmouth, July 19-22. Some of the top juniors from across the country are coming to Cape Cod for three days of stroke play competition. The following week, the American Junior Golf Association (AJGA) will host the Canon Cup at Old Sandwich Golf Club in Plymouth. The Canon Cup is a match-play competition pitting the top 20 boys and girls east of the Mississippi River against the top 20 boys and girls west of the Mississippi River. . . . Several local golfers also qualified for the Massachusetts Junior Amateur Championship as well as the State Public Links Championship last week. In Junior qualifying at Tatnuck Country Club in Worcester last week, Hatherly CC's Jeffrey Durkin was second, one shot off medalist honors with a 3-over 75. Foxboro's Timothy Grossman, Duxbury's Bobby O'Brien both carded 77s to tie for seventh . . . Sam Toomey of the Bay Club at Mattapoisett went a long way to qualify for the junior tournament. He headed to South Hadley in the Berkshires, were his 80 was good enough for fifth place. Halifax CC's Alan Morgan fashioned an 84 to advance to the championship. . . Bruce and Zac Dellechiaie won the Family Six tourney at LeBaron Hills CC in Lakeville. Mark and Ben Kitchen and David and Aiden Wells tied for second, four strokes back. LeBaron also held its Senior Club championship. Mark Bosse, with rounds of 73 and 81 was one stroke better than Paul Flanagan (75-80). Bob DeMarinis was first net followed by Buddy White, Mike Bowden, Bill Pineo, Ed Rendal, Scott Santosuosso and Rick Sullivan.

What's in your bag?

Titleist T-909D2, Titleist 735 CB irons, Vokey wedges, Ray Cook putter.

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights):

My best round was in 1991 during the old Indian Summer tournaments on Cape Cod. I set the course record at The Wianno Club. I made an eagle on the 12th hole. It was one of those rounds where everything went right. No bogeys. It was a shotgun start. On my last hole, the par-3 third hole, I had to get up and down out of a bunker to save par to shoot 65. It's held up all these years.

If you could put together a dream foursome, who would be in it?

You have to start with the King, Arnold Palmer. I'd love to play with my father once more. He's long since passed. And then it would be a toss-up between my brothers Bob and Dick, because we just don't get to play together anymore. I'd probably throw in Babe Zaharias. She's my favorite all time athlete.

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you where, and how the game attracted you):

My father loved golf. He used to caddie for Henry Picard at Plymouth Country Club. He brought my brothers and I down to Duxbury Yacht Club to work as caddies. My mother had a catering service and she did a lot of the cocktail parties, dinners and what have you there. If you're caddie, you could play for five days a week Monday through Friday after four o'clock. We could play all day Monday, and of course we're go there weekends after six o'clock in the evening and sometimes my father would come out with us on weekends and play with us.

What is your favorite golf course (and why?) Besides your current club:

That's a no-brainer because it's Sankaty Head on Nantucket Island. Anybody who played Sankaty knows that. It's like going back to the roots of golf. It's the whole thing, not just where it is. It's just such a special golf course. It's got the tall fescue. You got hit it straight and you better know where it went if it went astray. It's just tremendous

What's the best golf tip you ever received?

Don't expect too much of yourself when you go out to play. Jack Nicklaus said the same thing very recently. You very seldom shoot what you think you're going to shoot. Don't put too much pressure on yourself and forget the mistakes.

What makes your home golf course so special?

It's a little hidden jewel, a wonderful track and it gets better every year. It's almost like family here. It's low key out here and it's such a nice little place. It's in the country with no noise from cars, all you hear out here is nature.

It is a course on the upswing

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Golf courses are living and breathing entities, just like you or me.

They need attention if they are going to flourish. If they are neglected, they will simply deteriorate.

Course of the Week

They need care and direction.

They need tree limbs trimmed back, just like you or I get a haircut or cut our finger nails.

If you played Pembroke Country Club over the last few years, you would understand this.

Back in the day – and we are talking decades ago, before it ran into all sort of troubles and we'd sooner forget; it was one of the finest public courses in New England.

If you play it, you understand why.

The flow of the holes is easy to take, starting with an opening par-5 that give you time to stretch out your swing.

The stretch of holes, Nos. 3-5, might be the toughest three-hole stretch in the region.

And the finishing holes on each nine are perfect, the ninth, an approach to an elevated green that keeps you guessing how close to the pin your shot landed, and No. 18, where two well-struck woods might give you an eagle putt.

When there was talk of it going up for sale in the late 1980s, the Massachusetts Golf Association expressed an interest. Although there was no firm price tag, they were talking in the three to four million dollar range.

The MGA was interested. They wanted a place to call their own, hold their hold championships and be a centerpiece.

But the owner balked and the MGA got involved in a project in central Massachusetts that collapsed with the economy, the real estate market and the end of the golf boom.

If only . . .

Nonetheless, since they the play simply was drained of every cent and long-term care projects were non-existence until the time came a few years ago when the place went belly-up.

Fortunately, the bank holding the paper sold the course to the right ownership group, heading by local hockey star Jeremy Roenick, who brought in capable golf folks such as Derek Holt and Nora Berard to turn around the facility.

And it's working.

Pembroke is so much better now that it was three years ago.

And it is only going to get better.

"Rome wasn't built in a day," said Berard, the director of golf. She knows about breathing life into golf courses.

She began the resurgence of South Shore Country Club in Hingham and is doing the same thing here.

Berard knows what golfers want and she and the rest of the folks at Pembroke are making it happen.

It is only a matter of time before Pembroke CC is among the top public courses in Massachusetts again.

et to the semifinals where we faced our rivals, New York City, who finished first in their group. We knew it was going to be a tough game because they have talented players at many different positions, but we believed we had a shot based on our play against them during the season.

It didn't go so well for us in the first half of the game. We were down by as much as 4 or 5 goals at one point. A timeout was called and we were refocused after a teammate spoke plainly about our play so far. It looked grim at one point after our "point guard" was sent off the field with a red card in the middle of the second half. As we chipped away at the lead, I and the rest of the bench players tried to do our part and chant defense as loudly as we could to rattle New York and to encourage our teammates throughout the second half and the rest of the game. Our womens team cheered us on from the other side of the field.

It worked as we finished regulation tied with our nemesis. Overtime consists of two 5 minute overtime periods. If it remains tied after two overtime periods, we head into a penalty shootout.

It was a back and forth affair, and it got more tense as time was winding down. Fatigue was starting to show in players from both sides as they kept on battling for the right to play for the championship trophy.

We managed to earn a free throw with no time left in the second overtime period and the score knotted at 26 goals apiece. Marco Betsch, our right back from Germany, picked up the ball and was confronted with a 6 player wall who stood in between him and glory.

The bench stood up or kneeled along the sideline to get a good view of the shot. We collectively held our breaths as we waited in anticipation. At the end of the first half, Marco had the same situation, and he managed to get a shot through the wall that the goalie saved.

Marco reared back, and let loose a shot. I don't remember how he did it, but I do remember the utter joy I felt seeing the ball hit the back of the net and the thrill of rushing the court to jump onto the hero. My teammates who have played this sport since they were young said that the win over New York was the most satisfying one of their careers.

We went on to finish second overall in the tournament after a 25-20 loss to Los Angeles in the championship game ending our season. It wasn't the result we wanted, but it was a memorable ride that will be cherished for many years. Can't wait to see what next year has in store for us.

A video of the game winning goal will be embedded online. Find out more about New England Freeze at our website and from the teamusa handball website.

Cohasset Middle School Field Hockey club looking for coaches

The middle school field hockey club in Cohasset is looking for three coaches for our fall season. We are self funded and pay our coaches an hourly rate. There are four full teams. and the season starts September 2 and goes through November 1.

The 6th grade teams each will have three games and the 7th and 8th will each play 9-10 games. The teams practice twice per week from 3-5 p.m.

There is also a Jamboree in October involving other towns. We are looking for people who have played field hockey and would enjoy coaching and have a lot of enthusiasm. Each coach would have 2 practices per week and games both home and away.

Coaches do not have to be from Cohasset.

If you are interested, please contact Beth Marsden-Gilman at bmarsden@comcast.net.

Five Weymouth Club swimmers place in top 10 in International Meet

The Weymouth Waves, competing against 1200 swimmers from 60 teams throughout this country and Puerto Rico, put on an impressive showing during the recent Florida International Age Group Meet held in Fort Lauderdale.

The Waves, who compete out of the Weymouth Club, had a combined team finish of 25th out of 60 teams, while the women had a stellar effort taking 15th out of 60 teams.

Four of the women placed in the top 10 in their events.

The group was headed by 15-year-old Colleen O'Neil (Hingham), who placed in the top 10 in six events. A breaststroke and backstroke specialist, she was fourth in the both the 100 (1:17.85) and 200 (2:47.74) and fifth in the 50 (:36.18). She also placed seventh in the 100 back (1:09.97) and ninth in the 200 (2:31.15) back as well as seventh in the 200 IM (2:28.40).

Her time in both the 100 and 200 breaststroke currently ranks number one in the New England in her age category.

The others who scored valuable points for the women included…

Julia Klier, a 12-year-old from Cohasset, who was fourth in the 100 back (1:14.63) and seventh in the 50 back (:36.00).

Katie Kenney, 16 years old from Dedham, who was third in the 200 fly (2:28.41), fourth in the 50 fly (:30.27), and seventh in the 100 fly (1:07.19).

And, Janelle McDonald, a 17-year-old from Middleboro, who was ninth in the 100 backstroke (1:10.34), eighth in the 200 back (2:32.11) and seventh in the 50 back (:32.63).

On the men's side, Peter McDonald, a 16-year-old from Hanover, took ninth in the 200 fly (2:19.22).

"It was a really good meet for the team," said Marshall Goldman, who took over as the Waves' head coach on June 1. "It was uncanny how some of the swimmers were able to drop their times so much at this time of the year. In the 200 breaststroke, Colleen was able to drop her previous best time by 10 seconds, and Katherine dropped eight seconds off her best previous time in the 200 fly.

"I have to give a lot of credit to AJ Vozella, who is my senior assistant coach," continued Goldman. "He did an excellent job training the swimmers so when I took over as the head coach, I just picked up where he left off. The team did not miss a beat."

Next up for the Waves is the New England Regionals at Warwick, RI this coming weekend (July 10-11), the New England Championships the end of July at Harvard University, and then the Eastern Sectionals August 5-8 in Buffalo, NY.

Legion fights way into playoff chase

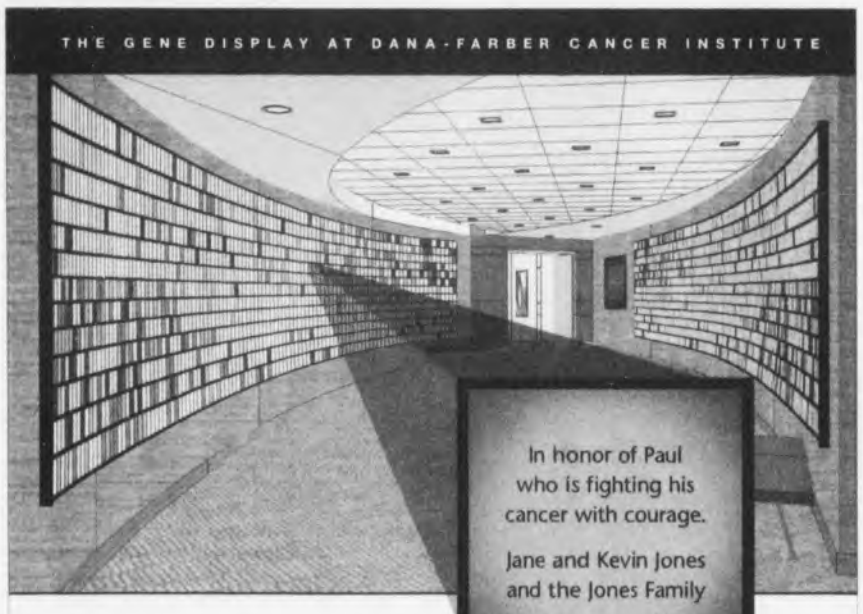
Heading into the game, Cohasset trailed Weymouth by one point for the fifth and final final playoff spot in the 10-team division.

Weymouth played Holbrook.

For Post 118, breaking .500 took some doing.



With the bulk of the team in the MIAA tournament, post 118 struggled early, but has rebounded with the infusion of the Cohasset players.

"The hitting is there," Taylor said. "If we can get decent pitching and keep the errors to a minimum we do well."

As for the starting pitching, Cohasset has fared well.

"Casey Burns has a rubber arm," Taylor said. "He goes seven every time he goes out there. Brendan had a gutsy performance tonight. Jeff Cavanaro has been big. Jamie Faber too. This is a really good group of kids. They like to fight."

For the record, Cavanaro has also been playing for the Southeast in the Bay State Games, and most recently went 2-for-3 with two RBI in a 17-10 loss to the Northeast on Wednesday morning, before playing Wednesday night in the Legion game.

GIMME SHELTER

Littermates are looking for homes

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring four kittens: two gray kittens, Dandelion and Puff, are females. The black kittens: Crybaby Frankie is a male and quite vocal and Phylicia has an extra toe, as do Dandelion and Puff, as do all the Hemingway cats. They are all from the same litter and have bonded with one another. We much prefer they go in pairs and as the gray ones are difficult to tell apart, you may prefer one black and one gray.

To see them all playing together, go to www.hsar.org and click on kittens, and watch the video. If you're interested in adopting two of them, please call Shirl at 781-925-3380 to make an appointment.

Open hours are Saturday, from 2 to 3 p.m., and Monday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. We are located at 50 L St. Hull. The mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Our telephone number is 781-925-3121. We have a low cost spay van – less than $100 – coming up July. Please call Mary at the above number if interested.

Thanks to our many supporters and to all the wonderful people who share their homes with our cats and kittens.

Brother and sister, Frankie and Phylicia, are from the same litter as Dandelion and Puff.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JULY 19, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Starting something new is always exciting for the adventurous Aries. And here's the good news: This time you might be able to get some assistance in helping you finish what you've started.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Put your daydreaming penchant on hold for now, and face the facts as they are, not as you'd like them to be. Your customary hardheaded approach to "deals," etc., would be called for.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Problems beyond your control might delay some of your plans. But things should start to get back to normal by midweek. The weekend could bring an unexpected (but welcome) visitor.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's a good time to buckle down and tackle those unfinished tasks so you'll be ready to take on other projects. The week's end could bring an invitation from a most surprising source.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Mixed signals could create a few stressful moments for the Lion. But by midweek, explanations should help ease the tension. The weekend is party time! Share it with someone special.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good "catching up" week for finishing tasks, calling old friends and maybe reading that book you haven't opened yet or renting that movie you wanted to see again.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Money matters should be worked out, even if it takes time away from a more romantic situation. Better to settle things before feelings turn hard and angry on all sides.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A job-related problem could turn out to be less troublesome than it seemed at first. Just a few moments of talk 'twixt the parties resolves everything to everyone's satisfaction.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The Sagittarian Archer takes aim at health and fitness issues this week. Watch your diet, and try to put more exercise time into your typically busy schedule.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) As you continue to focus on a career or job change, it's a good time to look over some of your rarely used skills and see where they can fit into your future workplace plans.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A loved one's health might be worrisome, but there's good news by midweek. Expect people who share your ideas and your goals to try to contact you by the week's end.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A colleague's request that makes the typically perceptive Pisces feel uncomfortable is a request you probably will want to turn down. The weekend favors family get-togethers.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for making others feel warm and wanted. Even newcomers feel like old friends.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

First Church of Christ, Scientist: 386 Main St. Denomination: Christian Science (781-741-2874).

This week's service focuses on the subject of Sacrament. The Golden Text comes from Deuteronomy: "...thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might." Our church service starts at 10.30 a.m., as does our Sunday school, where young people up to age 20 can learn how turning to God helps us in our day-to-day lives. We also provide child care for infants and toddlers.

Our Wednesday evening testimony meeting at 7:45 p.m. offers a quiet respite midweek. Listen to topical readings from the Bible and the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, after which you can share or just listen to experiences of inspiration and healing. If you'd like to read the Bible or Christian Science literature, please visit our Reading Room at 35 Station Street (call 781-749-1172 for hours) or go online to spirituality.com.

Everyone invited to summer services on Sandy Beach

What better place to have a church service than on the beach, with the beauty of the Atlantic Ocean as a backdrop, and the breeze of the salty air to stir one's soul? Beginning this Sunday, St. Stephen's Church will welcome newcomers and old-timers, visitors and residents – and even a few dogs – to the 7a.m. summer worship service called "Breaking Bread with Jesus on the Beach."

"We are so grateful to the Sandy Beach Association and to the Town of Cohasset for allowing us to use this gorgeous spot for our celebration of Holy Communion," said the Rev. Margot Critchfield, rector of St Stephen's. "It's a wonderful way for people from all walks of life to come together for a relaxed and informal worship service."

Critchfield said, "At the end of John's gospel, Jesus shares a breakfast of bread and grilled fish with his disciples on the beach. So this is the perfect place to 'break bread' with each other in his name."

St. Stephen's Church will welcome newcomers and old-timers, visitors and residents – and even a few dogs – to the 7a.m. summer worship service.

Worshippers of all ages come to the service, which Critchfield started when she came to St. Stephen's three summers ago. "I owe the idea to Gary Ritts at Second Congregational," she said, "he told me about a service he did in the summer at the Sailing Club, and it got me thinking about how awesome it would be to have one on the beach. This is our third summer there."

Critchfield said some people bring beach chairs, though many stand since the service isn't too long. Coffee and doughnuts will be served after the service. Stickers not required before 8 a.m. St Stephen's also has a second service Sunday mornings during the summer at 9 a.m.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Elizabeth B. Golden

Elizabeth B. Golden

Beloved wife, mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, sister, aunt, cousin and friend, Elizabeth was born on the Nelson Farm in Marshfield in 1915 to Philip and Sadie Oakman. As a child she was surrounded by a large extended family of Oakmans, Nourses, Hatches, Damons and Tildens. All too familiar with the chores of a working farm, Elizabeth preferred the pleasures of country living - picnicking along the North River, swimming at Brant Rock, sledding down Nelson Hill and skating on the Oakman Pond.

Elizabeth graduated valedictorian from Marshfield High School in 1933 and attended University of Maine, a member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority, until her father's death and the Great Depression forced her to withdraw. She proceeded to graduate as valedictorian of her 1936 class at Worcester City Hospital School of Nursing.

Until her marriage to the renowned South Shore attorney Irwin Golden in 1944, Liz worked as a registered nurse for her brother-in-law Dr. Clifford Danforth in Weymouth. Those were the days of making house calls and removing tonsils on kitchen tables. In addition to her professional nursing duties, she continued using her skills volunteering for the Red Cross and Cohasset's Civil Defense.

Raising her children in Cohasset, Liz served for years as room mother and scout leader for her children and their friends. She helped found the Explorer's Club and spent hours acquainting the next generation with the woods, marshes and tidal pools at their doorstep.

She was an avid birdwatcher and longtime member of the National Audubon Society. She often nursed back to health injured wildlife, including turtles, rabbits and birds.

Many summers she spent with her husband Irwin boating and fishing in the waters off the coast of Cohasset and Martha's Vineyard.

Proud of her Mayflower lineage, Liz also understood the hardships of newcomers to this country and welcomed all to her legendary Thanksgiving dinners.

Her six-times great-grandmother, Rebecca Nourse, a pillar of the Salem community, had been hanged as a witch in 1692, and Liz would often quote the Nourse coat-of-arms, "By courage, not by cunning!" True to her word, Liz displayed courage and conviction wearing her Red Sox cap while surrounded by Yankee fans and fearlessly campaigning for President Obama while greatly outnumbered by her Republican friends at her retirement community.

In her "Golden Years", Liz enjoyed traveling, bowling and golfing with the "Oakman Sisters", Virginia Garland of Duxbury and the late Phyllis Danforth and Anstrice Van Keuren, both of Weymouth.

She is also predeceased by her parents, Philip and Sadie Oakman, and sister, Louise of Marshfield.

Elizabeth will be deeply missed by her three children, Jane C. Krone of Oak Hill, Va., William B. Golden of West Falmouth and Meredith L. Golden of New City, N.Y.; her sons and daughters-in-law, Peter Krone, Kristen Golden, Bob Chen and Paula Golden; her grandchildren, Brigham Golden and Lynn Rawden, Bethany and Ben Golden and Braden Golden, Elizabeth, Rebecca and Philip Krone and Bryce and Kathryn Golden-Chen; and her great-grandchildren, Zella and Lazar Golden; her dear sister-in-law, Daphne Glassman of Falmouth; plus numerous nieces, nephews and cousins.

A celebration of life service will be held at the First Parish Unitarian Church in Cohasset, Saturday, July 10, at 2 p.m.

Donations in lieu of flowers may be sent to the National Audubon Society or to ICAS Juntos Adelante, juntosadelante.org, a women's health and human rights consortium co-founded by her granddaughter Bethany Golden.

Quick Flix

THE A-TEAM (PG-13) The big-screen version of the cheesy 1980s TV adventure series stars Liam Neeson and Bradley Cooper. A little dumb would be OK, but this is mind-bendingly dumb. The team goes in search of counterfeit money plates. Counterfeit money plates? How exciting. And this fearless foursome (call them the D-Team) will have you longing for the old TV cast, lead by Mr. T. (D)

BABIES (PG) An adorable documentary about four babies, from different corners of the world, and their first months of life. They cry, crawl and talk. Nothing Earth-shattering here. But it is awwww-inspiring. (B)

COCO CHANEL & IGOR STRAVINSKY (R) Story of the love affair between the iconic fashion designer and the brilliant composer. (Not Reviewed)

THE CREMASTER CYCLE (Not rated) Five feature-length films by Matthew Barney that explore the concept of creation. (Not Reviewed)

CYRUS (R) An entertaining comedy about a weird love triangle involving a mother (Marisa Tomei), her son, Cyrus (Jonah Hill) and her new boyfriend, John (John C. Reilly). John discovers that his new love interest is a little too close to her son, a man-child musical genius with an ornery streak. Condescension, jealousy and distrust quickly ensue. And in no time, John and Cyrus find themselves engaged in an intense game of psychological warfare. (B+)

DATE NIGHT (PG-13) A night out takes an unexpectedly dangerous turn for a married couple (Tina Fey and Steve Carell) when they steal another pair's dinner reservations. The script is limited, but the ensemble is charming and engenders plenty of good will. Fey and Carell have chemistry to burn. (B-)

EXIT THROUGH THE GIFT SHOP (R) An eccentric French shopkeeper and amateur filmmaker attempts to find and befriend legendary graffiti artist Banksy. (Not Reviewed)

GEORGE A. ROMERO'S SURVIVAL OF THE DEAD (R) An unnecessary zombie film from writer/director Romero. He uses the living dead as a humorous metaphor for our consumer-driven society. (C)

GET HIM TO THE GREEK (R) Jonah Hill plays a peon assigned the task of getting an oft-inebriated rock star (Russell Brand) from London to the Greek Theater in Los Angeles on time. Brand is reviving his over-medicated, under-talented rocker who just about stole the show in "Forgetting Sarah Marshall." He and Hill have great comic chemistry. The show has laughs and a heart. (B)

THE GIRL WITH THE DRAGON TATTOO (Not rated) Based on the worldwide best-seller by Stieg Larsson, this Swedish thriller deals in murder, mystery and mayhem in inventive ways. If you can handle the violence, then you're in for something unique and compelling. (B+)

HARRY BROWN (R) Michael Caine plays an ornery old coot who resorts to violence to cleanse his deteriorating neighborhood of an influx of young criminals. (B)

I AM LOVE (R) Tilda Swinton plays an ignored wife who finds power and sexual awakening in the arms of her son's suave and sexy best friend. It's a drab, convoluted, choppy story of a family in crisis. (D)

IRON MAN 2 (PG-13) Robert Downey Jr. returns to do battle with fellow reclamation project Mickey Rourke and Scarlett Johansson in this sequel to the surprise 2008 blockbuster. This installment seems to underplay the franchise's most valuable player — Downey. The film gets off to a strong start, but ultimately, it suffers from an 'Iron' deficiency. (C-)

JOAN RIVERS: A PIECE OF WORK (R) Directors Ricki Stern and Anne Sundberg peel away the mask of the comedian's plasticized face to find a complex and successful businesswoman underneath. The documentary works because Rivers takes it to places that aren't always pretty, but are usually quite compelling and real. (B)

Jonah Hill, who appears to be in every movie these days, plays a guy who's a little too close to his mother (Marisa Tomei), in "Cyrus." John C. Reilly plays Mom's new boyfriend.

THE KILLERS (PG-13) A married couple (Ashton Kutcher and Katherine Heigl) fears someone is trying to kill them because Kutcher used to be a secret agent. (Not Reviewed)

THE KILLER INSIDE ME (R) Casey Affleck dazzles in this adaptation of a novel about a deputy sheriff with a homicidal streak under his squeaky-clean exterior. Too bad the rest of the film doesn't live up to his performance. Yes, it's a story about a psychotic killer, but still, there's something mean-spirited in the way it's all presented. "Killer" is an unhappy slay ride. (C-)

KNIGHT AND DAY (PG-13) Welcome back, Tom Cruise. You're back to your old, charming self again. Cruise and Cameron Diaz team up in this story of a spy and the woman who becomes his impromptu partner. They have so much sparky chemistry that a little less gun play and a little more word play would have been nice. But this is a big, fun summer movie in the best sense of the phrase. (B+)

THE LAST AIRBENDER (PG-13) M. Night Shyamalan's big-screen adaptation of the kids' show is a mess. In this fantasy-adventure film, the nations of Air, Water, Fire and Earth are out of balance. You're not kidding. It's a film so lifeless, it belongs in a morgue, not a theater. And Shyamalan's career continues in freefall. (D-)

LETTERS TO JULIET (PG) Amanda Seyfried plays a woman vacationing in Verona, Italy, who tries her hand at matchmaking after being inspired by the story of "Romeo & Juliet." We get lines like, "True love knows no expiration date." Not exactly Shakespearean. Not exactly good. (C-)

Cameron Diaz and Tom Cruise have nice onscreen chemistry in "Knight and Day."

LOVE RANCH (R) Helen Mirren and Joe Pesci are a husband-and-wife team who own and run one of Nevada's first legalized brothels. It turns out that it's incredibly mundane work — and it makes for a remarkably dull movie. No wonder this film was stored on the shelf for years. (D)

OCEANS (G) This beautiful documentary explores the many mysteries of our planet's oceans. It features the kind of dazzling photography we've come to expect from these top-drawer nature documentaries. Narrated by Pierce Brosnan. (B)

ONDINE (PG-13) A mysterious woman washes in from the sea and changes the lives of an alcoholic fisherman and his kidney diseased daughter. Everyone in this movie is too good to be true, but director Neil Jordan makes you believe, not only in them, but also in the miracles that start to happen. "Ondine" is not just an ode to love and family, it's a valentine to Castletownbere, the small town in Ireland where the movie is set, and the place that Jordan calls him. (B+)

PLEASE GIVE (R) Director Nicole Holofcener's film about morally conflicted women (Catherine Keener, Rebecca Hall, Amanda Peet, Sarah Steele) might be her best yet. Insightful writing pairs perfectly with the talented cast. You'll enjoy spending time with her lovable, deeply flawed characters. (A-)

RESTREPO (R) "Perfect Storm" author Sebastian Junger tries his hand at directing, chronicling the everyday lives of Army soldiers in Afghanistan.

ROBIN HOOD (PG-13) For their fifth collaboration, Ridley Scott and Russell Crowe venture into Sherwood Forest for a glum remake of the classic tale. The film is as heavy and clumsy as chain mail. (C-)

THE SECRET IN THEIR EYES (R) Oscar-winning tale of a criminal court employee determined to solve a 25-year-old murder case with the help of the young victim's still-grieving fiance. It's the kind of subtle and challenging film that rarely seems to make it to the movie theaters these days. (A)

SEX AND THE CITY 2 (R) The girls have a second go-round on the big screen with more bling and fashion. Unfortunately, the four women who were once confident, stylish and independent have turned into self-indulgent shrews. This sequel has lots of flash and dazzle, but "Sex" has lost its appeal. (D)

SHREK FOREVER AFTER (PG) Fed up with his humdrum life, Shrek is thrust into an alternative universe where he will learn to appreciate how much Fiona and the kids mean to him. The final installment, finally. (D)

SOLITARY MAN (PG) A car magnate (Michael Douglas) watches his personal and professional life hit the skids because of his business and romantic indiscretions. For some reason, Douglas has a knack for playing these sleazy roles… and making them endearing. Very little plot; this one's a fun character study. (B-)

SPLICE (R) Adrien Brody and Sarah Polley play genetic researchers who combine the DNA of animals, fish and a human to create a beautiful but dangerous creature. This is a sinister (and slyly satirical) tale of genetics run amok. Fans of the genre will enjoy this slick update of the "Frankenstein" story. (B)

STONEWALL UPRISING (R) Directors Kate Davis and David Heilbroner recount the infamous 1969 New York City riot that is considered to be the birth of the gay rights movement. (Not Reviewed)

TOY STORY 3 (G) There's nothing really wrong with this third installment of the popular animated feature franchise. Some of the adventures are entertaining, and Lots-of-Huggin Bear is a great addition. The film is sharp and solidly entertaining, but it lacks the heart and emotion that are Pixar's hallmark. (B)

THE TWILIGHT SAGA: ECLIPSE (PG-13) This entry takes a much darker turn with more bloodshed between vampires and werewolves and more teen angst and lust, as the love triangle between Bella (Kristen Stewart), Edward (Robert Pattinson) and Jacob (Taylor Lautner) deepens. Stewart continues to sulk, and Pattinson still delivers his lines as if he were in a soap opera. Only Lautner has shown any improvement — he's less wooden than he was in the first two installments. "Twilight" fans rejoice; all others can seek their movie entertainment elsewhere. (C+)

WINTER'S BONE (R) An Ozark Mountain teenager (Jennifer Lawrence) searches for her missing father while fighting through the wilderness and a band of bad guys. It's a gritty film that succeeds on the strength of a few breakout performances. (B)

BOYS AND GIRLS STATE

Students Sam Green, Rick Trojnor-Barron, and Jenny Curley learned how government works by attending Boys and Girls State, a program that they were able to attend with the help of the Sons of American Legion and the Legion Women's Auxiliary.

CHS students learn about government

NWHITE@CNC.COM

What does it take to run a town? A city? A state? A country?

Three students from Cohasset High got a glimpse of what exactly is involved in running a democratic government in mid-June at a program sponsored by the American Legion.

Boys and Girls State brings together high school juniors from around the country to spend one week on a college campus and learn the rights, privileges and responsibilities of franchised citizens. The program centers on the structure of city, county and state governments.

The Massachusetts program was weeklong program was held from June 12 to 18 at Stonehill College in Easton. For the first time this year the Boys and Girls State program was held in the same place at the same time.

Rising Cohasset High seniors Jenny Curley, Sam Green and Rick Trojnor-Barron represented Legion Post 118.

"It's an outstanding program," said Commander of the Cohasset Sons of the American Legion Thomas Wigmore. During the weeklong program, Wigmore tried to make it out there everyday to observe the debates.

Wigmore has been heading up the effort to send Cohasset students to Boys State for roughly 10 years. He said the program is very worthwhile for those who attend, and the Legion is a proud sponsor.

Wanted: Music teacher

Schools post middle school music position

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Middle School is looking for a music teacher.

In a departure from a plan presented three weeks ago at a School Committee meeting, school administration announced last week that the full-time teaching position has been posted.

The decision follows a packed school committee meeting three weeks ago (June 24) where parents and students spoke out against the proposed changes to the music department and asked the school administration to re-consider the plan.

The impetus for the discussion was the middle school music teacher for the 2009-2010 school year will not be returning in the fall, and instead of hiring a replacement, the school administration intended to redeploy the current music staff (both at Deer Hill and the high school) to cover the music curriculum for sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders.

The plan required negotiation with the teachers' union because it was outside the contract language.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said the decision to post the middle school music teacher position was driven by multiple reasons: the student enrollment numbers; negotiations with the teachers' union, and the concerns expressed by parents and students.

"Ultimately, decisions will always be made with the best interest of the children at heart," Walsh said in an e-mail.

Yet, she added, there are still budget concerns related to hiring a new teacher.

"Concerns remain, however, regarding sustaining staff and programs beyond one year, when we are beginning to hear from the town that a level-funded budget may be their recommendation for (next year's budget, fiscal 2012)," Walsh said. A level-funded budget would translate into budget cuts next year, she said.

The funding for a middle-school teacher was built into the Town Meeting approved fiscal 2011 budget.

Walsh also said there still remains concern over low enrollment music classes at the high school level.

"Running low enrolled classes in one department while other electives will not run at all next year because of staffing needs is a concern and deals with equity issues," Walsh said, suggesting this type of issue should be discussed during the development of the school's five-year strategic plan next year.

Since the June 24 School Committee meeting the future of the music program has been discussed.

In a letter dated July 1 and posted on the Cohasset Schools webpage, Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini enumerates the reasons why the hiring of a dedicated middle school teacher is not warranted. The letter goes into great detail about the reasoning behind his recommendation to use current staff to teach middle school band and chorus.

"Course requests at the High School (including band and/or chorus) warrant fewer sections for music classes than has been allocated in the past," Antolini wrote. "In light of student requests, it would not be equitable or necessary to

This week the Mariner caught up with veteran lifeguards Dan McCarthy and Jonny Drybanski at the Cohasset Swim Center.

Names: Dan McCarthy and Jonny Drybanski.

Occupation: Lifeguards at Cohasset Swim Center.

Best day of your life: 6/19/06 - The day that I activated my Facebook account (Dan). The day my favorite band announced their reunion (Jonny).

Best vacation: Not so much of a traveler, I tend to "daycation" to the Hanover Mall and loiter for hours to mingle with other teenagers and get into debates ranging from the direction of our economy to deciding whether Bella made the right decision between choosing Edward or Jacob in the Twilight series (Dan). Living in Cohasset is a vacation (Jonny).

Favorite season: Summer (Dan and Jonny).

Favorite junk food: Chipburgers from the vending machine (Dan). Doritos (Jonny).

Best book: "Brave New World" (Dan). "Angels and Demons" (Jonny).

Best movie or actor: Morgan Freeman (Dan). "Forrest Gump" (Jonny).

Favorite music, song, group or artist: Phish (Jonny).

Fun fact about yourself: I can hold my breath for almost three seconds underwater. (Dan) I once went 7 years thinking I was a fish (Jonny).

Pet peeve: When kids decide that the pool deck is an appropriate venue to practice their 40-yard dashes and run straight into the pool. Walk please, the pool isn't going anywhere (Dan). Tangled headphones (Jonny).

Goal: To receive a government research grant in aiding my quest to solve "The Curse of Ko Ko Island" and put an end to this madness of unsuccessful restaurant business attempts where the legendary Ko Ko Island once resided (Dan). To write something that moves you, or to be moved to write something. Keeping CSC safe is the priority though (Jonny).

Person you'd most like to meet: FDR (Dan). Trey Anastasio of Phish (Jonny).

Biggest worry: I just inherited over 30 pairs of finely woven and threaded jean shorts but I'm afraid that by the time I return back to college in the fall that these jean shorts just won't be fashionable anymore (Dan). If the Mariner got my good side (Jonny).

Best part of Cohasset: Need I say more? Two Dunkin Donuts located within a mile radius of one another (Dan). The Beach (Jonny).

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®
by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison
HEALTHY HOBBIES
Involvement in hobbies can help keep the mind alert, which is especially important for seniors. Home healthcare aides can engage their senior clients in board and card games and help with other hobbies as well. Board games like Scrabble® help keep a senior's mind active. Some seniors enjoy writing and sending greeting cards to their relatives and friends. A home healthcare aide can assist the senior in composing meaningful greetings, addressing envelopes, and mailing the cards. He or she may even help the senior create custom cards. Some activities can be enjoyed by seniors who are sedentary due to physical limitations. For seniors, hobbies can be life-enriching when they are matched to seniors' unique interests and abilities.
Helping out with hobbies is just one of the ways that our aides can help your parent stay active and involved. Our compassionate and caring aides can also read aloud books and articles and engage in stimulating conversation, all of which can improve your parent's mood, which in turn improves their health. In addition, we can help with grooming, bathing, cooking, menu planning, and light housekeeping. This takes the burden off your shoulders and improves their quality of life. Don't you both deserve that? Our services are flexible which means that we can provide whatever it is that you think is best, from occasional respite care to full-time companionship. Joseph P. Joyce, 27, of Scituate, has been charged with indecent assault and battery.

'Skirt' incident tied to MBTA alleged assailant

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The same man that was wanted by Transit Police for allegedly indecently assaulting a 16-year-old girl on the Red Line on Wednesday (July7) is facing charges in Cohasset for accosting a woman at Shaw's Supermarket on July 4.

Cohasset Police have charged Joseph P. Joyce, 27, of 39 Ocean Ave., Scituate, with indecent assault and battery on a person over 14 years of age, and accosting a person of the opposite sex.

Joyce was arraigned on the Cohasset charges Friday afternoon at Quincy District Court. He was released on $1,000 cash bail and is due back in court next month, according to published reports.

Police said the Cohasset charges stem from an incident at 8:10 p.m. on Sunday (July 4) at Shaw's off Route 3A.

Joyce was arrested by the MBTA Transit Police for similar crimes that occurred on the Red Line train at Kendall Station in Cambridge on July 7. Accompanied by his lawyer, Joyce turned himself in to Transit Police Friday morning (July 9) and was arraigned in Medford.

On July 4, Cohasset Police patrol officers responded to Shaw's regarding a complaint from a 40-year-old Cohasset woman who reported that a young man had accosted her and lifted her dress up in the frozen food section of the market. She told police that at about 8 p.m., she was shopping in the frozen food section when a white man in his early 20s with blonde hair and wearing a white T-shirt and shorts walked by her and said "hi." She then walked over to the ice cream cooler and while getting some ice cream, the man walked over and lifted her dress up, exposing her buttocks.

She yelled and the suspect then fled Shaw's. There were no other witnesses but employees did see the suspect leave the store with a friend in a silver vehicle that had an Army sticker, a motorcycle sticker and a "Fox racing" sticker on the back window.

Joyce was known to Cohasset police from a prior arrest.

Based upon the alleged victim's description of the suspect and video surveillance, Cohasset Police Detective Garrett Hunt identified Joyce as a possible suspect in the assault at Shaw's. Cohasset Police Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon and Detective Hunt put a photo array together, in which the alleged victim positively identified Joyce as her assailant.

After seeing reports on the news and a surveillance photo of the man suspected of pulling down a girl's shirt exposing her breast on the T, the alleged victim the notified the Transit Police and told them suspect looked to be the same man who accosted her at Shaw's. The Transit police called Cohasset police. They said based on their investigation they had identified Joyce as their suspect and were in the process of getting an arrest warrant. According to TV reports, several co-workers of Joyce, who works for an investment firm in Cambridge, identified Joyce from the video and notified the Transit Police.

In July of 2006 Joyce was arrested by Cohasset police and charged with assault and battery following an incident at Bassing Beach. According to the police report, Joyce attacked a Cohasset teen, who was walking on the beach with Joyce's former girlfriend. He also attacked his former girlfriend during that incident, the report stated. He was found guilty of assault and battery and was on probation until March of 2008, police records state.

Joyce's lawyer told the media outside Quincy District Court on Friday last week that Joyce is a former Marine, is a college graduate and comes from a well known Scituate family.

Cohasset Chief Mark DeLuca said good police work put the pieces together to get the alleged assailant off the streets.

"It was good teamwork between us and the MBTA police," he said.

Men arrested, later charged with littering

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police said the papers they tore up had their names on them. Both men will be summonsed for a bylaw violation of littering upon a public way.

A 2002 green Volkswagen Beetle was operating southbound on Route 3A at about 1:15 a.m. on Wednesday (July 7) with no operating taillights, police said. Queries of the operator, a 24 year-old Avon man, indicated that his license had been suspended. The man was placed in custody for operating after license suspension and equipment violation (no taillights).

The passenger in the vehicle, a 27-year-old Hanson man, was extremely intoxicated and in no condition to operate the vehicle, police said. The passenger became increasingly agitated at the roadside and refused to move away from the driver's door for the tow driver. Police said he subsequently shoved the officer with his hands in the chest, pushing him back. The passenger was arrested for assault and battery on a public official and disorderly conduct. The vehicle was towed and both parties were later released on personal recognizance; they were scheduled to appear in court on Tuesday (July 13).

Police said the same men, upon being released, tore up their recognizance forms, citation copy and a short-sleeve shirt and dumped them on Elm Street near Brook Street. Police seized and photographed the items. Police said the papers they tore up had their names on them. Both men will be summonsed for a bylaw violation of littering upon a public way.

B & E

On Wednesday, July 7, at about 2p.m., the Cohasset Police Department received a call from a residence on Grace Drive reporting a breaking and entering.

On arrival officers interviewed a 43-year-old old Grace Drive resident who had just arrived home to find an unknown vehicle in his driveway. The resident questioned a lone man who was inside of a GMC Envoy sport utility vehicle. The man stated that he was looking for the residents' teenage son.

Police said the resident then noticed that his front door had been kicked in. As he went to investigate, two men fled from the rear of his home and the man in the Envoy fled the driveway. The resident recognized one of the men that ran from the rear of the home as his 19-year-old neighbor..

Investigators on scene discovered that 19-year-old neighbor and another man had piled-up loot from the house in the rear yard. They were interrupted when the resident came home.

Police arrested the 19-year-old Cohasset teen for breaking & entering in the daytime with intent to commit a felony; malicious destruction of property over $250; and larceny from a building.

Police arrested and charged the 20-year-old Hingham man who had been outside in the SUV with being an accessory after the fact.

Cut finger

A 23-year-old man was taken to the hospital by Advanced Life Support ambulance after cutting off part of his finger from his left hand with the blade of a wood splitter. The call about the accident on Cushing Road came in at 10:15 a.m. on Monday (July 5). Police said the severed part of the finger was recovered.

MV accidents

• At 3:44 p.m. on Monday (July 5), police responded to a minor motor vehicle accident at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Pond Street. Police said a 1997 Honda Civic operated by a 19-year-old Scituate woman struck the rear of a 2004 Chevrolet Silverado, operated by a 17-year-old Braintree boy, who had stopped at the light. There were no apparent injuries; one vehicle was towed and the Scituate woman was cited for failure to slow at an intersection.

• At 11:43 a.m. on Tuesday (July 6), a 1999 Subaru Legacy, operated by at 29-year-old Cohasset woman, was traveling south on Route 3A when suddenly the hood of the vehicle popped up, shattering the windshield. Police said the hood had not been secured. There were no apparent injuries; the vehicle was towed due to the damage to the windshield and inability to secure the hood. There are no current recalls for this vehicle, police said.

• At 1:36 p.m., on Tuesday (July 6), a 73-year-old Beechwood Street man reported that he had discovered tire marks along a grassy berm at the end of his driveway. Police investigation revealed that a vehicle traveling east on Beechwood crossed over into the westbound lane, hopped the curbing, and drove across the end of the man's driveway. A wooden numbered sign was damaged, and a black plastic fairing from the undercarriage of the suspect vehicle was left behind, police said. There are no suspects at this time. The resident thinks the accident occurred sometime between 6:15 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Bike missing

A caller reported last Tuesday (July 6) that his son's bike was taken from the Cohasset High School field during Relay For Life in June. The bike is a red, white and black Trek 3800. Police said the bike has not been turned into them.

Yelled at

At 4:48 p.m., on Thursday (July 8), a caller reported that 20 minutes earlier, a man in a blue Chevrolet Blazer had been violently screaming at an elderly female in the Shaw's parking lot. When the man finished he and the woman both got into the Blazer and drove off. Police said the vehicle came back to a Cohasset address. Further investigation revealed the woman's 60-year-old son had been yelling at her because she drove a vehicle with no brakes to Shaw's. Police said it was a verbal argument over driving the vehicle with mechanical problems. There were no physical contact or 209A (restraining order) issues.

Computer checks

• A computer check on a parked vehicle in the town lot at 10:27 a.m. on Saturday (July 10) revealed that the registration on the1997 Audi A-6 was revoked for insurance cancellation.

The owner, a 25-year-old Plymouth woman, was issued a citation in–hand, after exiting the Red Lion Inn, for operating an uninsured motor vehicle.

• A computer check on the registration on a 2003 Dodge Ram truck operating southbound on Route 3A at 2:14 p.m. on Sunday (July 11) indicated that the registration had been revoked for insurance cancellation. This same vehicle was towed and the owner, a 59-year-old Marshfield man, will be summonsed for operating an uninsured motor vehicle and revoked registration.

Lightning

At 3:08 p.m. on Saturday (July 10), a caller reported the beach had been closed due to lightning but there was a wedding party on the beach refusing to leave. An officer spoke to all parties involved.

Happy screaming

Apparently a new boat owner in the Bancroft Road area could not contain her excitement and was screaming. But a concerned caller notified police at 11:26 p.m. on Saturday (July 10)) about the screams. Police investigation revealed there were no problems. It was just "happy screaming," police said.

Vandalism

At 8:29 a.m., on Sunday (July 11), a 30-year-old Beechwood Street caller reports sometime overnight his mailbox and wooden post were damaged. There are no suspects at this time, police said.

Owl stuck

On Sunday (July 11) at about 6:30 p.m. Crocker Lane, an owl was freed from the soccer net at the old Graham Waste facility, now a multi-use athletic complex, and taken by the Animal Control Officer to the New England Wildlife Center for treatment. The owl is doing well and responding to treatment, police said.

Mother Of Two In The Best Shape Of Her Life!

Before

After the age of 50, unwanted weight slowly crept up. At 55, I no longer fit into my clothes. I tried the gym but felt directionless. I didn't know what worked and what didn't and there was no one there to motivate and support me.

I have now lost all 15 of those pounds, and I am in the best shape of my life! Having changed my eating habits, I am never hungry. More significantly, my cholesterol has dropped from 235 to 190. I still have to buy new clothes, but now they're two sizes smaller!

Studio proposal

Cable committee eyes school space

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cable Advisory Committee initially planned to carve out an area in the front of the Town Hall auditorium to build the television studio.

Cohasset is still without a television studio, but efforts are being made to find a home for local cable programming.

Last year, with the advent of the competition, cable TV providers are approaching local access television, dubbed public, educational and governmental access, differently. For the last quarter century, Cohasset has utilized a television studio on Route 53 in Norwell (and before that a studio in North Scituate) to film local programming like the popular local talk show "Our Town."

But a year ago, Comcast closed its Norwell studio and left the area towns without the ability to produce local access television. The cable providers are now hand the money (from the subscribers) to the town to create and maintain their own studio.

The Cable Advisory Committee initially planned to carve out an area in the front of the Town Hall auditorium to build the television studio. Yet, the project has now gone out to bid twice and returned with estimates roughly double what has been budgeted.

"We tried to simplify the project the second time around, but the bids were still high," Cable Advisory Committee member and Selectman Paul Carlson said.

Now, the Cable Advisory Committee is now looking to utilize space at the Middle-High School. During the renovation of the school a space for a studio and a control room was incorporated, but never outfitted with the studio equipment. The space is located adjacent to the library. The "studio" space is used as classroom during school hours.

Carlson said it's possible the community could use the room after 2p.m. when school ends.

In late June, the Cable Advisory Committee sent a letter to the School Committee requesting to talk about using the space for local cable access.

The School Committee, which had just received the request the same day as their meeting, indicated they would take up the discussion at a later meeting.

Carlson said there were many details – access, security, rent – that would have to be worked out before the studio could use the space.

The former boatyard/car dealership on Route 3A near the Scituate line is going to become the site of an Aubuchon Hardware store.

look at this location," Staszko said, who also owns the Cohasset Plaza property. "We have had a lot of interest in the property (over the years) but this one came to fruition."

In the past 20 years, the property has been a series of different businesses: Chevrolet dealerships, Bayside Boats and most recently a portion was occupied by All Four Paws, a dog daycare and grooming business. But, the main part of the building with the large showroom windows has been vacant for several years.

"(Aubuchon) is very well known and very well established," Staszko said of his new tenant. "I'm happy to have the building leased and happy to have a family-run business coming to the area."

Aubuchon Hardware has made a name for itself in the hardware business over the last century. The fourth generation of Aubuchons is now running the business, which has over 140 stores in the New England and New York area. Aubuchon is based in Westminster, Mass.

The South Shore is not one of the hardware chain's strongholds. According to their website, the closest Aubuchon Hardware is located in Kingston.

Locally owned Joseph's Do It Best hardware chain closed abruptly in February leaving the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Marshfield, Norwell and Plymouth down one hardware store. In 2007, the iconic Cohasset Hardware store closed its doors in the village.

"They are really replacing a hardware store," Building Inspector Bob Egan said.

Egan prepared the building permits for the renovations to the 16,000-square-foot building. Most of the improvements are being done to the interior of the building to make it look less like a car showroom and more like a hardware store. Plans call for closing in the glass windows on the side of the building.

Six-year-old survives third-story fall

On Monday night an Atlantic Avenue family had the scare of their life.

A six-year-old Cohasset boy fell from a third-story roof around 7p.m., but police said he did not have life-threatening injuries.

The boy was playing on an outdoor deck with his siblings when he climbed over a railing and onto a steep section of roof. He lost his footing and fell 25 to 30 feet.

The parents, who were home at the time, called 9-1-1. A police officer happened to be in the area and arrived on scene almost immediately. A Scituate ambulance transported the boy to Boston Medical Center where he received treatment.

The boy's name was not released, but police said he suffered a broken wrist, broken jaw and a deep cut on his chin. Chief Mark DeLuca paid a visit to the boy at the hospital and said he "looked great" considering the severity of the accident and was on his way to recovery.

Schools post middle school music position

recommend an additional music teacher for the Middle High School."

Antolini said if a middle school music teacher was hired the average class size at the high school would be six students per class in band and 12 in chorus. In contrast, the average class size in other disciplines at the High School, with the exception of Foreign Language (17), will exceed 20, Antolini stated.

Antolini is on vacation this week and could not be reached for comment.

A week later, Antolini posted a second, very brief, announcement to inform the community that a middle school music teacher would be sought after all.

"A number of people have shared their concerns regarding what they perceive to be a cut in the Middle-High School music program. In spite of the student requests, we will seek a replacement music teacher for the Middle School, and will assign the High School teachers accordingly," Antolini said.

Applicants for the middle-school music (band and chorus) teacher position must apply by Wednesday, July 21.

Septic assistance on horizon

State grant program available for a failed Title 5

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We'd encourage people in the Lily Pond, Aaron River Reservoir area to take advantage of the program."
— Selectmen Chairman Karen Quigley

For those with failing septic systems — or getting ready to tie into town sewer — financial assistance may be on the way.

Board of Health member Steve Bobo and Health Inspector Tara Tradd came before the Selectmen Monday night to discuss the possibility of the town implementing a sewer betterment program to assist homeowners when their Title 5 system failed.

The betterment program allows communities to loan out money for sewer improvements so the expense can be paid back over time (with interest).

The loans can be used for the repair, replacement or upgrade of a failed on-site system. On-site sewage disposal systems options include conventional septic systems (Title 5), innovative/alternative systems and connections to an existing sewer, if available.

The Community Septic Management Program is a state-run program. It is provided to towns through a state revolving fund loan at zero percent interest. Through an application process, the town then re-loans the money out to homeowners at a 5 percent interest rate. The homeowners then pay back the loan over 20 years. The loan is transferable if the property is sold.

"It's a really neat program and the state gives the money with pretty clear guidelines, but leaves it somewhat open-ended so it can be tailored to the community and its needs," Tradd said. She suggested a working group be formed to establish the specifics to make it work in Cohasset.

A Town Meeting vote is necessary to enter into the betterment program. The vote would allow the town to borrow the money, but the program is not designed to burden the town with more taxes. The homeowner receiving the betterment loans undertakes the primary repayment obligation. A municipal lien is placed on a property if the participating homeowner defaults.

The Board of Health would run the program, but the state provides a $25,000 grant to start-up the program. Tradd said other municipalities contract out to a consultant to administer the program. Pembroke and Hanson have been part of the program for several years.

Selectman Paul Carlson asked how many properties might be in need of assistance in a given year. Tradd said there could be about 15 upgrades a year.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley was concerned potential participation could be high because of the high cost associated with Little Harbor homes tying in to the town sewer system. She suggested the town might want to go for a larger loan amount to ensure all those interested could take advantage.

"We'd encourage people in the Lily Pond, Aaron River Reservoir area to take advantage of the program," because of their close proximity to the drinking water source, Quigley said.

However, Selectman Leland Jenkins was concerned with taking an ambitious course, because if homeowners defaulted the town is likely liable to pay the state back. "Maybe we should start off slower," Jenkins said.

Quigley said there are some details that need to be ironed out and she hoped the Board of Health would host a forum to answer questions before the issue was brought before Town Meeting.

"It sounds like it could be a great thing for the community. Thanks for investigating it and bringing it forward," Quigley said.

Sewer betterment deferral

The Sewer Commission has determined they will allow eligible taxpayers to defer their sewer betterment charge (for Little Harbor sewer expansion) in the same way that they can defer their property tax bills. Contact the Assessor's Office at Town Hall for more information.

Cohasset students attend Boys and Girls State

Wigmore said choosing students to represent the town starts with a call to the high school to ask for recommendations. Then, Wigmore interviews the candidates. The students must have a strong interest in government and politics.

About 850 boys and girls from around the state attended the program this year.

"These kids are the cream of the crop in their schools," Wigmore said. The Sons of the American Legion (Boys State) and the Legion Auxiliary (Girls State) sponsor the students, paying for their room and board.

"These kids go the program and make friends for the rest of their life," Wigmore said. Many of the students return year after year as counselors. "I take pride in the kids that we picked. It's worth every penny – the kids get a lot of education out of it."

For Cohasset's Girls State participant, Jenny Curley, the experience was "life-changing." Not only did she learn a lot about government, but also gained self-confidence.

"I take pride in the kids that we picked. It's worth every penny – the kids get a lot of education out of it."
— Tom Wigmore, Sons of the American Legion

"I came out of my shell and made a lot of friends," Jenny, 18, said. She will begin her senior year at Cohasset High in the fall. "I didn't want to come home; I had a lot of fun."

Jenny traveled to Stonehill College not really knowing what to expect. When she arrived the girls were broken up into "towns" where official s were chosen and there were problems to solve.

"They gave us different incidents and we had to figure out how to solve them as a town," Jenny said. "It showed me how much it takes to run a town."

Each day one of the activities was to hold a town meeting and talk about what needed to be accomplished in the town.

"I learned a lot about myself. It will always be some-thing I remember," Jenny said. She is already making plans to have some of the friends she made spend a weekend in Cohasset.

Messages were left for the Cohasset Boys State representatives, but were not returned by press time.

Two representatives from each Boys State are chosen to represent their state as senators at the Boys and Girls Nation in Washington, D.C.

The Boys and Girls State program is just one of the many opportunities the Legion supports for young people, Wigmore said. The Legion also sends interested youth to a Student Trooper program with the State Police, offers college scholarships and supports the Legion baseball team.

If a high school junior is interested in attending Boys or Girls State next year, contact Tom Wigmore by sending an e-mail to wiggy3604@aol.com.

End-of-year budget transfers

There were 13 end of year budget transfers approved on Monday night by the Board of Selectmen. It is typical at the end of the year for some accounts to have deficits and others to have surpluses. The transfers need joint approval from the Advisory Committee and the Board of Selectmen.

A total of $213,741 was in deficit. The largest line items were police overtime ($65,884), police expenses ($39,532) and snow and ice ($50,922).

A good portion of the deficit will be paid out of the Reserve Fund ($79,942) and health insurance line item ($105,416).

"This is one of my least favorite things to do," Town Manager Bill Griffin said. As a result, next year's budget has been adjusted as much as possible to include more money for those line items that routinely run deficits.

"We tried to get ahead," Griffin said. For example, an additional $60,000 was added to the police overtime budget this year.

The police union contract was recently ratified and includes more flexible rules on minimum manning, which should save substantial overtime costs.

Water audit

The request for proposals (RFP) has been issued for the water department budget and operation audit.

Town Manager Bill Griffin reported there has been some interest in the job. Ten firms have expressed interest in the town's water department audit RFP. An RFP is a solicitation and outline of services the town is seeking.

Following the water department's financial crisis this past spring, many in town made calls for a complete and thorough audit of the department's finances and past operational practices. With the help of the water planning group, Griffin developed the RFP to solicit an agency to audit the water department's finances, capital spending program and operations.

Griffin said he expects at least five firms to submit proposals.

Cohasset swimmer joins Swim Across America

Deborah Thomas of Cohasset has joined Swim Across America to make a splash for pediatric cancer survivorship programs at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. The Boston Harbor 22-mile relay swim will take place Friday, July 16, and the Nantasket Beach 1-1/2 mile swims are on Saturday, July 17. Thomas plan to do the Nantasket swim.

"The swims are a great way for people to come together and participate in a sport they love alongside Olympic swimming legends while raising critical funds for the David. B. Perini Jr., Quality of Life Clinic at Dana-Farber," said 1988 Olympic Silver Medalist Janel Jorgensen, who is also the executive director of the organization. "This year Craig Beardsley, Carlton Brunner, Tim McGee and Jenny Thompson are among the Olympians scheduled to swim with us."

Swimmers taking part in the one and half-mile competitive ocean swims at Nantasket Beach in Hull must raise a minimum of $250 each.

Swim Across America is a nonprofit corporation that organizes events to support cancer research at hospitals and institutions. Proceeds from the Boston-area swims go directly to the David B. Perini, Jr. Quality of Life Program at Dana-Farber, where experts help pediatric cancer survivors with an array of issues.

Surf's up for veterans

Bonanno organizes surfing event in Hull

By Benjamin Brown
BBROWN@CNC.COM

Last year, Scituate resident Rich Bonanno watched a television special on surfers on the West Coast who helped wounded veterans regain a lost hobby. A longtime volunteer and dedicated surfer himself, he decided to bring the service east.

On Sunday, July 18, at 8 a.m. at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse in Hull, an event mirroring one held in San Diego is meant to help wounded veterans forget their troubled past, whether they're plagued by bad memories or lost limbs. Bonanno said organizers would do everything they can to make sure veterans get up on a board.

"Our goal is to get them up on that board," he said. "We're going to get them up, get them wet, then have them fall down. Let them forget where they've been or what they've seen. We'll get them up on the boards one way or another. We're going to look at these people as surfers, not as people with disabilities."

Starting small in the first year, Bonanno said the program would help about a dozen veterans from the South Shore, but the opportunity to expand is on the table, with another round scheduled in August and plans to bring it back again next year.

Bonanno said he and the other surfers want to create a relaxed atmosphere, which meant shying away from sponsors, entertainers and politicians.

"We had plenty of offers, but we refused them," he said. "This is the veterans' day. We don't want anybody to go up and upstage them. If a celebrity shows up, then the attention goes to them and not to the veterans."

Bonanno and his volunteers are working with the Department of Veteran Affairs in Boston to plan the event.

"After weeks of planning, I finally spoke to the VA in Boston," he said. "They loved the idea."

After missing the chance to bring the program across the country last year, Bonanno said he took increased care this time around, progressing through the necessary channels. He started by seeking help from two of the most dedicated surfers he knows.

"They said, 'Sure,' and that's what got me to get the ball rolling," he said. "Then I went through all the channels, which probably took a week or two."

The bureaucratic process wasn't especially long, but could have taken more time. Fortunately, Bonanno said everybody in the multi-step process seemed eager to bestow their approval.

"Everybody loved the idea and nobody said no," he said. "But when they say yes, they do it at their own speed. It was a difficult process. I made some mistakes, but I'm not new to volunteering or doing this kind of thing."

For 26 years, Bonanno worked as a volunteer and head staff member for the Pan-Mass Challenge, one of the nation's oldest athletic fundraisers.

Cell tower license agreement

The look of the First Parish Church might be a little more historical going forward.

As part of T-Mobile's installation of a cell tower in the church's steeple the electrical wires, will be placed underground. The Board of Selectmen approved a license agreement to allow the wires to be placed underground on the Common.

The wooden spire, which is not original to the building, is being replaced with a fiberglass replica that will better facilitate the cell operations. The outside of the building will look largely the same.

First Parish is the latest in a number of local churches that have let cell phone companies house antennas in their spires.

Parishioners Mary Parker and Art Myles came before the Board of Selectmen to present the license agreement. The agreement has been under review and in negotiation with Town Counsel for several weeks.

Last year, T-Mobile approached First Parish about installing three panel antennas within a proposed steeple at a height of 64 feet above ground level. In order for the antennas to work properly, the wooden steeple will need to be replaced with a fiberglass replacement, which T-Mobile said will match the current steeple in design, dimension, color, texture and other visual qualities. Support equipment will need to be installed in the basement level of the building as well.

The Meetinghouse is unique in that it is a privately owned building on public land. The land surrounding the First Parish church, the Town Common, is town property; the First Parish congregation owns just the building and the land beneath it. The electrical wiring running from a telephone pole surrounding the common to the building will be moved underground.

The license agreement may be converted to an easement at fall Town Meeting. An easement would provide a more permanent agreement, whereas the license can be revoked at any time.

"(The license agreement) looks like it was written to protect the town very well," said Selectmen chair Karen Quigley. A 4-0 vote approved the license agreement (Selectman Ted Carr was not present).

Committee goes to summer school

Board gets trained on role, responsibilities

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Like teachers and administrators, the members of the School Committee need professional development in order to better understand the complexities, powers and limitations of their role.

To that end, the School Committee invited Jim Hardy, a field manager for the Massachusetts Association of School Committees (MASC), in for a workshop on Wednesday night.

This is the second time this year Hardy has paid a visit to the Cohasset School Committee. They held a workshop in January as well.

Subjects from the new Open Meeting Law to talking to the media to the upcoming superintendent's search were covered. The workshop was more of an informal round table discussion with the school committee members bringing up past experiences, practices and then discussing how to operate better.

When talking to the media and members of the community, Hardy reminded the members that they should keep in mind that they are always perceived as a school committee member.

"When you represent the committee you have the obligation to represent the position of the committee," Hardy said. But, members have the right to offer their opinion, if different than the committee's opinion.

Hardy cautioned against school committee members offering their opinion on subjects that have not been discussed as a full board.

A recent example locally was the controversy over the possibility of regionalizing services and/or schools with Hull. The topic caused more media interest than the Cohasset school committee might have expected, especially considering the topic had not been discussed at a committee meeting.

The Boston Globe did a story quoting several school committee members before the committee was able to discuss the topic. Then radio station WBUR picked up the story a couple of weeks later interviewing local students and residents.

"(The radio program) was not very kind to the Cohasset school district," said Paul Schubert, school committee member. Schubert said the committee members had to be careful how they interact with a reporter and choose their words wisely.

"We have to get better at that, we really have to get better," said School Committee chair Helene Lieb.

The workshop also discussed how to ensure all school committee members – and if the issue calls for it, members of the public – are heard. School Committee member Alfred Slanetz said sometimes he feels "cut off" when he is expressing his point of view.

"Maybe we need a more formal process," Slanetz said. He suggested having a set time for an opening statement from each of the school committee members.

When it came to public input Hardy said the committee has to use discretion. "Legally the public has no right to participate…(a school committee meeting) is a meeting in public not a public meeting."

Hardy said the committee's first obligation is to conduct the business of the schools and get through the agenda. The committee had to draw a line between allowing the public to offer input and letting them take over the meeting, Hardy said.

'Chain of command'

At times, especially when there is controversy, the public turns to the school committee as a forum to air their grievances. Many times it's the only place where a person feels they can be heard.

Hardy cautioned the school committee against getting involved in issues they might not have control over.

"You have to respect the chain of command that exists in the district," Hardy said, adding the school committee should not be used to bypass the school principals and the superintendent.

A recent example is the discussion on whether to hire a middle school music teacher. The school committee held a lengthy discussion at an open meeting, but did not take a formal position. The committee does not have any control over hiring in the district, except with the superintendent.

"In that case you need to direct discussion back to where it belongs" with the superintendent or principal, Hardy said. The school committee did ask the participants that night to direct their comments to the school principal because that's where the decision ultimately was made.

Superintendent search

In the coming year the school committee will be undertaking what may be argued as its most important responsibility – hiring a superintendent.

"The hiring of the superintendent is under your sole discretion…you can involve no one or everyone in the process," Hardy said.

He suggested the School Committee begin the process of developing a five-year strategic plan before beginning a search. Establishing the school's vision is crucial to finding the right person, Hardy said.

"You want to bring someone in that has the same vision, and to do that you need to have a vision," Hardy said. Specific goals and action plan could be developed after a superintendent is on board.

In beginning to define what the community is looking for in a superintendent, Hardy suggested the committee seek out various stakeholders and ask them three questions.

First, how would you narrow down candidates if given only their applications? What would you look for in their education, job background and letters of reference? Second, name the challenges the next superintendent may face in the coming years. Third, if given the chance to interview the finalists what question or topic would you like discussed/answered?

The answers to the three questions will paint a picture of what the community is looking for in the leader of the school district, he said.

Hardy also suggested the committee look at the school district as a whole to evaluate what is needed in a new superintendent.

"You want to find someone stronger in some areas, but you don't want to lose the strengths (the current superintendent) has," Hardy said.

As a final piece of advice at the conclusion of the two-hour session, Hardy said: "The past is the past. September starts a new school year and go forward from there."

Register now for tennis benefit

The annual Cohasset Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital Boston is now open for summer 2010 registration. The tournament is scheduled for the weekend of July 23, 24 and 25.

The two-day tournament begins with an evening reception at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Cohasset Harbor on Friday, July 23, followed by mixed-doubles tennis played on private courts throughout Cohasset on Saturday and Sunday, July 24 and 25. Teams of all levels and abilities are invited to play and are matched with comparable players.

This year the tournament will benefit the Children's Hospital Pediatric Multiple Sclerosis program that helps children and teens afflicted with MS. The program is also a leading center for pioneering MS medical research.

The Cohasset Tennis Benefit is a tradition that began in the 1950s when the legendary Jesse Cox gathered family and friends for a weekend of tennis to benefit Children's Hospital Boston.

Tennis registration is taken on a first-come first-served basis and is $200 per team before June 15 and $250 after that date. For more information about the weekend or to register, visit www.cohassettennisbenefit.org.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Welcome Auchubon!

Just as we were thinking that a permanent commercial malaise was settling in – we learned that Auchubon Hardware is coming to town.

The chain is going to open at the former Chevrolet car dealership, later boatyard site on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A), near the Scituate line.

This is terrific news and should help add retail interest and a better streetscape to that part of our state highway.

The large site that for many years was a car dealership has been mostly empty for a long time. There is no doubt that the large commercial/retail space has been a tough one to fill.

It sounds as though Auchubon might just be the right business for the large site. With the departure of Joseph's Hardware from Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell – there certainly should be demand for another hardware store.

It's funny how our eyes grow accustomed to seeing empty buildings and parking lots. Once the new store is in, we will realize what a difference it is going to make.

Does anyone remember the former Cushing Plaza? The once thriving mall had become sorely "dated" before Shaw's Plaza replaced it.

Parts of Route 3A have been in need of redevelopment for some time. Much has been accomplished with refurbished buildings (like the one where Su Escuela is located); new sites, like Old Colony Square and the now, mathematics center at the top of lower King Street.

Unlike Scituate and parts of Marshfield and Hingham — Cohasset has allowed commercial development along its stretch of highway. Scituate's stretch is zoned mostly residential and has kept its wooded appearance.

Cohasset needs the commercial base so we do not bemoan the fact that 3A is built up. But it is the gateway to Cohasset and the way many people travel through our town. Nicely maintained retail and commercial areas that are fully occupied is everyone's goal.

In a tough economy – filling commercial space can be very difficult.

However, we can hope that Auchubon's arrival will be the start of something good.

On risk of injury to the public from wind turbines

STEVE WENNER

At the public hearings on proposed changes to the Cohasset Wind Power By-Law I heard several residents of Cohasset expressing concerns about the safety of wind turbines. Some feared that a structural failure could endanger the public, even with reasonable setback requirements. Since I have some professional skills in risk assessment, I thought it might be a worthwhile exercise to do some risk analysis and put these safety concerns into perspective.

Here I look at turbine safety from three angles. First, I'll discuss fatal accidents that have occurred in the wind power industry. Second, I'll relate some statistics on the relative occupational and public safety of wind power compared to coal power. Last, I'll discuss a hypothetical walk through the woods and compare the risk of injury due to a falling tree with the risk of injury due to a falling piece of a wind turbine.

Fatal accidents to the public from Wind Power

A quick Google search will uncover the Caithness Windfarm Information Forum, an extensive database of 731 wind power related accidents from 1975 through March, 2010. The organization behind this database is a group of concerned citizens in Scotland who have tried hard to compile a comprehensive list of accidents from press reports and other public sources of information. Their list of fatal accidents is probably fairly complete, as events of such seriousness are likely to be covered in the press. Also, their list of fatal accidents includes all those compiled by other, independent researchers. So, what did they find?

1. Traffic accidents claimed five victims. These were mainly people driving along and momentarily distracted by a view of wind turbines operating or under construction. In one case a car ran into a truck carrying turbine parts.

2. Accidents involving aircraft claimed seven victims. In one case a parachutist landed on a wind turbine. In another case a crop dusting plane ran into an anemometer taking wind speed measurements at a prospective wind power site. In two cases small planes crashed in the vicinity of turbines (and in one case hit a tower).

3. One unconfirmed decapitation in a freak boating accident (it was unclear in the report how this was related to wind power).

4. A 60 year-old man was climbing a tower (why?) and lost consciousness.

5. A man broke into a tower and was electrocuted.

6. A farmer who wanted to erect a wind turbine committed suicide because of the strong opposition to the project in his community (he hung himself inside the base of the tower).

7. A 22-year-old construction worker was entertaining his 18-year-old girlfriend in a shed on a wind farm construction site. They died of carbon monoxide poisoning from a faulty heater. I counted one of these deaths as occupational and the other one as public.

You will notice that none of these public deaths involved a piece of a wind turbine falling and striking someone on the ground. In fact, we could easily argue that most of those accidents were only tangentially related to wind power. This does not mean to imply that the public is entirely safe from the risk of a wind turbine falling apart; it will surely happen that someday, someplace, someone will be directly killed by a wind turbine. However, we should try to place that risk into perspective and compare it to the many diverse and highly improbable, but real risks we all face every day.

Health and safety risks of wind power compared to coal power

The 48 deaths experienced by wind power workers shows that the occupational safety risks are not negligible. Can we compare the occupational risks of the wind power industry to, say, the coal power industry? Expressed in terms of the electrical energy generated, the mortality rate in the wind industry was about 0.15 deaths per TWh (trillions of watt-hours of energy). Some researchers say this is roughly equivalent to the mortality rate in the mining, processing and burning of coal to generate electricity; other researchers put wind's mortality rate at about half that of the occupational mortality rate for coal. In either case, the wind industry should certainly strive to improve upon its occupational safety record.

However, the health and safety record of wind versus coal is more one-sided when we consider effects on the public. The above comparison of wind and coal neglects the increases in mortality to the public due to the air pollution that results from the burning of coal. A study in 2004 concluded that in the United States coal-fired power plants shortened nearly 24,000 lives a year, including 2,800 from lung cancer. The EPA countered that more stringent enforcement of the Clean Air Act would reduce the levels of fine particulates in the air and prevent about 18,000 of those deaths. Also, coal combustion releases mercury into our environment and a Harvard University study financed and peer reviewed by the EPA concluded that 600,000 babies born in the U.S. every year may be exposed to hazardous levels of mercury from coal-fired power plants. Of course, these health problems due to coal combustion in the U.S. are far outweighed by much more serious health effects of coal combustion elsewhere in the world, especially in China. The wind power industry has none of these public health problems.

A note on environmental concerns

It is not my purpose here to discuss environmental problems, but I want to at least remind the reader of the serious damage to our environment caused by the fossil fuel industry. Towering above all other environmental problems are the slowly accumulating, but ultimately devastating, effects of climate change. But, these are topics for another day.

Since I have some professional skills in risk assessment, I thought it might be a worthwhile exercise to do some risk analysis and put these safety concerns into perspective.

A walk in the woods

My discussion thus far has addressed generalized risks to society as a whole. Now I want to focus on very personal risks that we could experience in our everyday lives. To this end imagine walking through the woods and, perhaps out of curiosity, approaching a wind turbine in a clearing. I want to compare the risk of being injured by a falling tree on my hike in the woods to the risk of being injured by falling wind turbine parts as I gaze at the machine. By specifying more details in this story it is actually possible to calculate reasonably meaningful numbers to compare the relative risk of these two unfortunate, unlikely but possible, events. So, I beg the reader to bear with me as I flesh out this scenario in more detail.

Last year the Planning Board and residents of Cohasset debated the merits of erecting two wind turbines on Scituate Hill. The proposal was ultimately declared in violation of the current by-law when it was realized that the lay-down radius of one of the two proposed turbines would have crossed over onto abutting conservation land owned by The Trustees of Reservations. Although no homes could be built on the conservation land, that property was still technically zoned as residential and the current by-law stipulates that the lay-down radius cannot cross any residential property line.

When at the first public hearing on proposed changes to the by-law someone pointed out that the Trustees of Reservations would most likely be willing to sign a waver to the residential property line requirement, another Cohasset resident expressed concern that a hiker on conservation land could still be exposed to risk if they approached too close to the turbine. The obvious solution to that concern would be to fence off that section of conservation land close to the turbine. However, for the sake of argument let's assume that the turbine is built and no fence is erected, so that someone could approach close to the turbine from the abutting conservation land.

To make the problem more concrete, let's assume that our walker starts at the Turkey Hill parking lot and walks along hiking trails through Whitney and Thayer Woods heading toward an exit at a second parking lot opposite Sohier Street. Toward the end of this approximately two-mile walk, assume that our hiker bushwhacks a short distance toward the site of the turbine and spends a minute standing a half-radius distance away to gaze at the turbine. I calculate that during his walk in the woods the hiker is incurring a risk of nearly three chances in a million of being struck and seriously injured or killed by a falling tree, while his chances of being similarly struck by falling turbine parts are less than 80 chances in a trillion. That is, the odds of being killed by a falling tree are more than 35 thousand times greater than the odds of being killed by falling turbine parts.

Of course, both trees and turbines are much more likely to fall during a storm than during good weather. To make my calculation I assume that our hiker sets a random date for his excursion and is not deterred by inclement weather ("neither rain nor sleet nor gloom of night ..."). The rest of this note is to explain the details of my calculations for the sake of those who are strangely curious and to demonstrate to critics that I am not just making these numbers up. In fact, at several points I have been conservative in my calculations; I actually think that the tree-fall risk relative to the turbine-fall risk is considerably greater than 35000:1.

Before I get into the details, I should mention that an actual calculation seems almost beside the point. Anyone who walks in woods will notice many menacing trees (large, dead or nearly-dead crags that look as if the next breath of wind would topple them over). If one of these trees happened to appear in our back yards, we would waste no time removing them before they fell onto our house during the next storm. On the other hand, modern wind turbines are engineered and built to withstand the strongest storms encountered at their sites (this was not always so; in 1998 129 of 315 turbines on several wind farms on the west coast of India were destroyed during a cyclone with winds in excess of 140 mph - investigations revealed that the turbines were not designed to withstand such violent winds and regulations were revised to correct that problem).

Details: the risk of injury from a falling tree

First, I'll explain my calculation for the risk of being struck by a falling tree. A major part of this calculation is to estimate the number of trees that are likely to fall across the hiking trail each year. I arrived at this number (29 trees falling across the path per year) by two completely different methods, which gave surprisingly similar results. The first method was a theoretical calculation which used U.S. Forest Service data on the average density of trees in the Northeast, the average height of mature trees (maples, oaks and white pines) and their average lifespan; from these figures I calculated the expected number of trees falling across the path per year. For math nerds I'll mention one interesting aspect of the calculation: if a tree rooted very close to the path falls, it has nearly a half chance of falling across the path; on the other hand, if the tree is situated off the path at a distance nearly equal to its height, then the chance of it falling across the path is nearly zero. On average, the odds of a tree placed randomly within a tree-height of the path falling across the path is 1/pi; this is known as "Buffon's Needle Problem," first proposed in the 18th century by Georges-Louis Leclerc, Comte de Buffon.

The second method of estimating the number of trees likely to fall across the path per year was much more fun. My wife, daughter and I actually hiked the trail in question and counted the number of dead, or nearly dead, trees overhanging the path and likely to fall across the path in the next storm. To attempt to be more accurate, I actually assigned probabilities to each candidate tree to adjust for the chances of it falling across the path and doing so within a year; for instance, if a tree looked to be on its last legs and I judged it likely to fall within the next five years and it appeared to have about a half chance of landing on the path, I gave it a count of 1/2 x 1/5 = 0.1 toward the total. This method of calculation led to numerous debates with my wife and daughter, who thought I was being too conservative in my judgments. As a check, we also counted the number of trees lying across the path which appeared to have fallen in the last year. As it turned out, the number of trees which had actually fallen was about half of the number of trees that looked about to fall; so, I averaged these two totals. The end result was a figure a bit higher than the theoretical result; so, to be conservative, I used the lower theoretical result for the number of trees likely to fall across the path.

Next, I needed to estimate the average length of path that would be struck by a random tree falling along or across the path. At this point my math skills and energy wavered; so, rather than perform a somewhat pretentious, pseudo-exact mathematical calculation, I relied on a rough and ready approximate, but conservative, calculation: I conservatively estimated that on average a tree falling across the path would cover 5.5 feet of path. This implied that cumulatively over the course of a year 1.6 percent of the path would be hit by a falling tree. Combining this number with the time at risk walking on the trail (around 90 minutes) and the number of minutes in a year, I finally arrived at the three in a million chances of being struck by a falling tree.

Details: the risk of injury from falling turbine parts

The estimation of the risk of being struck by falling turbine parts is much simpler than the above calculation for the risk of being struck by a falling tree. To start, I tallied the number of 2009 accidents in the Caithness Windfarm Accident Database where structural failure resulted in parts of the turbine structure falling to the ground. There were 25 such incidents. Now I needed some idea of how complete that database is. One particular turbine failure was reported to the Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee by someone with personal knowledge of the accident, independent of the Caithness database or any press report; the fact that this failure was subsequently found among those listed in the Caithness compilation lends some confidence that the database is, perhaps, not too incomplete. But for the purposes of my analysis I supposed that the database only captured half of the incidents; so, I have assumed that there were actually 50 incidents of turbines dropping parts, rather than 25 incidents.

Information available on the internet suggests that there are currently about 120,000 operating commercial scale turbines, worldwide. With the 50 failures I estimate occurred in 2009, this gives an annual rate of 4 failure incidents per 10,000 in turbines in operation. Now, if we are standing at a random spot on an imaginary circle about the base of the tower, at a radius of half the total height of the turbine, what are the odds we would be struck if parts fell from the tower? I haven't done a detailed analysis of this question, but for the purposes of my risk assessment I'll assume the risk is 10 percent; actually, I think the risk is considerably less than that, but I want to be conservative and err on the side of overstating, rather than understating, the risk of injury associated with wind power.

Multiplying together the probability that our imaginary Scituate Hill turbine will shed parts sometime during the year by the probability that the falling parts will hit us and by the fraction of time (one minute in the course of a year) that we plan on spending in the shadow of the tower, we finally arrive at the 80 chances in a trillion of being stuck by falling turbine parts. Dividing the risk of injury from a falling tree by the risk of injury from falling turbine parts, we conclude that the odds of injury from a tree falling on us during our walk is about 35,000 times greater than the odds of injury while gazing at the wind turbine.

Summation

Admittedly, this calculation is only half-serious. But, the take-home message is that, in the grand scheme of things, the risk of injury from a wind turbine is so much less than the sort of risks we normally accept without a second thought (e.g., the risk of a tree falling on us as we walk through the woods) that we should not be overly concerned. We should not let irrational fears of extremely unlikely accidents affect the decisions we make as we live our lives.

HEALTH NOTES

Helping to define 'Senior Center'

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The demographics are simple. Cohasset is no longer a bedroom community for those with jobs out of Town who commute to other places to earn a living.

Living in the Community — The services a community provides can vary substantially depending on the needs of its citizens. And with the preponderance of individuals in Cohasset above age 50 approaching half the population in Town, the services and facilities necessary to accommodate the citizenry need to be reviewed. The demographics are simple. Cohasset is no longer a bedroom community for those with jobs out of Town who commute to other places to earn a living.

Not to say that our youth and its training is not important, but it no longer makes sense to avoid the necessary facilities and services needed for the town's other citizens. Accordingly this article discusses the need to accommodate its mature citizens of all ages. It never makes good sense to support one group of citizens to the detriment of another. Accordingly, our administrators and managers must find a way to accommodate — and pay for a variety of needs in Town.

This column will therefore speak about a need long since left unfulfilled: a true community center for groups of all ages with families in and around Cohasset and elsewhere. In conventional argot, unfortunately, this facility is sometimes called a 'Senior Center" a term which seems to direct one to an old-age home. If we choose to look at Cohasset as a town with more than 50 percent of its population over age 40 we find that most are candidates for successful independent living in their own home, providing appropriate services are available. And the functions and character of a so-called senior center take on an entirely different aspect.

"What is a Senior Center?" I've chosen to answer this question this way. A Senior Center can be anything but in simplest terms, it's a home away from home.

Factors affecting life in a small community: Everyone has a home. It may be modest or palatial it doesn't really matter. The important thing is that when you get there, there's generally someone there waiting for you. Someone to talk to, to listen to music, watch TV or read with. There's someone with whom to share a meal or help with your concerns.

Now, consider going home and there is no one there. No one to talk to, or share a meal, or help you with your coat, or listen to your concerns. Just nothing but four walls and emptiness.

A Senior Center is also a home. But when you go there, there is always someone there. Someone to be your family, someone who cares for you, ready to dine with you, always ready to listen or help. It doesn't matter who or what you are, it's always there for you.

You may feel you don't need it. But when the time comes, wouldn't it be nice and reassuring to know it will be there.

Much more to be said about this topic For more information call Tara Tradd 781 383-4116.

VETERANS

Veterans' website enhanced

The Town of Cohasset website includes information from all of its departments and offices, and the Veterans Agent website has been enhanced. It now provides many key telephone contacts and website addresses. However, it is not all inclusive as that would exponentially increase the size of the files and make it more difficult to use.

For more information, call the Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services at 781-383-05 or email cohjoe@aol.com.

2010 Paint Collection Days

Paint collection days will be held at the Recycling Transfer Facility on the last Saturday of the month through October from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Residents are encouraged to dry out latex paint using cat litter, sand or paint hardener which can then be thrown out with regular trash. Empty cans may then be thrown into the tin can container.

Fire engine sold to Scituate

23-year-old truck will go to Humarock station

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"The price is good for Scituate and the price is good for Cohasset."
— Fire Chief Robert Silvia

A fire truck that has lived out its useful life in Cohasset will head to Scituate to take on a new role.

The 1987 Pierce Dash Rescue Pumper that has served as Cohasset's reserve piece for more than seven years is being sold to the Town of Scituate. The pumper truck will take up residence at Scituate's Humarock station.

Town Meeting approved the purchase of a new pumper truck last spring and the truck is expected to be in service by early September. With the new piece of equipment, the 23-year-old pumper truck will become surplus for the town.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia looked into what the value of the truck is on the open market. However, most outfits that would take an aging truck, such as volunteer fire departments in rural areas, need a larger holding tank. Because Cohasset has a fully built out water system the pumper truck only has a 1000-gallon holding tank. Most of the demand on the market is for a 1000-gallon water tank or greater.

"The truck is in great shape, but it isn't a high value piece of equipment," Silvia told the Board of Selectmen Monday night. The resale value is between $12,000 and $15,000.

In a conversation with Scituate Fire Chief Rick Judge, Silvia found out the single truck at the Humarock station was about to fall apart. From there the fire chiefs negotiated a deal to sell the truck for $14,000.

"The price is good for Scituate and the price is good for Cohasset," Silvia said, adding Scituate plans to use it in a very limited capacity for the next two to three years.

The sale is an "as is" sale, but Silvia was confident the truck would pass inspection.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley asked if the truck could run for the next two years, what was the reasoning behind the new purchase.

Silvia said the fire engines are on a regular replacement schedule designed to extend the life of the asset as much as possible. The truck serves as a frontline piece for roughly seven years, then a back-up piece, and finally a reserve piece, in the case one of the first two trucks needs to go out for repair.

In Humarock, the engine will have a very "unique role," Silvia said. The truck will only go out on calls between 50 and 60 times a year and will have very limited distance to travel.

The Board of Selectmen authorized the inter-municipal agreement enabling the sale of the rescue pumper. It will be delivered to Scituate after Cohasset's new truck is in service.

Beaches open; Little Harbor gets high result

The water sample at Little Harbor was over the safe limit this week. The Board of Health reported results for the sampling site as 110 cfu/100mL. The safe level cut off is 100.

Because Little Harbor is not a popular swimming spot and there is no beach, the state only requires sampling at that location once a month. Health Inspector Tara Tradd said a re-sample would be taken on Thursday to ensure this sample was anomaly. When the sample was taken there was an "orange gel" in the viscinity, Tradd said.

"We're re-sampling just to see what's happening," Tradd said. Results of the re-sample will be back on Friday.

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed or a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five week period.

This week's results

Results indicate the number of colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters (cfu/100mL).

Each summer Tuesday morning the Board of Health, aided by students from the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR), takes samples from six locations: Bassing Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock.

The results are posted on the Department of Public Health's website. Testing results for all sampling stations are available on the Department of Public Health website dating back to the summer of 2002.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE, Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on four roll calls and the votes of local senators on one roll call from the week of July 5-9.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT REORGANIZATION (H 4820)

House 145-4, approved a bill that would reorganize the state's economic development agencies. Provisions consolidate agencies that play a role in attracting business to the state into the Massachusetts Marketing Partnership, which would act as the central marketing organization of Massachusetts; create a state sales tax-free holiday on August 14 and 15; reduce from 5.3 percent to 3 percent the capital gains tax rate on investments made by individual investors in Massachusetts-based start-up companies that are held for more than three years and repeal the 2008 law that prohibits drug firms from giving gifts and meals to doctors and other health care professionals.

Supporters said that the bill would streamline the state's economic development system and ensure accountability and efficiency from all agencies. They noted that all the important changes would make the state more business-friendly.

Opponents offered no arguments.

The Senate has already approved its own version of the measure. A House-Senate conference committee will attempt to hammer out a compromise version.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill.)

SALES TAX-FREE HOLIDAY ON AUGUST 14 AND 15 (H 4820)

House 136-13, approved an amendment that would allow consumers to buy most products that cost under $2,500 on Saturday, August 14 and Sunday, August 15 without paying the state's 6.25 percent sales tax.

Supporters of the bill said that the holiday would boost retail sales and noted that consumers in recent years have saved millions of dollars during similar tax-free holidays. They argued that the state's sales tax revenue loss would be offset by increased revenue from the meals and gas tax revenue generated by shoppers on those two days.

Some opponents of the bill said that the holiday actually generates little additional revenue for stores because consumers would buy the products even without the tax-free days. They said that the Legislature should be looking at broader, deeper tax relief for individuals and businesses and not a tiny tax-free holiday. Others said that legislators should not vote for this tax holiday when they have not yet restored all the local aid, education and other program cuts made over the past few years.

(A "Yes" vote is for the tax-free holiday. A "No" vote is against the tax-free holiday.)

N

House 40-108, rejected an amendment to the portion of the economic development bill that repeals the 2009 law that prohibits drug firms from giving gifts and meals to doctors and other health care professionals. The amendment strikes the repeal and keeps intact the 2009 law that bans these gifts and meals.

Supporters of the ban said that it has not been in effect that long and is just beginning to show signs of having the desired result of reducing health care costs. They argued that the ban was designed to stop drug companies from wining and dining doctors with billions of dollars in order to influence their decisions when prescribing medication for their patients. They noted that repeal of the law would be a step backwards in reforming the health care system and trying to contain costs.

Opponents of the ban said that it is very complicated and has not worked well. They said that restaurants near hospitals have lost up to 25 percent of their business as a result of the ban, which also affects the income of restaurant staff. They noted that border states do not have similar laws and many companies are simply holding the dinners out of state.

(A "Yes" vote is for banning meals and gifts. A "No" vote is against the ban and favors allowing the giving of meals and gifts.)

Y

CHANGE NAMES OF STATE COLLEGES TO UNIVERSITIES (H 4864)

House 126-21, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would change the names of six state colleges to state universities, including Bridgewater, Fitchburg, Framingham, Salem, Westfield and Worcester.

Supporters said that 45 other states have done this and argued it would help Massachusetts schools compete with those institutions. They noted that some students go to out-of-state institutions because they are called universities rather than colleges. They noted that these colleges are essentially already universities in everything but name.

Opponents said that the change would do nothing positive for students but would lead to requests by professors and other employees for pay raises and also result in tuition increases. Some said that the state should take a serious look at the problems of the state's higher education system instead of doing meaningless things like changing the names of schools.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill changing the names of six colleges to university. A "No" vote is against the changes.)

Y

MUST SHOW ID TO VOTE (H 4156)

Senate 7-29, rejected an amendment requiring all voters to show identification at their polling places in order to be allowed to vote. Acceptable forms of ID would include a Social Security card and documents with a full name and address issued by federal, state or local governments.

Amendment supporters said that it is illogical that all voters are not required to show identification prior to voting and noted that 24 other states have laws requiring IDs. They argued that people cannot cash a check, rent a car, rent a DVD or even enter some government buildings without showing an ID.

Amendment opponents said that the amendment would disenfranchise thousands of voters, including senior citizens, people of color and those who do not have a current address because they are in a homeless shelter or domestic violence facility. Others said that there have been no widespread reports of voter fraud in Massachusetts.

(A "Yes" vote is for requiring all voters to show identification at their polling places in order to be allowed to vote. A "No" vote is against the requirement.)

Sandy Beach Happenings

Scholarships awarded to young environmentalists

The Sandy Beach Association initiated a scholarship two years ago to be given to a senior student or students who have demonstrated an interest in Cohasset's environment, and excelled in academics. Jenny Magruder and Tori Lehr were chosen for these achievements and their leadership abilities for 2010.

Trustee Kari O'Donnell made the presentation at Class Night and said: "The Sandy Beach Association is a non-profit organization whose sole mission is to maintain and operate Sandy Beach. Our eight-member board of trustees raises money, hires the lifeguards, manages beach operations and keeps it all safe and running smoothly for the town of Cohasset.

"Our organization is dedicated to maintaining a healthy beach by adhering to all standards of The Massachusetts Department of Environmental protection. We make every effort to support standards and research to keep our waterways healthy and vibrant.

"The Sandy Beach Association's annual scholarship is awarded to a student or students who have demonstrated a commitment to environmental research and education. This year we have two fantastic candidates. So we will be awarding two separate scholarships.

"On Behalf of the Sandy Beach Association and all Cohasset residents who enjoy our clean waters, we're pleased to award these scholarships to Tori Lehr and Jenny McGruder," O'Donnell said.

Jenny worked on the Cohasset Harbor monitoring project, which was conducted to support the federally mandated equipments for national Pollution Discharge Elimination System. Jenny has been involved with CSCR for three years. The first year, she was with a group that studied the meadow at World's End. The second year, the group monitored Straits Pond. They took water samples, and studied the marine life and vegetation. In her third year at CSCR, Jenny was involved with a group that was more lab-based. The official name of their project was the Cohasset Harbor NPDES. This project studies the water quality in the harbor. This past winter, she was involved with the Cohasset State of the Harbor Forum.

Jenny will be attending Wake Forest University this year, and plans to double major in English and music, with a focus on vocal performance. She also wants to continue studying environmental science.

Tori has worked with CSCR for the past four years, this summer being her fifth. Her first two years she spent working with teachers doing wetland monitoring. The past two years she has been working on the NPDES project collecting YSI readings and water samples from five sites. From these samples they would test Chlorophyll A, nitrite, and nitrate levels. They also worked with the Waste Water Treatment Plant and sent additional samples of the same sites for their testing purposes.

This summer Tori is continuing to work on the NPDES, but instead of being led by one of the teacher volunteers, She is working with Megan Richardson to train a new group of freshman working at CSCR how to do these tests. Tori is also leading a group that does other testing and call the group, 'Cohasset Harbor' to describe the sites; they are testing for nitrates and nitrites. Tori has also helped build a prototype of the drifters CSCR plans to track with GPS.

This fall Tori plans to attend Saint Anselm College with the decided major 'Environmental Science' as well as playing basketball.

These two recent CHS graduates are great examples of students who take an active interest in preserving our precious coastal waterways. Both excelled in the classroom and on the athletic field and Cohasset's coastal location provided the students a unique outdoor classroom. Jenny and Tori took advantage of these opportunities and contributed greatly to the town's understanding of these waterways.

To Manage The Red Lion Inn As A Partner

COHASSET, MA, July 2010: Cohasset High School graduate and Scituate native, Mike Dunphy, has joined the Red Lion Inn as a Partner. While attending Boston University, Dunphy cooked in some of the finer Boston Restaurants, most recently Via Matta, with esteemed Executive Chef, Michael Schlow. On his nights off Dunphy performed at local comedy clubs and worked his way to Hollywood, hosting and producing his own show at the Hollywood Improv.

After two years of sell-outs, Dunphy and his wife, Kelly, decided to move back to the South Shore to raise their son Chase. "What better place to raise your family. My own family is here and what a great story -- I used to be a busboy here at the original Lion. Now I'm the Executive Chef. If that's not feel good, I don't know what is."

Dunphy is eager to join Joshua Breen, former Executive Chef of Ivy Boston in the Red Lion Kitchen. Breen will appear on Food Network's "Chopped" this summer.

The Jester, owned by Pilzak of Cohasset, heads back to Scituate Harbor after finishing the Chapman Bowl Overnight Regatta on Saturday morning. Depending on the class of the boat, the course was 65, 68, or 89 nautical miles long. More than 120 sailors, including skippers and crew participated in the overnight race. The Jester finished second in its class.

Sailors compete in annual Chapman Bowl

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The 2010 running of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club's annual Chapman Bowl was a milestone event, the 50th race to be exact.

With 122 sailors participating, the race, which ran overnight on Friday night into Saturday morning, sailing from Scituate Harbor to Cape Ann, Provincetown and back, the race was a big success.

Winners included Salem-based Goldeneye, with skipper Peter Engel in the B class competition, Manchester-based Incentive and Carl Doane in the C class, Plymouth-based Luna and Robert Reifus in D class competition, Plymouth's Bella Mare and Scituate's Degage and skipper Ed Vachon in G class racing.

For many, it wasn't just about competition. It was about tradition. Cohasset's Bob Durant, racing in the family boat Walkabout in the B class, was sailing on a boat with three generations.

"I've been in 10 Chapman Bowls myself," Durant said. "I brought the next generation along to enjoy overnight racing."

Along with Bob, his dad, King and two of his sons, Whit and Tyler were along.

Tyler is a member of the Nantasket Nor'Easters, the co-op high school team from Hull and Cohasset, while Whit is on the University of New Hampshire sailing team.

Bob, who came in third in his class, said the race was a tough one.

"It got fairly windy and there were some big waves," he said. "We spent a lot of time with the boat laying over on it's side. We were trying to hang on. It was a typical Chapman Bowl."

Bob said the wind wasn't nonstop.

"We also sat with no wind at all," he said.

One big factor in the third-place finish was the dark, which obviously, is expected.

"About 40 miles offshore we hooked a lobster pot," he said. "We had to stop to unhook it. In the middle of the night you don't see everything."

Bob said things have changed since he started competing.

"Sailing at night now is more instrumental," he said. "With GPS and chart plotters you know exactly where you are. It is easier to navigate. The first time I did it (the rcae) we didn't have electronic navigation. You had to use dead reckoning. Guess where you are and hope you're right. At the time we had depth sounders so you could match the depth with your charts, and you could get a bearing from the lights on the shore. We also used paper charts."

Paper charts are still part of the routine.

"Before the race I had a paper chart to chart the course," he said. "But the new style (GPS etc.) helps you make better decisions quicker. Still, the new style can make you lazy."

While charts and GPS make things a little easier, skippers and their crews still have to stay focused.

"Sailing in the dark is a different experience," said Scituate sailor Andrew Vachon, a 22-year old who sailed with his dad Eddie, his sister Madeline and five more sailors while winning the G class competition on their boat Degage. "It takes more focus. It's harder to see stuff. It got foggy between 11 (p.m.) and midnight The visibility was way down."

Madeline agreed with her brother about focus.

"There's a lot more teamwork and you have to be right on the mark," she said. "You can't have any slip-ups. In the race we had a close call. There was a boat about 50 yards from us. You really have to be on watch all the time."

Madeline was in the race for the first time.

"It was a challenge," she said. "But at the same time it was a lot of fun. It lived up to they hype."

Madeline said there was no special practice for the race, but it was more a culmination of lots of work.

"This is my first one, but I've been practicing for it all my life," she said.

The race has been around 50 years now, starting as a family thing by the Chapman family when they wanted to teach children how to take risks, but safely.

In 1993 there were about 80 boats racing.

Long-time member and racer Peter Kerner was proud of this year's event.

"To go 50 years iis amazing," Kerner said. "This is an important thing for us in Scituate."

Legion just misses playoffs

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Legion Baseball

The Cohasset American Legion Post 118 baseball team did everything they needed to do down the stretch to stay in the playoff chase, but in the end, their slow start and a tie game against Milton were too much to overcome and Cohasset missed the Zone 6 East Division playoffs by just two points, finishing the season with 19 points.

In the final week, Cohasset had to win their final three games, and get a little help from Weymouth, or Milton, depending on how you look at it.

Weymouth finished just ahead of Cohasset for the final playoff spot, and had two games against Milton, who finished in second place in the division.

Cohasset needed the help with a Weymouth loss.

They weren't cooperating.

"We did everything we were supposed to do," Post 118 coach Scott Arnold said. "But we didn't get any help from Weymouth. They ended up beating and tying Milton."

In their final three games, Cohasset beat Hyde park, then Braintree 11-4, and Quincy Morrisette Post 294 in a wild one.

Morrisette finished in third place.

"We beat them 18-14," Arnold said. "It was a total slugfest. We got the last ups and won it."

Jordan Berry, who will be playing Div. 1 baseball at George Washington University next year, led the Cohasset attack in the Morrisette win with a 6-for-6, four home run game, including one that cleared the park.

"Jordan battled like I've never seen him before," Arnold said. "He had a great game."

Arnold said he was pleased with his team, even with their slow start that wasn't helped by the fact that several players weren't available because they were off winning the MIAA Div. 4 State Championship for Cohasset.

In fact, Arnold never did have his full squad of 18 together at once.

Injuries and commitments had the team playing a bit short all season.

"I'd consider it a success," Arnold said of the season. "They really stepped up when they had to. We had to win those last three games. It's hard to keep winning like that. We also learned a lesson. We need to step up at the beginning of the season. We didn't battle the same way at the beginning of the season."

A great run

Little Leaguers eliminated

Cohasset's 12 year old Williamsport Team was eliminated from the Little League Williamsport Tournament by Scituate on Sunday night with a 6-2 loss.

Cohasset jumped out to a quick 1-0 lead in the top of the first but stranded two runners in scoring position. Brett Dooley doubled with one out, advanced to third on a passed ball and scored on an errant throw into left field by Scituate's catcher. Jake Burchill then singled with two out and Justin Fein doubled off of the top of the fence in left but both runners were stranded when Scituate's Ted McCarry recorded his second strikeout of the inning.

Scituate came right back in the bottom half of the first scoring three runs after Cohasset botched an inning ending double play attempt and then Scituate's Joe Kensinger hit a three-run home run to deep right field.

Scituate scored two more unearned runs in the third to stretch their lead to 5-1. Owen Gideon-Murphy led off the fourth with a solo home run for Cohasset cutting the deficit to 5-2 but McCarry continued to baffle the Cohasset hitters with his curve ball.

Every time Cohasset threatened to score some runs, McCarry buckled down and retired the Cohasset hitters.

Brett Dooley did his best to keep Cohasset in the game, striking out ten Scituate batters and allowing only six hits over five innings but in the end the scoreboard read Scituate 6, Cohasset 2.

Scituate advanced to play Braintree National.

Cohasset finished with a 3-2 tournament record, finishing seventh out of 19 teams in its district and now moves on to compete in the 12 Year old Suburban League beginning Thursday night July 15.

On Friday Cohasset won an extra innings thriller.

Cohasset broke a 4-4 tie with seven runs in the seventh inning and held on to best Milton American 11-6. Brett Dooley led off the seventh with a double over the right

Road to World Cup starts at Granite Links

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

The world's largest golf tournament is coming to the region next week with the Audi quattro Cup coming to Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy July 19.

It is one of the fastest growing golf happenings.

"We achieved a significant increase in the number of qualification tournaments and of the golfers taking part," reports Katja Kraus, head of sports marketing for Audi. "In 2009 we were also once more able to welcome several new nations to the extended family of the Audi quattro Cup. This is a trend that will be continued in 2010."

It all began in 1991 when the Audi quattro Cup was established. There were 51 qualifying tournaments with more than 6,000 competitors, all in Germany. But since then it has expanded where now more than 92 million golfers from 47 nations compete. Local Audi dealers promote the local tournaments.

Golfers compete as two-person teams. A player's handicap is limited to 36, but the team cannot have an aggregate handicap of more than 56. They play what is called a Greensome Stableford.

Both players hit a tee shot. The best shot is selected and the partner whose ball was not selected will hit the next shot. The team alternates shots until the ball is holed. Each ball is to be played as it lies and the ball that is selected may not be switched during play of the hole.

The scoring in Stableford competitions is made by points, 1 point for a bogey, 2 for a par, 3 for a birdie, 4 for an eagle and 5 for a double eagle.

The winner is the twosome with the most points and they advance to a national championship.

They, along with the second place team, is eligible to play in the United States finals at Kiawah Island resort in South Carolina, Aug. 27-29; then, hopefully, the world final in Sardinia, Italy, Oct. 8-12. The best part is that Audi pays all players' expenses to the national and world tournaments.

Net scores, achieved through an alternate shot format, determine winners, thus opening the competition to men and women at many ability levels.

The qualifier at Granite Links, which begins at 1 p.m. with a shotgun start, is expected to attract more than 100 golfers, who will be treated to pre-tournament activities such as a ride and drive, featuring new Audi models; test demo clubs on the practice range; and enter a variety of contests staged by corporate partners TD Bank and Boston Marriott Quincy, tournament host hotel, with Best Buddies Massachusetts the beneficiary.

Best Buddies is a non-profit global organization that creates opportunity for employment and leadership for those with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

"For the players, it's definitely a relaxed day on the links where they can compete for a great prize while helping raise money and awareness for Best Buddies," said David Ekelund Sr., organizer of the event.

Sacred ground

This week the top 144 amateur golfers in the Bay State – including 37 from our region – will be competing for the State Amateur, but the real bonuas is the venue, Myopia Hunt Club in South Hamilton.

This championship, which dates back to 1903, is only played at the top courses in the state.

The last two champions are from the region.

Last year Billy Drohen, who plays out of a public course, Brookmeadow in Canton, won the title at The Country Club in Brookline. Thorny Lea's John Hadges captured the title in 2008 at The Kittansett Club in Marion.

While both The Country Club and Kittansett rank among the top Snob Centers in the golf world, Myopia is at the top of the list when it comes to exclusive clubs.

Sure, The Country Club planted a huge row of trees to block out the view of a trophy home build by Reebok head Paul Fireman, and Kittansett wouldn't let Geraldo Rivera become a member despite the fact that he purchased a manse near the club entrance overlooking the 17th green.

But Myopia is true blueblood, so much so that its members refer to The Country Club in Brookline as 'The Y' as in YMCA because they feel TCC is so open to the public.

But if you are willing to make the arduous journey from South of Boston to the North Shore, you can visit this exclusive club this week and it is free. It might be your only chance to see this wonderful track.

ON THE WEB

There is more to this notebook and you can find it on the web at www.wickedlocalgolf.com.

You will learn more about Billy Drohen, the defending State Am champion, who has been busy off the links since winning the title.

There is a listing of all the locals in this week's championship.

Also, results for the State Publinx qualifiers and the State Pro-Presidents Championship, held last week at LeBaron Hills.

KNOW THE PRO

Tom Tobey

Bay Pointe Country Club

What's in your bag?
I carry all Titleist clubs. I have a 909D driver, two hybrids, both 909s, a 19-degree and 21-degree 909s. My 3-wood is a 13-degree 906. I have AP2 irons, Vokey wedges and a Titleist The X putter.

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights):
My best round in competition was at the South Florida Open at the Naples Beach Club in 2003. I shot a course record 63. But my best round was last year when I shot a course record 60 here at Bay Pointe. I bogeyed the second hole and make the turn at 3-under.

If you could be a dream foursome, who would be in it?
I'd want to play with my parents. My father, Ben, is still alive, but my mother, Patricia, is deceased. I'd like to play with them one more time. I'd also like to include my Grandpa. I never met him, I only heard about him, but from what I was told he was a very good golfer.

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you where, and how the game attracted you):
I was 7 years old. Mom and Dad used to play all the time at the Otis Air Force Base course. They let me tag along to play. It was a thrill. I was hooked right away. Later, they joined Pocasset when Bill Carr owned it and I started playing regularly.

Besides your current club, what is your favorite golf course (and why?):
I'm from Cape Cod and I'll give you three of my favorites and they are all down here: Hyannisport, Eastward Ho! and Sankaty Head on Nantucket. They are three great courses as good as anything you will find anywhere.

What's the best golf tip you ever received?
Golf is such a mind game, I'd have to say the best tip I got was that when you have a bad hole, you just got to forget about it and go on to the next shot. You can't let it affect you.

What makes your home golf course so special?
I think what separates Bay Pointe from so many other courses is that it is a Geoff Cornish design. It's got a special look to it with the tall pines and oaks. There is plenty of fairway to hit with your drive. It is only 6,200 yards but it plays so much tougher.

A hidden jewel in the SE Mass. Triangle

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Acushnet River Valley Golf Course is a hidden jewel.

Hidden, for sure, because it is not off a highway or major thoroughfare.

Course of the Week

It's in the middle of the Southeastern Massachusetts' Triangle, almost smack dab in the middle of the triangle made up by Route 24 on the West, Route 495 on the East and Route 195 on the South.

But today, in the world of GPS, Garmins and TomToms, it is not a problem discovering this golfer's haven and it certainly is worth the ride.

Built in 1998, this municipal project is one of the top community-owned courses you will find in the Bay State. Its motto is, "Country Club Courtesy and Conditions."

What more would you want from a public facility?

It was designed by Massachusetts'-own Brian Silva, who rode his father's bulldozer learning the trade of earth moving as a kiddo, and later served a lengthy apprenticeship under the dean of New England architects, Geoffrey Cornish.

Silva rose fast; his first design, Captains Course in Brewster, received national recognition. No matter, Acushnet River Valley was a turning point in his career.

It is one of the first times he didn't try to impress the golfing public with pop bunkers or dipsy-doodle putting surfaces that had more waves than the "Perfect Storm."

Acushnet River Valley is a layout that gives you the opportunity to build your confidence and smooth out your swing on the first few holes before you face the iron and test your mettle.

The opening three holes are moderately challenging par-4s where you need to avoid fairway bunkers.

The next three holes are a short par 5 (478 yards from the tips), followed by a dogleg par-4 and a 150-yard par-3.

You find some wide-open fairways at Acushnet River Valley, but watch out for the fairway bunkers.

But the final three holes to the front nine will test your mental as well as physical game.

The seventh hole is a long and narrow par-4, the eighth a treacherous par-3, and the ninth hole a long (575 yards) uphill par-5 that will bring your game back to reality.

While the front nine is played through corridors of pines and oaks, the back nine is more a link-style string of holes.

The back nine starts you off with a gentle dogleg left par-4. Two bunkers guard the right side of the green.

The 11th hole is the easiest on the course: a short par-3 framed by a pair of bunkers. Just don't go long on this one-shotter.

Hit your drive left on the par-5 12th hole. At more than 500 yards, it is a solid three-shot hole for the average golfer.

On the par-4 13th hole, like most at Acushnet River Valley, be wary of the dreaded fairway bunker.

You face your final par-5 on the 14th hole and watch out for water on your second shot.

Water can be your Waterloo on No. 15, a short par-4. Big hitters might try to cut off the dogleg, but they'll find out they bit off too much.

The key to 16 is ball position. It's not a long par-4 (only 360 yards from the blue tees). Find the middle of the fairway for an easy approach to the green.

On the 17th tee, it looks simple enough. But there is trouble. Pick the right club and swing with confidence.

The finishing hole is a strong par-4 that measures more than 400 yards from the tips. Again fairway bunkers are out there. Avoid them and you can bring home a good score.

This is a track where local knowledge is key. You must know where to hit it.

But it certainly is a track worth the trip. And a return visit should be required as well.

Cohasset Soccer Club registration now open

Registration for 2010-2011 soccer season is now open for all players. Registration is available online through the soccer club's website — www.cohassetsoccer.com. The soccer club has recently shifted to SportsPilot for its online registration, so each family will need to set up a new soccer account and then register players. Full details of the registration process are also available on the website.

Travel soccer registration for U12 through U14 players (grades 5-8) is now open with a registration deadline of July 30. Registrations received after July 30 will be assessed a late fee.

Registration will be closed for this age group on August 6. Any registrations received after August 6 will be placed on a waitlist with player placement on a team based upon availability.

In-town soccer registration for U5 through U10 players (pre-K through grade 4) is also now open with a registration deadline of August 27. Registrations received after August 27 will be assessed a late fee.

Registration will be closed for this age group on September 5. Any registrations received after September 5 will be placed on a waitlist with player participation based upon availability.

fielder's head, Matt Montefusco got hit by a pitch and after a 12-pitch at bat Jake Burchill worked a walk. Justin Fein then drew a bases-loaded walk to force in the go ahead run.

After a strikeout, Ryan McElhinney hit a bomb to deep centerfield for a grand slam giving Cohasset a commanding 9-4 lead.

Cohaset was not done though as A.J. Kucinski drew a walk with two out, Ben Rice singled up the middle and Brett Dooley reached on an error which scored another run for Cohasset. Dooley and Rice then executed a perfect double steal for the eleventh run of the game.

As close as it gets

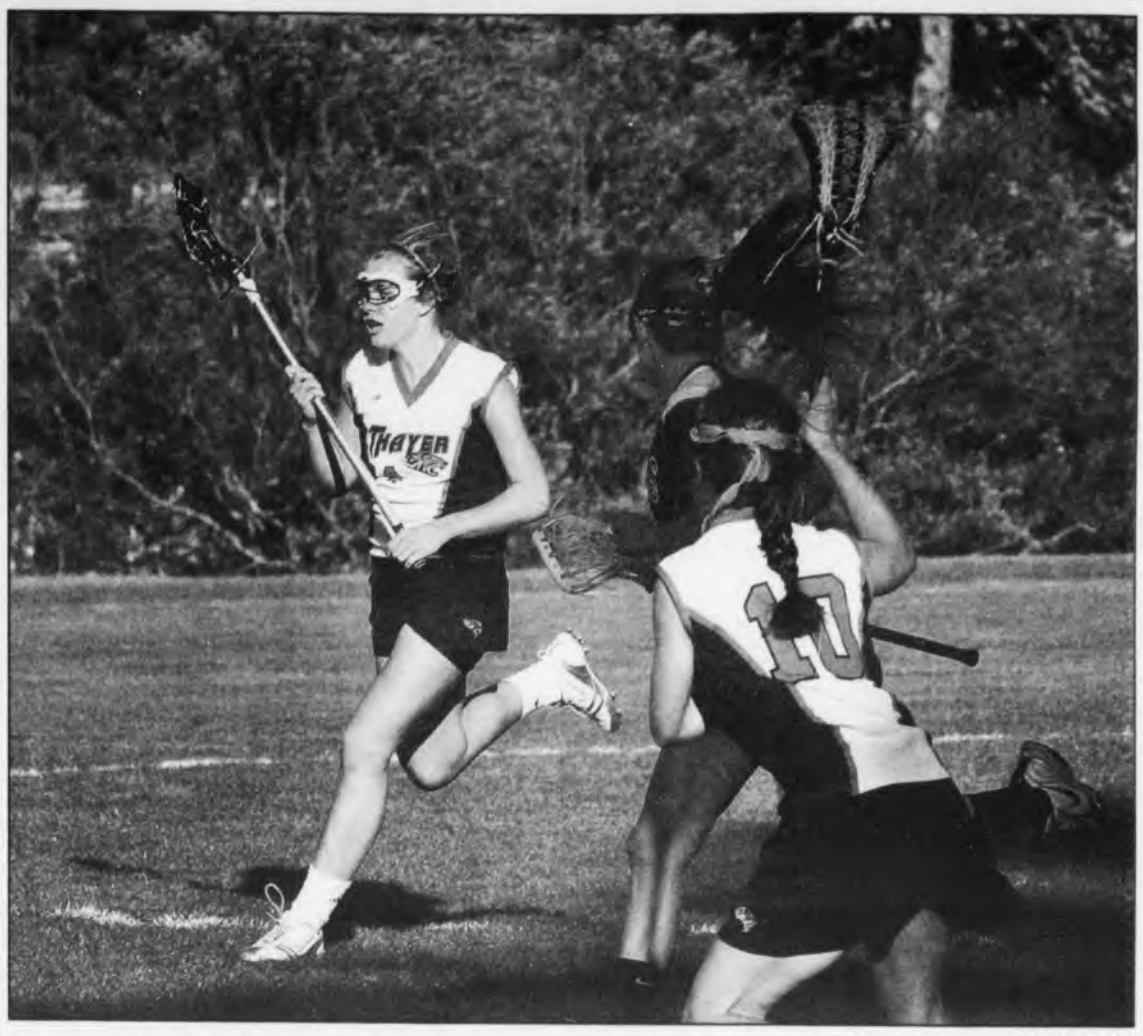
Arnold had said earlier that the beginning of the season could have been pushed back, but the risk would have been big with makeup games no sure thing, especially if the weather got tough.

Last season Cohasset missed the playoffs in part because they had games that couldn't be made up in time, so Arnold was hoping to tread water early and make a run when the Cohasset players came back.

It almost worked.



One thing Arnold enjoyed was being able to have his coaching staff together for a full season.

"The three of us (Arnold, Greg Taylor and Bobby Barrow) were together all season," he said. "We haven't been able to do that in the past. It was fun."

As for what's next, Arnold plans to have his squad play in a tournament in August, then have a big year next season.

"This was a young team," he said, explaining that players through age 19 can play. "Everyone is eligible to play next year. They'll be tough to beat."

Cohasset's Allard headed to Dartmouth

Allard was a standout for Thayer for two dominant seasons, helping the team to a combined 24-3-1 record.

Cohasset native Lindsey Allard made a mark on the lacrosse program at Thayer Academy, and is hoping to do the same at Dartmouth next year.

Allard was a standout for Thayer for two dominant seasons, helping the team to a combined 24-3-1 record. She hit the varsity field in 2009 and had an immediate impact. After playing with the junior varsity in her freshman and sophomore years, Allard joined Revolution Lacrosse, a club team coached by Lukas Cash.

From there, she became one of the hardest workers on the team and earned a starting position on the varsity in just one year.

She was named to the Eastern Lower New England's Team 1, which competed in a national tournament against players from all over the country, Memorial Day weekend.

The work paid off when Dartmouth coach Amy Patton saw her playing with Revolution Lacrosse and made her a recruiting priority for the class of 2014.

In 2010, Allard was a standout three-zone midfielder who was named to U.S. Lacrosse's All American first team. She also earned first team all league (Independent School League) status and NEWSWLA All Star status.

She scored 27 goals and had 33 assists, 42 draw controls, 57 groundballs and 21 forced turnovers.

Allard was a playmaker and finisher on the field, as well as a fantastic defender.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 26, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A bit of Arian contrariness could be keeping you from getting all the facts. Turn it off, and tune in to what you need to hear. It could make all the difference this week.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting an answer to a vital question involving financial matters might take longer than you'd expected. A new factor might have to be dealt with before anything can move forward. Be patient.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Use your good sense to see what might really be driving a colleague's workplace agenda. What you learn could lead to a new way of handling some old problems.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change of mind might once again turn out to be a good thing. True, most of your co-workers might not like the delay, but as before, they might appreciate what follows from it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You revel in golden opportunities this week. One cautionary note, though: Be careful to separate the gold from the glitter before you make a choice. Someone you trust can help.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Marriage is important this week, as are other partnerships. Don't let yourself be overwhelmed by sentiment. Instead, try to steer a path between emotion and common sense.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Dealing with someone who has let you down is never easy. But the sooner you're able to clear up this problem, the sooner other problems can be successfully handled.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A "friend" who is willing to bend the rules to gain an advantage for both of you is no friend. Reject the offer and stay on your usual straight and narrow path.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) After all the effort you've been putting in both on the job and for friends and family, it's a good time to indulge your own needs. The weekend could bring a pleasant surprise.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might want to do something new this weekend. Close your eyes and imagine what it could be, and then do it, or come up with the closest practical alternative.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your good deeds bring you the appreciation you so well deserve. But, once again, be careful of those who might want to exploit your generous nature for their own purposes.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Trolling for compliments isn't necessary. You earned them, and you'll get them. Concentrate this week on moving ahead into the next phase of your program.

BORN THIS WEEK:
Meeting new people usually means you're making new friends. People want to be reflected in your shining light.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Everyone invited to summer services on Sandy Beach

What better place to have a church service than on the beach, with the beauty of the Atlantic Ocean as a backdrop, and the breeze of the salty air to stir one's soul? Beginning this Sunday, St. Stephen's Church will welcome newcomers and old-timers, visitors and residents – and even a few dogs – to the 7a.m. summer worship service called "Breaking Bread with Jesus on the Beach."

"We are so grateful to the Sandy Beach Association and to the Town of Cohasset for allowing us to use this gorgeous spot for our celebration of Holy Communion," said the Rev. Margot Critchfield, rector of St Stephen's. "It's a wonderful way for people from all walks of life to come together for a relaxed and informal worship service."

St. Stephen's Church will welcome newcomers and old-timers, visitors and residents – and even a few dogs – to the 7a.m. summer worship service.

Critchfield said, "At the end of John's gospel, Jesus shares a breakfast of bread and grilled fish with his disciples on the beach. So this is the perfect place to 'break bread' with each other in his name."

Worshippers of all ages come to the service, which Critchfield started when she came to St. Stephen's three summers ago. "I owe the idea to Gary Ritts at Second Congregational," she said, "he told me about a service he did in the summer at the Sailing Club, and it got me thinking about how awesome it would be to have one on the beach. This is our third summer there."

Critchfield said some people bring beach chairs, though many stand since the service isn't too long. Coffee and doughnuts will be served after the service. Stickers not required before 8 a.m. St Stephen's also has a second service Sunday mornings during the summer at 9 a.m.

Cohasset Carillon recitals this summer

The 86th annual Cohasset Carillon Summer Recital Series continue at 6 p.m. each Sunday until Aug. 15. All are invited to bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while listening to the music of the bells. Free popcorn and lemonade will be available, thanks to the families of St. Stephen's Church. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

Cohasset Carillon can proudly claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. It is also the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England. The smallest bell weighs only 29 pounds, the largest 5 1/2 tons, more than 11,000 pounds. It was the second carillon to arrive in the United States; Gloucester welcomed the first carillon in 1923.

Among the guest recitalists this summer season will be carillonneurs from the Netherlands and Denmark; the United States and Canada. The last recital on Aug. 15, played by Milford Myhre, Carillonneur Emeritus from Lake Wales, Fla., will honor Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur at St. Stephen's Church from 1985 through 2009. Slade Warner died in December 2009 after a brief illness. Internationally recognized as an accomplished organist and carillonneur, she will be remembered by her many friends in the American Guild of Organists, the Guild of Carillonneurs of North American and in the St. Stephen's Church community.

'Chances Are' you'll love this show

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

With hundreds of millions of records sold worldwide, a Lifetime Achievement Grammy as well as two Grammy Hall of Fame Awards, and 30 top-50 singles to his credit, Johnny Mathis is an American pop music icon. When he wraps his singular voice around hits like "Chances Are," "Misty," and "The Twelfth of Never," Mathis never fails to hold an audience in the palm of his hand. That's the way the legendary singer likes it.

"I desperately want them to hear what I am singing. I want them to hear every lyric so I make sure to modulate my voice so it is not only at a comfortable level, but it also brings the audience closer," explained Mathis by telephone last week from his home in southern California. "A voice teacher I had many years ago taught me to sing to express, not impress. I've never forgotten that."

Mathis – who returns to the South Shore Music Circus on July 22 – has been expressing himself to great acclaim since his first single, "Wonderful, Wonderful," was released 53 years ago this month on Columbia Records, now Sony Music, the label Mathis still calls home. Mathis – whose album "Johnny's Greatest Hits," released in 1958, spent a record-breaking 490 weeks on the Billboard charts – knows that many who come to his concerts are there to hear the hits.

"I've been singing for so many years on stage that I fall in love with songs time and time again. Not too long ago, I put 'Wild Is the Wind' back in the show, because I love it. And I love singing 'Chances Are,' 'It's Not for Me to Say' and all the others. My songs are a blessing, because they're wonderful to sing."

The 74-year-old Mathis may have more than enough classic romantic ballads to fill a concert, but that doesn't keep him from exploring different musical genres in the recording studio. In 2000, he released "Mathis on Broadway," followed by the Grammy-nominated "Isn't It Romantic – The Standards Album" in 2005, and 2008's jazz-influenced "A Night to Remember." His latest album – "Let It Be – Johnny Mathis in Nashville" is set for a September 21 release. It will include classic country songs like "I Can't Stop Loving You," "Make the World Go Away," and "Crazy," and feature some harmonies by country music favorites Vince Gill and Allison Krauss.

For Mathis, who recorded the album in Nashville, the experience brought back memories.

"When I first started to sing, when I was maybe six or seven years old, it was for my dad. And I sang the songs he knew, which were country songs," recalls Mathis of his early childhood in Gilmer, Texas, before Clem and Mildred Mathis moved their family to San Francisco. "Years ago, I toured the world with a group of young dancers and singers and I did a country set in that show. I've also sung in Nashville on many occasions, including with the very fine Nashville Symphony Orchestra."

Mathis says his Music Circus audience may get an advance listen to music from the new album next week.

"Some of these songs work just perfectly with the way that I sing on stage. I did a couple of them when I played Branson recently and they were very well received."

A star track-and-field athlete in high school, Mathis went to San Francisco State University on a scholarship with the intention of becoming an English and Physical Education teacher. While the sports pages of San Francisco papers were referring to him as the "best all-around athlete to come out of the Bay Area," Mathis was also winning notice as a nightclub singer. Before long and with his father's consent, the still teenaged Mathis passed on an invitation to the Olympic tryouts to instead head to New York for his first recording sessions.

An avid golfer who has lent his name to several tournaments in the U.S. and abroad, Mathis still finds connections between his career in music and his longtime interest in sports.

"I exercise like crazy. The voice can wobble if you're not in good shape, and that's not a good thing."

When Mathis isn't on a concert stage or a golf course, he can often be found enjoying the sanctuary of his home in the Hollywood Hills.

"I have to have both the wonderful quietness of my home and the excitement of performing. Usually, my best performances are the ones I give after three weeks off," says Mathis, who returned to the road just last week after a near month-long layoff.

Johnny Mathis and his Orchestra, with Gary Mule Deer, will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on July 22. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at themusiccircus.org

Callanan is on a roll with roles

First 'The Music Man'; then on to 'Mamma Mia'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Hingham resident Scott Wahle stars as con man Harold Hill in Reagle Music Theatre of Greater Boston's production of "The Music Man."

It is a lucky thing for local theater audiences that Mary Callanan has been so busy recently, with three shows in three months, because in just a few weeks — after wrapping up her current gig in Reagle Music Theatre of Greater Boston's "The Music Man" in Waltham – the Weymouth resident will exit the Boston theater scene for a leading role in the North American tour of "Mamma Mia!"

"From the first time I saw 'Mamma Mia!' at the Colonial Theatre, maybe 10 years ago now, I knew I wanted to play Rosie," explained Callanan by telephone last week. "Since then, I have auditioned for the Broadway production and the national tours many times. I even went into New York for an open casting call for the show – I wanted this job that badly. In the last three years, they would call me and ask me to come in and read for Rosie, usually sending me the same scene to learn. I got close many times, but I didn't get cast until now."

Mary Callanan of Weymouth will perform in the North American tour of "Mamma Mia!"

For Callanan, who has toured Asia with Marie Osmond in "The Sound of Music" and also appeared in bus-and-truck tours of "Big," "Damn Yankees" and "Cinderella," hitting the road in the commercial juggernaut and global phenomenon that is the ABBA jukebox musical will be a familiar, but still different experience from those earlier tours and the many sit-down runs she's had in Boston in everything from "Nunsense" to "Menopause: The Musical."

"I'll be in New York for a month of rehearsals beginning Aug. 9 before we play our first dates in Winnipeg in September. The whole thing is really kind of cool, because I can imagine what to expect, but a lot of it will still be new to me."

A star in Boston, Callanan's previous tours found her in small roles. As the carefree friend who travels to the Greek islands for the marriage of her old friend's daughter, however, Callanan is one of the female leads in the show with a book by Catherine Johnson and score filled with the Swedish supergroup's biggest hits from "Super Trouper" and "Dancing Queen" to "Knowing Me, Knowing You." Callanan even gets her own number when Rosie puts both a suggestive spin on "Take a Chance on Me" and the moves on Australian outback adventurer Bill Austin. Callanan admires her character's moxie, and her loyalty.

"I can see that Rosie is the glue that holds these three friends, Donna, Tanya, and she together. She's known and loved these women for years, through all the many changes in their lives. Rosie has great exuberance for life. She thinks her life is interesting, because she makes it that way. Rosie's like a big puppy. She's always up for adventure."

Callanan doesn't shy away from adventure either, her latest being playing the role of Eulalie MacKechnie Shinn, the mayor's wife, in Reagle's current production of "The Music Man," the classic Meredith Willson musical starring former WBZ-TV newsman Scott Wahle of Hingham as con man Harold Hill.

"'The Music Man' is going to be a riot. We have a cast of 62 and a 20-piece orchestra, which you just don't get anywhere anymore. Reagle is great, because everyone works hard but still really enjoys themselves. It is fun, too, because the show is set in July in Iowa and we're doing it in July in Waltham. My character is really there just for comic relief. I'm not in every scene, but I get to go on, get the laughs, and leave. With songs like 'Seventy-Six Trombones,' the show is Meredith Willson's valentine to Americana. It really reminds you how nice things used to be, even when a scoundrel came to town."

Callanan will come back to town, or nearby anyway, when "Mamma Mia!" plays the Providence Performing Arts Center in late December and is keeping her fingers crossed she might even get closer to home while on tour. "It would be my absolute dream to play the Colonial Theatre."

Mary Callanan will be featured in Reagle Music Theatre of Greater Boston's "The Music Man," at the Robinson Theatre, 617 Lexington St., Waltham, July 15 to 25. For tickets, call 781-891-5600 or go online at reagleplayers.com

The worst intersection in Cohasset

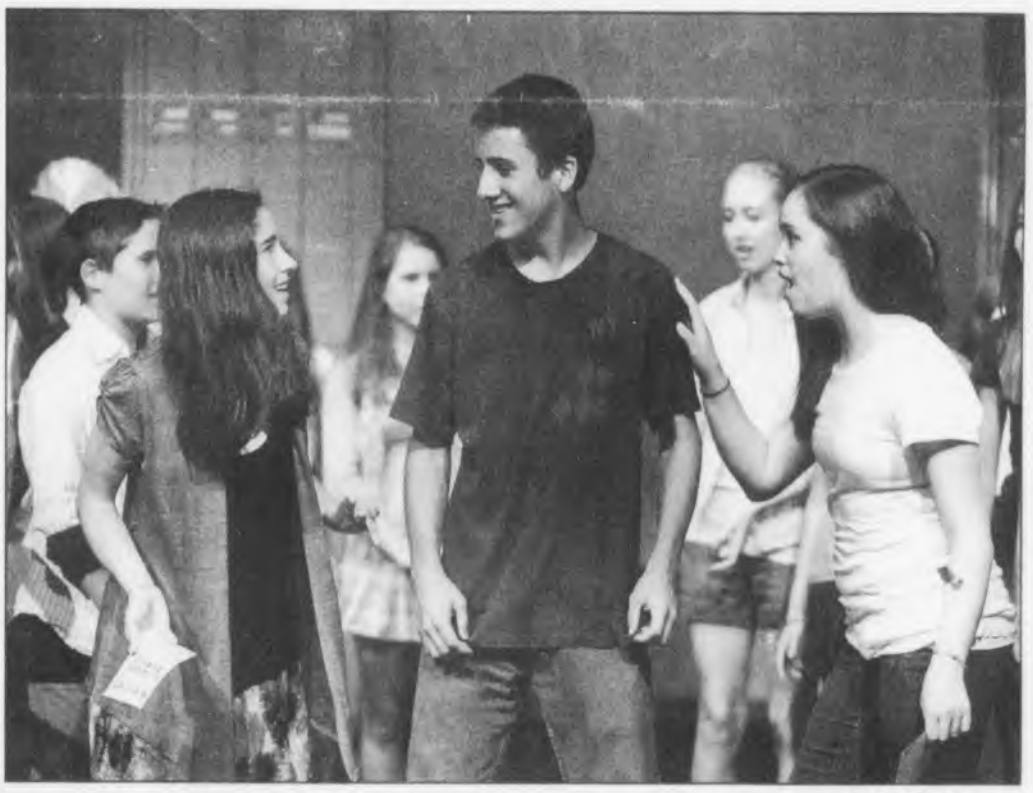
Sohier at Route 3A tops the list

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Of all the places where traffic meets in Cohasset, there are a few that give residents heart palpitations when they approach. The one that takes the cake is the left hand turn on to 3A from Sohier Street when it comes to "worst intersections."

Some residents avoid the intersection all together. Some have witnessed accidents there and at other Route 3A intersections. Route 3A, the main byway in Cohasset, has been the scene of many car accidents. Police are called out there most often for car crashes.

The two-mile stretch of Route 3A between Beechwood and Crocker Lane is speckled with intersections where cars are faced with vehicles traveling at a high speeds (the speed limit for most of the area is 50 mph) and lines of cars.



"The intersections on 3A definitely

'Great music and great dancing'

CDC production at Town Hall this weekend

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

This weekend, a group of 28 kids from Cohasset and the South Shore, will remind their audience just what it's like (or, in some cases, what it will be like) to be age 13.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's summer production of "13" is a glimpse into the minds and mayhem of 13-year-olds. The musical, written by Jason Robert Brown, is filled with addictive songs and high energy dancing. Front and center is storyline featuring the trials and tribulations of becoming a teenager.

For seven years running, the CDC has put on a summer drama program in conjunction with Cohasset Recreation and each year it has gotten bigger and bigger. What started with 20 kids putting on "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" has turned into the production of two large-scale summer productions.

This year, like last year, the CDC did two productions for their summer program. The production of "Seussical Jr." involved kids 8 to 13 and met rave reviews for its performances last weekend. Ages 12 to 18 are a part of this weekend's production of "13."

New wind proposal

Preliminary plans for turbine on Turkey Hill

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Later this summer, the Planning Board could once again be considering a wind turbine project within the Cohasset borders.

In a preliminary presentation to the Alternative Energy Committee Tuesday night the Trustees of Reservations brought forward its still under-development proposal to erect a wind turbine on the Cohasset side of Turkey Hill.

The Trustees of Reservation is a non-profit group dedicated to the preservation of open space. They maintain for the enjoyment of all over 100 properties across Massachusetts. Their local properties include World's End in Hingham, Whitney-Thayer Woods in Cohasset and Turkey Hill/Weir River Farm in Cohasset and Hingham.

Part of being a steward of swath of open space is to ensure their longevity.

"(The Trustees) have become increasingly alarmed at the impacts of climate change. We see these impacts globally and by what is happening on our properties," said Steve Sloan, the southeast regional director of the Trustees of Reservations. "We feel responsible as an organization not only to reduce our own carbon footprint, but also to lead by example."

The resulting action is the proposal to bring wind power to Turkey Hill.

The Trustees received a state grant to explore the feasibility of the turbine site. The currently underway study is being completed by

This weekend, a group of 28 kids from Cohasset and the South Shore, will remind their audience just what it's like (or, in some cases, what it will be like) to be age 13.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's summer production of "13" is a glimpse into the minds and mayhem of 13-year-olds. The musical, written by Jason Robert Brown, is filled with addictive songs and high energy dancing. Front and center is storyline featuring the trials and tribulations of becoming a teenager.

For seven years running, the CDC has put on a summer drama program in conjunction with Cohasset Recreation and each year it has gotten bigger and bigger. What started with 20 kids putting on "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" has turned into the production of two large-scale summer productions.

This year, like last year, the CDC did two productions for their summer program. The production of "Seussical, Jr." involved kids 8 to 13 and met rave reviews for its performances last weekend. Ages 12 to 18 are a part of this weekend's production of "13."

New wind proposal

Preliminary plans for turbine on Turkey Hill

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Later this summer, the Planning Board could once again be considering a wind turbine project within the Cohasset borders.

In a preliminary presentation to the Alternative Energy Committee Tuesday night the Trustees of Reservations brought forward its still under-development proposal to erect a wind turbine on the Cohasset side of Turkey Hill.

The Trustees of Reservation is a non-profit group dedicated to the preservation of open space. They maintain for the enjoyment of all over 100 properties across Massachusetts. Their local properties include World's End in Hingham, Whitney-Thayer Woods in Cohasset and Turkey Hill/Weir River Farm in Cohasset and Hingham.

Part of being a steward of swath of open space is to ensure their longevity.

"(The Trustees) have become increasingly alarmed at the impacts of climate change. We see these impacts globally and by what is happening on our properties," said Steve Sloan, the southeast regional director of the Trustees of Reservations. "We feel responsible as an organization not only to reduce our own carbon footprint, but also to lead by example."

The resulting action is the proposal to bring wind power to Turkey Hill.

We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman
GIVE YOUR ENGINE THE SPARK IT NEEDS!
Once lead was removed from gasoline formulations in the 1970s and catalytic converters were phased into emissions systems, 3,000-mile tune-ups and their mandated spark plug replacement became ancient relics. The spark plugs that come with today's vehicles are expected to last 50,000 miles and more. The better spark plugs are made with electrode materials that range from yttrium-nickel-copper to those formulated with percentages of platinum. Better yet are the longest lasting spark plugs that feature electrodes made of iridium. However long spark plugs are expected to last, vehicle owners are encouraged to gauge their replacement intervals on their vehicle's fuel economy and performance. Replacing the spark plugs is a cost-effective way to tweak engine performance and gain better mileage.
Replacing spark plugs regularly isn't the only thing you can do to improve your car's fuel economy, mileage, and performance. Proper maintenance on the recommended schedule is the best way to keep your car running smoother and for longer. It also saves money, in the long run, because a technician can catch small and inexpensive problems (like a faulty spark plug) before they become big and very expensive problems. At ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT, our ASE-certified technicians will be happy to make sure your car is in tip-top shape, from spark plugs to tail pipe. Give us a call today to prevent a big headache tomorrow. Call 781-925-3200 for an appointment today. Our address is 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.
HINT: At the extremes, spark plug electrode materials, design, and gaps offer consumers choices between performance and durability.

Resident reports $50K in jewelry missing

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 59-year-old Cohasset woman, who is moving to Scituate, reported that about $50,000 in jewelry was missing from her jewelry box. Some credit cards and cash were also missing, she said. She hired a moving company out of Rockland to assist her with her move, police said.

She reported the missing items at 9:25 p.m. on Friday (July 16). She did not notice the missing jewelry right away because her jewelry box was still there. She discovered the apparent theft while packing. About 20 pieces of jewelry are missing, police said.

Detectives are following up and have taken the jewelry box as evidence. They will process it for prints and DNA, police said.

Copper wire

A 42-year-old Cohasset woman reported last Monday (July 12) that 250 linear feet of copper wire valued at $1,000 had been stolen from her residence. The woman had some contractors working there. When she first noticed that it was missing she thought the contractors may have moved it but that was not the case so she reported it stolen, police said. Detectives are investigating.

Summonsed

A 68-year-old Methuen man is being summonsed to court for reckless operation and failure to drive in marked lanes following a single-car accident on Monday (July 12) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A), police said.

Police said the 1995 Volvo sedan, the man was driving north on Route 3A, went off the road and hit a guardrail opposite Hingham Lumber. A witness, who was behind the car and had observed the sedan being driven erratically, was trying to notify Cohasset police on her cell phone when the accident occurred. The car was towed; the operator was not injured.

Police said the man had a "medical episode" and has medical issues that should have precluded him from driving. Police filed an immediate threat with the registry to have his license revoked. The man had been at a summerhouse in Scituate and was heading back to Methuen at the time of the accident.

Copper caps

A Scituate man walked into the police station to report finding copper caps, which go on the fence in the harbor near Atlantica. Police notified the DPW. Police said some of the copper caps had been pulled off the fence. They believe it was the result of vandalism and not an attempt to steal the copper.

MV accidents

• A 56-year-old Scituate man reported that his 1992 GMC pickup had been parked on South Main Street by Atlantic Bagel at 1:10 p.m. on Tuesday (July 13). When he returned to his vehicle he saw his side-view mirror hanging. Witnesses said a black SUV that was being operated by a woman encroached too much on the parked vehicle and its mirror hit the mirror on the pickup. Police said the SUV kept going.

• A 17-year-old Abington boy in a 2000 Jeep Grand Cherokee was traveling on North Main Street near the train station (from Hingham toward Scituate) when he went off the road and hit a hydrant at about 1:44 p.m. on Thursday (July 15). He was not injured and reported closing his eyes for a second, police said. The hydrant had to be replaced. The teen was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes.

• The caretaker at the home of an elderly couple who live on Blackhorse Lane reported at 10:46 p.m. on Friday (July 16) that a 2003 Toyota Sequoia was hung up on a rock blocking their driveway and preventing access. Police had the vehicle towed right away for safety reasons. They ran the plate that came back to a family on Stockbridge Street. The parents of the teen, who had been driving, told police that their daughter had gotten hung up on the rock earlier when she was visiting a friend and had tried to back up. They were unable to get a wrecker that night and were going to wait until the morning to have the car towed. Police said there was major undercarriage damage and the mishap was due to driver inexperience.

• At 4:41 p.m. on Saturday (July 17), a 57-year-old Cohasset man in a 2008 Lexus reported his car had been "rear-ended" by a 2000 Mitsubishi sedan on Jerusalem Road at North Main Street. Police said he was stopped at the stop sign and was preparing to make a left onto N. Main when he slowed down and was hit by the Mitsubishi, which was operated by a 53-year-old Hull woman. He reported to police the woman was giving him a hard time and wanted an officer present. There were no tows and minor damage, police said.

• At 5:51 p.m. on Saturday (July 17) a 33-year-old Maynard man in a 2010 Nissan Xterra reported he was slowing down to turn into Atlantica when his car was "rear-ended" by a 2005 Audi A-4. Police said the Audi, which was driving by a 19-year-old Cohasset woman, had to be towed. There were no injuries, police said.

Tracks

Police could not locate a red-headed teen that reportedly hopped the fence and headed down the railroad tracks near Quonahassit Trail at about 6:23 p.m. on Tuesday (July 13). Police did notify the MBTA; trains can blow their horn in these instances even though Cohasset is whistle-free. Police remind readers that they have a zero-tolerance policy about trespassing on the tracks, which is an arrestable offense.

Patrols

A resident has asked for more patrols after finding marijuana items and cigarettes by his greenhouse on North Main Street. He called at 5:07 p.m. on Thursday (July 15) and asked for an officer to view the items. Police said apparently teens had been congregating there and smoking marijuana.

Dog bites dog

A 52-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police at 11:23 a.m. on Sunday (July 18) that she was walking her Wheaton terrier on Beechwood Street near Riverview Drive when a German Shepherd on Beechwood came out of the open gate in a fenced yard and bit her terrier. She said her dog had a puncture wound and wanted the incident logged. The animal control officer is following up, police said.

Unlicensed

A 17-year-old Cohasset girl was stopped for an equipment violation and further investigation revealed she was driving on an expired learner's permit. Police said the driver's side front end of the car, which had been damaged in a prior accident, was sagging and unsafe. She is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and an equipment violation. Police said she had a provisional Texas license, which is not recognized by the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles.

Crosswalk

A pedestrian reported nearly being run down in the village in a crosswalk on Sunday (July 18) at about 3:30 p.m. by a red Isuzu Trooper. She was unable to provide a plate number.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

CONSTANT COMPANION

Engaging the services of a full-time, live-in caregiver provides the senior client with continuity of care. This arrangement allows for the development of a caring relationship between the senior and the caregiver. Families that are unable to be present full-time can gain tremendous peace of mind knowing that there is someone available around the clock to assist their loved one in his or her home. This category of care can be critical to the physical and emotional well-being of the senior. Daily routines are consistent and without disruption. Arrangements can even be made to provide a relief caregiver so then the primary aide has a day off. Learn about the benefits of the live-in caregiving option from your home health-care agency.

If you believe that a full-time live-in companion might be right for your parent's situation, please call. We will be happy to discuss all aspects of hiring a full-time companion. Our aides can provide a spectrum of services, including bathing, grooming, dressing, medication reminders, shopping and cooking, as well as light housekeeping. We can also provide the companionship, conversation and mental stimulation that seniors need to stay happy and engaged. If you have any questions at all, please call 781-878-2994 today to set up an initial meeting to discuss your needs and your parent's needs. Our address is 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

top the list. It's so congested. People are impatient and people are distracted," Police Lieutenant William Quigley said. "There is an inordinate number of accidents along there."

The intersection of Lower King and Route 3A is a close second for hazardous intersection according to residents.

In the few months, the area of Route 3A near King Street easily could be named the most dangerous. In late April, a car pulled out of Lower King turning left and was t-boned by a dump truck. The passenger of the car is paralyzed as a result, Quigley said.

"The King Street intersection is notorious," Quigley said.

In June, not directly related to the intersection, a truck veered into the opposite lane hitting a wrecker head on near Sanctuary Pond. The accident killed the driver of the truck.

The big thing is for drivers to be in the moment.

"The main thing for drivers is to concentrate on what they are doing – driving. Be patient, turn down the radio, put the cell phone down, put the coffee down," Quigley said.

The Mariner solicited informal comments from readers through our Facebook page. Far and away the most referenced intersection was Sohier and 3A.

Ron Goodwin, who travels from his home on Sohier Street to his business, Goodwin Graphics, on Route 3A just north of the Lower King intersection everyday, said the wait for even a right hand turn from Sohier to 3A can be a long one.

"Sometimes you wait there a long time to do it safely," Goodwin said. "The lights at Stop & Shop give a bit of a gap in traffic, but it's tough to find a gap in the cars going southbound."

The closest light on the southbound side is back at Hingham at the intersection of Route 228 and 3A. "By the time the cars are at Sohier Street the cars compact again."

In conjunction with the Avalon 220-unit apartment complex a permit for a light at Sohier Street, just a few hundred feet from the Avalon driveway, was sought from Mass Highway, but the application was denied.

For some, the question remains why it has taken so long for something to be done at the Sohier intersection, a known hazard by most in town.

"What I don't understand is how we could allow (Sohier and 3A) to be the most dangerous intersection – on this one street alone there are two schools, one swim center and the Music Circus," said Linda Fechter, a Westgate Lane resident. "Avalon or no Avalon, this should've been addressed a long time ago."

The other "hot spot" intersection is at the junction of Beechwood and Route 3A near the Shaw's Plaza. Quigley said in the area has been targeted over the last year for traffic enforcement.

"We've given out tons of tickets there," Quigley said. They watch especially for red light violations and speeding.

From the Cohasset line to Schofield Road the speed limit is 35mph, whereas most of Cohasset portion of Route 3A is 50mph. The Beechwood intersection was the site of a double fatal crash in the last decade, Quigley said.

Quigley offered an interesting point, "there are more accidents at intersections where there are lights."

The police are not always aware when an accident occurs. Sometimes the involved parties simply exchange papers and go on their way. The police write an accident report when there has been damage over $1000, if there is any personal injury or if there is a crime involved.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

The left-turn arrows at Route 3A and Beechwood Street only work if the vehicle is positioned just right. Without the arrow, motorists take often matters into their own hands and do not wait for a lull in oncoming traffic before making the turn.

A motorist attempts a left turn out of lower King Street onto Route 3A. Lower King and Route 3A numbers among the most dangerous intersections in Cohasset.

The large sector of Cohasset off the busy byway is not immune to car accidents or hazardous intersections, but they are less dangerous.

"There are no major hot spots off 3A," Quigley said.

Forest Avenue at Jerusalem was named as a dangerous intersection, especially in the winter and for those unfamiliar with the area, Quigley said.

Because of rise in the road the intersection at Cedar Street and Hull Street was on the list, as well as Hull and Lambert's Lane. One reader named the intersection of Norfolk and Cushing roads.

Perhaps the most surprising area named by police as hazardous is not an intersection at all, rather a parking lot. "We get a lot of calls for accidents in the Shaw's parking lot," Quigley said.

Using home oxygen safely — Smoking in homes where people use oxygen starts many fires each year that cause deaths and injuries to the person, family members, neighbors and pets. When oxygen is used in the home, the amount of oxygen in the air, furniture, clothing and hair goes up, making it easier for a fire to start and spread. When more oxygen is in the air, fires will burn hotter and faster.

No one should smoke in the home. The fire danger is too great. Quitting is the best thing you can do for your health and safety. If you must smoke: disconnect the oxygen, wait 10 minutes and go outside to smoke.

The Massachusetts Smokers' Helpline at 1-800-879-8678 can help you to quit. The helpline offers free telephone counseling, information and referral services for Massachusetts residents who want to stop smoking.

More questions for Ripley Road 40-B project

First remand hearing is bumpy

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

More questions seemed to be raised than answered at the zoning board's public hearing on the 25 Ripley Road affordable housing project.

The updated site plan did not match the existing architectural drawings. The project's civil engineer was ill and not in attendance leaving no one to address many of the zoning board's site plan, drainage and septic questions. The details of some of the project's development team were not complete. The basics of the project, such as how many bedrooms, seemed to be in flux.

"This is going to take many hours ahead," said Woody Chittick, chair of the Zoning Board of Appeals, near the close of the public hearing. The hearing was continued until Tuesday, Sept. 7 at a time to be determined.

This is not the first time the Ripley Road project has had an audience before the Zoning Board. About a year ago, the zoning board denied the project's application after months of hearings, largely due to a lack of evidence.

Cohasset resident, property owner and developer, Will Charles, appealed the denial of the application to the state. The state's Housing Appeals Committee has remanded the application back to the Zoning Board with some very specific requirements for more information.

The application includes plans to convert the current single-family home into seven two-bedroom condominium units. Two of the units will be deemed "affordable" by state standards. The inclusion of these two units allows the entire project to be possible under Chapter 40-B, the state's affordable housing law. Under Chapter 40-B towns with less than 10 percent housing stock are vulnerable to housing projects that can be approved under flexible zoning rules.

The application as it stands asks for waivers relieving the project of at least 20 local zoning requirements.

Chittick pointed out that in the revised site plan, recently submitted for review at this week's hearing, would cause the project to lose two parking spaces as they are currently positioned on the architectural drawings.

The applicant's attorney, Jay Creed of Marshfield-based Creed & Formica, indicated an updated set of architectural drawings could be a condition of the permit.

Chittick said the zoning board could not make it a condition, sight unseen.

Charles asked if the project reverted back to 11-bedrooms (with three one-bedrooms and four two-bedrooms) the problem with the parking would be resolved.

"It might," Chittick said, but did not want to weigh in any further on the scope of the project. Chittick also pointed out the 14 parking space plan would need five different zoning waivers.

"It is a matter of safety," Chittick said, adding in the initial round of hearings police and fire recommended angled parking spaces and a one-way entry and exit.

The zoning board and the application walked through the five requirements outlined by the Housing Appeals Committee.

At several points, zoning board members and the applicant disagreed on whether the submissions required by the remand order had been met.

In a presentation of the expanded development team, members of the zoning board were not satisfied with some of the team's résumé information. The remand order called for applicant to address the contractor's identity and experience. In paperwork, names of a developer and a contractor were given.

The information on the project manager/developer, Sam Chenet, gave little about his background as a developer. His résumé gave his current job as an engineer at Verizon. The contractor, Amilcar Barros, listed his largest project as a rehab and four-unit condo conversion in Waltham.

"Not to be too snarky, but I think when the Mass Housing calls for an experienced contractor and experienced developer I'm sure they had something more in mind than someone who has done more than some window frames," Chittick said.

To allow sufficient time for the necessary information to be gathered and developed, the hearing was continued until September.

The last question of the evening came from a neighbor to the Ripley Road project. Kimberly McGowan of North Main Street asked the zoning board whether there was urgency to the project because with the Avalon apartment complex, the town's 40-B 10 percent affordable housing stock requirement would be met.

The zoning board and town counsel clarified that Avalon's units will not "count" toward Cohasset affordable housing stock until occupancy permits are issued. Avalon received building permits for its complex and expects to break ground on the project this summer.

In the meantime, until Avalon's apartments are on the state registry, the town of Cohasset is susceptible to 40-B projects.

Political Notes

Gov. Patrick signs regional dispatch legislation

Gov. Deval L. Patrick signed into law, legislation that will allow the towns of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Norwell to regionalize their 911 dispatch centers. The dispatch facility will be at Hingham Town Hall. The legislation was filed by state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, late Rep. Robert Nyman, D-Hanover, and state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth.

Under a plan to allow cities and towns to regionalize their dispatch centers, the Commonwealth will contribute more than $3 million in construction and operating costs to this project. Since 2008, the Commonwealth has granted $15 million for regionalized dispatch. Once the dispatch center is operating, the communities involved could collectively save as much as $500,000 in the first year. In the last two fiscal years, the four towns combined spent $1.5 million on emergency dispatch.

"At a time when cities and towns are making cuts in services, this legislation will allow these communities to save a significant amount of money year in and year out", said Bradley. "In addition to the cost savings, the public will benefit from a more efficient and enhanced public safety dispatch center."

"As tax dollars continue to be stretched, it is more imperative than ever that communities consider regionalizing services," Hedlund said. "The legislative process can sometimes be slow, so I thank my colleagues for quickly moving this important bill through so that the towns can start to realize much-needed savings sooner."

"On behalf of the communities of Hingham, Norwell, Cohasset and Hull we wish to thank Rep. Bradley, the late Rep. Nyman, Sen. Hedlund and Gov. Patrick for passing and signing the regional dispatch center legislation. This is another critical step in bringing the four-town regional dispatch center to reality. The center will provide for improved emergency services to over 50,000 residents and be a model for similar efforts across the Commonwealth," town administrators Kevin Paicos and Jim Boudreau, town managers Bill Griffin and Phil Lemnios stated in a joint statement.

Local officials hope to have the dispatch center up and running by the end of the year.

Preliminary plans for turbine on Turkey Hill

Applied Science Associates based in Rhode Island. Dan Mendelsohn of Applied Science presented much of the project's specifics.

While nothing is set in stone the current plan is to install an 80-meter 1.8-megawatt turbine made by Vestas just south of the cell towers on Turkey Hill. The Trustees will own the turbine.

The Trustees have utilized wind data previously collected by a meteorological (or MET) tower erected under the direction of Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee. The MET tower collected wind data at different heights over the course of a year.

"It's not the most dynamic environment for a turbine, but it's pretty darn good," Mendelsohn said.

The noise and shadow/flicker parts of the feasibility study are yet to be complete, but are part of the project deliverables, Mendelsohn said.

"We feel responsible as an organization not only to reduce our own carbon footprint, but also to lead by example."
— Steve Sloan, Trustees of Reservations

One of the key aspects the alternative energy committee asked about is the setback for the turbine. The current siting for turbine places the "fall down" zone within the boundaries of the Trustee's property and within Cohasset.

The closest residences to the turbine will the Golden Living Center and a house in Hingham leased to the Trustees from the Town of Hingham.

Details such as delivery of the turbines, access to the site, the steep grade of the site, and connection to the power grid were also discussed.

The Trustees plan is to use the energy generated by the large turbine to offset the power they use throughout their properties. The Green Communities Act allows non-profits and other entities to generate energy and through a credit-based system offset energy used elsewhere in the state. At least three options exist for connecting the turbine to the grid.

Mendelsohn said his firm plans to conclude the feasibility study within the next month and apply for a special permit shortly after.

The project is working under time constraints. The Trustees hope to take advantage of a stimulus (American Recovery and Reinvestment) grant, which has a deadline of Dec. 31, 2010. One of the requirements of the grant, which is equal to 30 percent of the project cost, is to have the project substantially developed.

If the project ends up applying for a special permit, it will be the second time the Cohasset Planning Board has considered a wind turbine project. In 2008 and 2009, the planning board considered, and ultimately denied, an application for two 100-meter turbines off Route 3A near Hingham Lumber. A private developer, CCI-Energy, brought the proposal forth.

Brendan McNamara makes his television debut!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

ENJOY

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing? It has been a pretty nice week weather-wise and the weekend looks nice to enjoy. Enjoy the weekend Cohasset and try to include the Cohasset Dramatic Clubs show called "13!"

I will be celebrating my birthday a bit late (mine was last week, July 17th) with a friend who has always been (1 week younger) and never let me forget it, hee hee!). So, happy 44th Birthday to me and to Peggy Litchfield who turns 44 tomorrow, July 24th!!! Here's to a great year for us both girly-girl!

DOG RESCUE

Here is a "feel-good" kind of story about a great rescue that happened here in town. One night this past week, the Cohasset Fire Department was called to Summer Street at James Brook due to a dog in the water that could not get out. When they arrived, they discovered Mary Grayken's Labrador that after a quick dip to cool off, could not get out. The current then kicked in and away the dog went.

When everyone caught up with her, she was trapped and getting so tired. Fire Lt. Randy Belanger brought over a ladder and went in beside the dog and firefighter/paramedic Joe Pergola was then able to collar the dog. Then, firefighter/paramedic Kevin Durette had a rope and all helped, along with the spectators cheers to pull the dog out!

Well, for all the efforts of the firefighters hard work, even a dog days thank you... By shaking and spraying them all with water! All is well that ends well!

TV DEBUT

Three-month-old Brendan McNamara recently escorted his mother, Melissa King McNamara to New York City on a business trip to the Gemological Institute of America (GIA.) While there he stopped by the Today Show one morning and made his debut national television appearance with Al Roker of NBC TV.

Brendan's mom, Melissa of King Jewelers in Cohasset received her Diamond Certificate after successful completion of exams at the NYC GIA headquarters during their visit. She is enrolled in the Certified Gemologist program offered by the Institute.

Also accompanying Brendan and his mother on the trip were his grandmother, Alice McNamara and Aunt Kelly McNamara all of whom reside in Norwell.

Brendan is also the grandson of Valerie King and great grandson of June King, both of Scituate.

EASTERN NAZARENE

Cohasset resident Laurel Hickey graduated from Eastern Nazarene College recently, receiving her diploma during the college's recent spring commencement exercises held May 15 at the Quincy Christian liberal arts college.

Laurel graduated with a bachelor of science degree. She graduated from ENC's Adult and Graduate Studies Program, also known as the LEAD program. Designed to help working adults achieve their educational and career goals while balancing work and family obligations, the LEAD program offers a wide range of certificate, associate's, bachelor's, and master's programs.

RAFFLE WINNER

Congratulations to Ed Putnam, winner of the High School Sailing Team's fundraising raffle! Ed won four tickets to the Boston Red Sox game against the Tampa Bay Devil Rays. And, many thanks to Sail Nantasket for donating the tickets and for sponsoring the team. Cohasset High School, along with Hull High School and the SS Charter School would not have a Sailing Team without Sail Nantasket's support.

The sailing team is not part of the schools' athletic budgets and is funded entirely by funds raised through Sail Nantasket and user fees. Please continue to support our team by donating to Sail Nantasket, PO Box 200, Hull, Ma 02025.

Mural adds color to the beach

High school student paints bathhouse

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

So far this summer has been full of idyllic sunny, hot days made for fun at the beach.

On those days Sandy Beach is a mix of colors and activities – kids build sand castles, then cool off in the ocean, moms and dads chat together in beach chair circles. Spending a day, or a dozen, at the beach is one of the most popular pastimes of summer.

One young artist has combined a beach day with a day in the studio. Caitlin Mavilia, a 15-year-old Cohasset resident, has been working since school got to create a colorful mural on a wall of the Sandy Beach bathhouse.

Regular Sandy Beach visitors know her by now – and know the many hours she has spent painting an underwater scene.

Last summer Caitlin, who will be a Cohasset High sophomore in the fall, touched up the two older murals by putting a new coat of paint on them. High school students created these murals in years gone by.

But, this summer, she was hired by the Sandy Beach Association to paint a brand-new mural on the bathhouse wall facing the beach.

"It was a lot more fun," Caitlin said to use her own creative juices, rather than paint over another artist's work.

The colorful underwater scene was inspired at the start by the whale whose blowhole and waterspout is incorporated into a real spout – the bathhouse's outdoor showerhead. Then came the treasure chest, and the fish, and the seaweed, and the lobster, and so on.

"I'm having fun with it. Everyday I seem to come up with something new to add," Caitlin said, who is down at the beach as much as she can working on the painting.

COURTESY PHOTO

Please take a moment next time you are at the beach to take a look at the newly painted mural on the exterior walls of the bathhouse. Caitlin Mavilia planned and painted these terrific seascapes with the help of Hugh Gideon-Murphy.

"The bathhouse used to be a very simple gray building; it's a little jewel box now."
— Patricia Murphy, Sandy Beach Board of Trustees

Before the paintbrush made its first swipe on the formerly gray wall, Caitlin created a rough drawing of what she intended to do. But, she's added different elements along the way.

Caitlin has received comments from regular beach goers who have watched her create the scene day by day, item by item. Many have stopped to ask her what art school she goes to, or how she learned to paint, or to encourage her to do more mural painting in private homes.

"I've always really like art," Caitlin said, adding her family does have some artistic genes. Her grandfather, Al Buckley, is an accomplished bird decoy carver, and her mother, Susan Mavilia, is a graphic artist.

This project is her first mural that she has done almost from start to finish. She is still completing the detail work to the mural.

Caitlin received help with the mural from Hugh Gideon-Murphy, a Cohasset resident and rising sophomore at Dublin School in Dublin, New Hampshire.

"The bathhouse used to be a very simple gray building; it's a little jewel box now," said Patricia Murphy of the Sandy Beach Board of Trustees. She coordinates the maintenance of the beach.

There is one remaining gray wall to the bathhouse and although she hasn't been asked, she's already been thinking of mural ideas.

"Right now, it's just gray, and I don't think that's very pretty," Caitlin said with a laugh.

Dunphy joins the Red Lion Inn

Mike Dunphy, a graduate of Cohasset High School, has returned home to manage the Red Lion Inn as a partner. While attending Boston University, Dunphy cooked in Boston restaurants such as Armani Café, Top of The Hub and Aquitaine Bis to pay his bills. Most recently, Dunphy worked with executive chef and owner of Via Matta, Michael Schlow. On his nights off, Dunphy would frequent local comedy clubs such as the Comedy Connection and Nicks Comedy Stop where he would perform his comedy routines, working his way to New York City to become a regular at Carolines on Broadway.

In time, Dunphy landed himself initially as a featured chef on NECN's "TV Diner" with host Billy Costa and eventually as the shows on-air chef/comedian, which he spun into writing the show's reviews, awarding the "Platinum Plates" and writing dialogue for the host. From there, Dunphy began writing a national humor column for Slammed magazine where he would give his views on food trends and kitchen insights.

After spending the last two years in Hollywood hosting and producing his own show at the Hollywood Improv, playing at such places as the Comedy Store and the Laugh Factory, Dunphy was sharing the stage and even booking comics. The show had two-year run, before Dunphy pulled the plug on it and decided to move to the South Shore to raise his family, son, Chase, with wife, Kelly.

"I got a chance to perform with some of my comedy idols, I laughed a lot and have some great stories to tell; but now it's time to think about being a Dad and a husband," he said. "What better place to raise your family then the South Shore? My family is here and what a great story, I used to be a bus boy here at the original Lion, now I'm the executive chef; if that's not feel good, I don't know what is."

Dunphy is happy to be home and is eager to combine his talents with his long time friend and former executive chef of Ivy Boston, Joshua Breen, who will be appearing on the Food Networks "Chopped" this summer. Joshua brings his flair for Italian cuisine and homemade pastas to the table and the two should prove to be a solid pair in the kitchen. With a new staff in the back of the house, the Lion hopes to bring it's standard back to the forefront and give locals a place they can call home again. Soon, Dunphy will bring his comedy talent to the Red Lion nightclub, The Cave, along with some of his buddies from the Hollywood Improv.

Why do I ride?

By Sean Aherne
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On August 8th, I will be riding in the Pan Massachusetts Challenge for the second consecutive year. Since making the decision to ride last summer, I have frequently been asked why I ride. As a great lover of history, my first response was a quote from Mahatma Gandhi: "You must be the change you wish to see in the world." For me the search to find a cure for cancer is personal, inaction was simply not an option.

I have known and still know many people who have battled or are battling cancer. Among them have been and are numerous friends and family members including both of my grandmothers. Many have felt the helplessness I felt in the spring of 2009, learning within a week's time that both a good friend and my maternal grandmother had been diagnosed with cancer, just months after I had lost my paternal grandmother to cancer. It was a sudden and heart sinking moment for me.

My grandmother's 70th birthday party was fast approaching and I wanted to give her a meaningful gift. With my grandmother's recent breast cancer diagnosis still weighing on me, I saw a TV commercial for the Pan Massachusetts Challenge more commonly known as the PMC. The day of my grandmother's birthday party I stood up and told my entire family that I had decided to ride in the PMC the following day. I passed a hat around and I was able to raise more than the minimum amount needed to enter the ride in just that one night.

Sean Aherne will ride in the Pan-Mass Challenge on Aug. 8. The Pan-Massachusetts Challenge raises money for life-saving cancer research and treatment at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through an annual bike-a-thon that crosses the state.

The next day I drove up to Babson College, the starting point of my route, full of curiosity and hope for what the day would bring. I jumped on my mountain bike and began my ride. I started slowly, not knowing how I should pace myself. Rider after rider passed me then there was a man riding next to me at the same pace. We began to talk. He explained to me how his father and brother had survived cancer. It gave me hope as we rode the last 40 miles together. He then told me that at the 30-mile marker there would be a high school where volunteers served riders food and water. They also checked all the riders' bikes to make sure the last leg of our journey did not have any unnecessary hitches. When we got to the high school Mike introduced me to his whole family, including his father and brother who were riding. We all rode to the finish line as a group.

On our way back we stopped at the beginning of an open field, where there was a break in the hordes of people that had gathered to cheer us on as we rode. Mike pulled out a list of names, explaining to me that every year when he reaches this point in the ride he stops to pray for all those he has lost and all those who continue to fight cancer. At that moment, I thought about both of my grandmothers and my friend. The names and faces of all the others I know and have known who had to fight cancer turned through my head like an action-flip book. The emotions were powerful. I prayed alongside Mike and his family for more than 10 minutes. Then we continued on our way. As we rode I could not help but reflect.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Driving defensively

We will be the first to admit, we're chicken when it comes to darting out into traffic at a dangerous intersection.

We also feel very susceptible to pressure from the motorists behind us who are anxious to get moving and do not want to wait behind a tentative driver. They have been known to lean on their horn to get us to make the turn.

Therefore, we practice avoidance. We will drive out of our way to avoid left-hand turns, like the one at the top of Sohier Street on Route 3A.

One of our regular stops is the Dunkin Donuts just past that intersection. It never ceases to amaze us the motorists, with their freshly brewed coffee in hand, who make a left turn out of that driveway, even though the sign clearly states "no left turn" during peak hours. They are far less cautious than we are and are asking to be involved in an accident, in our view.

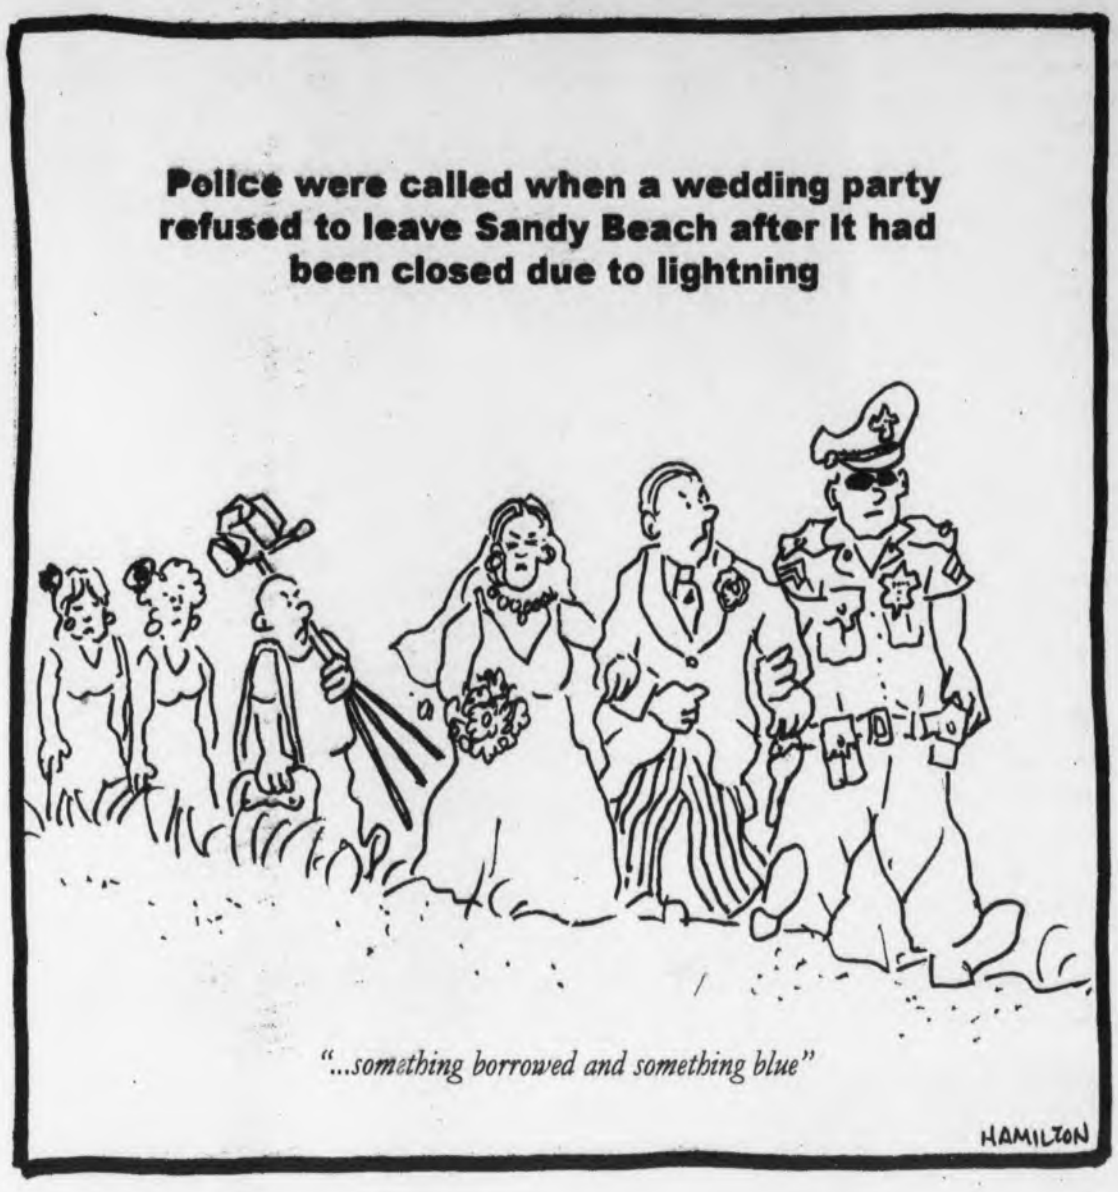
It is no secret that Route 3A in Cohasset is peppered with difficult and dangerous intersections. Its nickname might as well be "accident row." Some of the fault lies with the ever-increasing amount of traffic and in some cases, poorly designed intersections.

The left-turn arrows at the lights at 3A and Beechwood, for example, do work but only if the waiting car is positioned just right – otherwise the arrows do not come on. That means that for the most part, a motorist wanting to turn left must wait for a lull in the oncoming two traffic lanes before making the turn. Some grow impatient or try to turn before the oncoming traffic gets revved up after a red light with potentially disastrous results.

Cohasset is not immune to bad intersections along Route 3A. Scituate's Mann Lot Road intersection near the new animal shelter is one of the worst. The lights at 3A and First Parish Road are also poorly designed so if you need to make a left from 3A coming from either direction – you cannot see around the vehicle or vehicles waiting to make a left that are facing you.

Therefore, coming from the Marshfield direction – when we want to turn left onto First Parish – we now turn right, turn around at the police station driveway – pull back out onto First Parish and then go straight across 3A.

Defensive tactics seem to work for us and help us deflect the ever-constant pressure of impatient drivers behind us.



Intersections are not the only traffic situations that require a good defense.

Distracted drivers are becoming more and more of a problem.

We have noticed a sharp increase in the amount of vehicles heading toward us that drift over the centerline only to then correct themselves. As the motorist passes us – we see the cell phone and or coffee in the operator's hand.

There has to be an all-out educational effort to get the issue of distracted driving under control. Couple that with inexperienced drivers and it is a recipe for disaster. Think about this: if we can sit through a two-hour movie in the cinema with cell phone turned off – why can't we drive down the street without having our cell phone on?

We all need to turn off the cell phone, blackberry or other device when we turn on the ignition. Not to do so, is putting the driver's life, the lives of any passengers and those unsuspecting motorists along the roadway at risk.

Wind power knowledge

Wow, wow, wow, I didn't have much knowledge about the wind power issue. I read a lot of comments and much misinformation. Mr. Wenner did all of us, willing to learn, good, thoughtful information on this important matter.

The Triathlon and church-goers

The following to the Board of Selectmen was provided to the Cohasset Mariner.

Now that the Cohasset Triathlon has run its course for 2010, I would like to share some thoughts for future events. I understand that the Triathlon has earned a good reputation after only a few years and that it offers a positive image for our beautiful town. However, I question the timing as it affects the residents of Cohasset. As a member of the Second Congregational Church, I was disappointed that we were unable to conduct our traditional 8 a.m. worship service at the Sailing Club last year due to the fact that the roads were closed to automobile traffic, in that area, at that time. I accepted that as just an inconvenience.

This year, we had to, not only, cancel our Sailing Club service, but move our regular 10 a.m. service to 8 a.m. because the roads around the Common would be closed. This must have caused all of the Cohasset churches to alter their schedules. Before plans are made for next year's Triathlon, perhaps the day and time should be reconsidered so that we will be able to "get to church on time."

Wind turbines and setback requirement

COMMENTARY

SCOTT O'GRADY

The question of whether we should change this admittedly not unreasonable requirement arises because the towers proposed for the site on Scituate Hill are too tall to meet it.

The statistical probability of life emerging in the universe is staggeringly small. In our vast and violent universe we can only guess at the number of planets that exist that contain the conditions conducive to life as we know it. On those imaginary planets, the processes that lead to the creation of life from its precursors are no more likely to occur than that those planets exist in the first place. And yet here we are, discussing the remarkable unlikelihood of our existence. It only had to happen once, and look where it got us.

The chance that BP would blow up a deep-water oil drilling platform and turn the Gulf of Mexico into a massive toxic waste dump was too small for MMS regulators to take into account when issuing drilling permits. Nobody had ever blown up a high pressure well before, so the likelihood of the worst case scenario was too small to stand in the way of the world's need for cheap oil. And yet here we are, looking for the foreseeable future at the need to import shrimp from the Far East for our family barbecues.

Steve Wenner's statistical analysis of the danger posed by wind turbines on Scituate Hill in Cohasset is a demonstration of why we need to train our children in logic and critical thinking in addition to the specialized disciplines that contemporary society increasingly demands of us. I find no fault with Mr. Wenner's methodology, but his application of that methodology is in this case nothing more than a false analogy. Rhetorically, his commentary is compelling, and likely to result in the political action he is supporting. Logically, his argument is not germane.

The question before the town is whether we should amend the setback requirements of the wind turbine bylaw. Currently, the setback is the distance from the ground to the highest point of the tower, vanes included, measured from the base of the tower to the boundary of any land zoned residential. This seems to me to be a seat of the pants requirement, arrived at by reasonable people trying to come up with reasonable rules for siting a potentially dangerous structure, where the danger is largely unknown and an actual failure analysis of the structure is unavailable. The question of whether we should change this admittedly not unreasonable requirement arises because the towers proposed for the site on Scituate Hill are too tall to meet it.

The first fallacy that came up in this discussion was obvious. The towers don't fit, so the wind bylaw makes wind power in Cohasset impossible. This is a false dichotomy. The board suggested that we have only two courses of action: change the bylaw, or give up the idea of wind power in Cohasset. Of course there are other options. Shorter towers, for instance. The not unreasonable setback requirement is only a hindrance to very large towers. The setback requirement remains reasonable on its face; perhaps it is the size of the towers proposed that is unreasonable.

The second fallacy, that proposed in Steve Wenner's commentary, conveys the impression that the setback requirement is in fact unreasonable. Mr. Wenner suggests that the towers are less dangerous than a walk in the woods. This is a false analogy. While I am persuaded by the statistical argument that a walk in the woods is enormously dangerous, this is in no way similar to the danger of a deliberately constructed, privately owned, profit generating structure, and the rules that our polity should enact

Sidewalk on Route 3A one step closer

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

The Route 3A Sidewalk Lives — The Route 3A sidewalk Project has been active intermittently for several years. If you remember, the Town obtained a Transportation Oriented Development Grant to connect the North Main Street sidewalk to the Cohasset Greenbush Station in 2007. In 2008 the portion from North Main Street to Route 3A alongside Lower King Street was completed. Further progress sat still until the MBTA finished their construction on Route 3A at Lower King Street. After the MBTA "finished" this work they had relocated a portion of the Route 3A guardrail right over our sidewalk location. That was not a good thing. So we waited a bit more until the MBTA could gather their declining construction forces to put the guardrail back where it should have gone in the first place. That was completed last fall.

We are in the process of setting up a meeting with Mass Highway to review the sidewalk location. If they concur that all is OK we can begin construction.

Where's the Steeple?

Path of the Buried Electrical Conduit

Now, fast forward to this spring… When we restarted the project, Mass Highway decided that they had comments regarding the plans that they had in their possession since the project started. So, we went back to the drawing board with a few more design changes. One of the items that Mass Highway asked for us to do was to mark the path of the sidewalk with wooden stakes every 50 feet. This week, our engineers completed the mark-out of the sidewalk every 50 feet from the intersection of Lower King Street to the Greenbush Station. If you drive along Route 3A you might catch a glimpse of the wooden stakes. In portions of the way they are in the underbrush and not very visible, so if you don't see them for the entire length of the sidewalk, we can assure you they are there.

So what's the next step? We are in the process of setting up a meeting with Mass Highway to review the sidewalk location. If they concur that all is OK we can begin construction. But, there have been so many glitches so far, we are a bit reserved about when we will get the final go ahead.

Up, Up and Away —You probably have read in the Mariner about the addition of a cellular transmitter to the steeple of Cohasset's First Parish Church. That's why the old steeple has been removed for a month or so awaiting a new steeple which will be more cell friendly. The cellar of the church has been excavated to house the necessary equipment to support the cell installation.

However, in addition to the new steeple, there is one other thing that was missing. That is a source of electricity to provide the energy to make the whole shebang function. Tuesday of this past week that began to be remedied. On Monday, July 12th, the Board of Selectmen had granted permission for the church to run a new underground power line in the Common from a near-by electric pole to the church. The conduit is now in the ground ready to provide power to the cell equipment.

One of the photos shows the path of the buried conduit that will carry the power from the pole to the church. The steel conduit can be seen in the photo as it runs down the side of the pole, where it then turns and runs underground to the building.

Now, about the steeple… While the old steeple sits alongside the storage garage at Town Hall, the new steeple arrived this past Wednesday morning shrink-wrapped on a trailer, waiting to be mounted on the church tower.

We are not privy to the detailed schedule, so we don't know when all will be done. But, it clearly looks like a number of the major pieces have fallen into place for project to be completed.

The New Steeple Arrives

HEALTH NOTES

Climate change, water temperatures

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

One consequence of the higher temperatures is the recent reports of masses of jellyfish covering the coastline.

Many factors make a planet livable or not. In the known cosmos, no other planets, at least as far as we can observe, contain sentient beings; much less humans. Ours has water of which there exists an abundance in the universe. And for endless eons, vegetable matter has grown, enabling countless species, sentient and otherwise, sufficient nutrients — and therefore an abundance of creatures, including us humans living what in this age seems to be a normal life. A casual inspection of surrounding planets, Mars, Jupiter, etc., show no indications of habitability, at least in this solar system.

The abundance of nutrients, water and sentient human and other beings represents a challenge to be prepared to cope with evolution as it takes place. As threats to our environment increase, we have a world with a growing number of humans, which need to be fed and accommodated in a reasonably healthy life style. For example, personal health in summer time involves keeping yourself free from some of nature's abundant insect pests.

Conceivably, release of oil into oceans is nature's newest experiment in creating a supply of additional nutrients to its waters. But other changes are also taking place.

We now have a similar condition in Cohasset. Recently samples from Little Harbor have revealed a reddish growth on some of our rocks, and there is one stone, observable at low water near the causeway on Atlantic Avenue, which, different from other rocks, has turned a bright green. Water temperatures have never before in recorded history reached the levels we have been observing.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) is responsible for implementation of the bathing beach monitoring program at over 500 coastal beaches in Massachusetts. The BEACH Act resulted in funding used to increase and implement consistent water quality monitoring throughout the state, increased public awareness of beach water quality issues and identify areas of concern. This act funds beach sampling done in Cohasset each week.

All public and semi-public bathing beaches in Massachusetts are required to be monitored for bacterial and other types of contamination during the bathing season. The bathing beach season in Massachusetts runs from Memorial Day through Labor Day during most years. If water samples from a beach are found exceed regulatory standards, the beach must be posted as unsafe for swimming due to bacterial contamination. Monitoring is currently conducted at over 600 locations at 500 marine beaches.

One consequence of the higher temperatures is the recent reports of masses of jellyfish covering the coastline. Some species can average 12 inches long with tentacles containing stinging structures used to paralyze small fish and other prey. Some move by means of a sail allowing them to be visible on the surface of the water. Those found in northern latitudes are much smaller than in southern climates. When washed ashore, some dead jellyfish can still sting. Moreover, they are not always obvious in the water. Tentacles may break away in the surf and inflict stings just as potent as those from attached animals.

If you suspect a sting, apply a cream containing a painkiller, an antihistamine. For more serious symptoms, see a doctor. Most stings disappear by themselves, sometimes within 15 or 20 minutes.

Many changes will surely be required and accommodations made as temperatures, our environment, our foods and clothing and almost every characteristic of our life are altered; some in very major ways. We have spoken of nutrient values in foods; methods of communication; adaptation to climate change, and there are sure to be others.

Such are the vicissitudes of life on earth. It's up to us as thinking people on a reasonably hospitable planet to find worthwhile goals and concentrate on them rather than the details of life, which sometimes preoccupy us.

Great July for beach-lovers

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

Well, this weather has been a far cry from that of last year when it was cold and rainy well into July. It has probably been great for beach lovers. For many years when I was younger, I had a daily swim at Sandy Beach, weather permitting. After the swim I would flop over onto my back and just go limp, held up by the buoyancy of the salt water. It was so refreshing! We are fortunate to have Sandy Beach close by.

On June 23, Holly Harris, elder law attorney, spoke about trusts. They are one way to own and deal with property. She explained very clearly the different kinds of trusts, also situations that call for a trust.

On June 30, Lisa Hewitt, also an elder law attorney, spoke to the group about the importance of making a will. She also explained what effect changes in one's life, such as a marriage or divorce, could have on a will. She discussed limitations on a will and what might happen to an estate if there were no such document. Ms. Hewitt stressed the importance of keeping all asset documents in one binder and keeping it up to date.

These seminars are open to all seniors. You are welcome to attend even if you are not planning to stay for lunch. I, for one – and I'm sure others would agree – have learned much from the seminars.

We've enjoyed lunch twice at the invitation of the Welch C… The first was at Proprietors Green, their new rental facility in Marshfield. After lunch we were given a tour of the apartments, library, fitness room and more. The second was an excellent lunch at the Allerton House in Hingham. Both were well attended.

On Monday of this week a few ladies, myself included, joined the Scituate elders for a trip to the Johnson and Wales Inn in Seekonk. After an elegant lunch we were entertained by a comedian who kept us laughing. It was a delightful way to spend a hot, humid day.

Scituate is planning two more excursions. One is for a lobster feast in York, Maine, in mid-August. The other will take place in October and will be a trip to the Mt. Washington Hotel in New Hampshire. For more information contact the Cohasset Senior Center by calling 781-383-9112.

Where learning counts

'Mathnasium' opens on Route 3A

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Love math? Hate math?

The new math learning center, Mathnasium, on Route 3A is currently accepting students from both ends of the love-hate math spectrum. And they hope to move those math haters to the other end of the spectrum through specialized instruction, one-on-one teaching and a healthy dose of fun.

The co-owners are mother and daughter Susan and Casey Pina – a retired high school math teacher and an entrepreneur. Together, they opened the doors to Mathnasium, an international learning center franchise, in June. And although school is out for the summer, they say help in math is very much in demand.

The instructors work one-on-one with students and utilize a variety of different tools to help kids understand math concepts. Puzzles, games, hands-on activities are at the ready if a situation calls for it — or if the kids just need a break.

"We want the kids to know this is a safe place for them to learn," Casey said. "Everything that we do has to do with math."

The five-person staff, Casey said, was carefully chosen to ensure they not only possessed superior math skills, but were able to impart that knowledge to kids of all different ages and abilities.

Mathnasium math learning center is an eight-year-old international franchise company based in Los Angeles, but has outlets across the globe. The Cohasset location is the first one on the South Shore and one of only a few in New England.

The focus of Mathnasium is the math curriculum from grades 2 through 12, though they do have a "first steps" program for pre-kindergarten to first-grade students. The core of the Mathnasium teaching model starts with the basics: good numbers sense, counting, sorting, reading a calendar and telling time. But, the expertise goes all the way to calculus.

"For myself, I love that in math there are all different ways to get to answer a question," Susan said. She taught high school math her entire career most recently at South Shore Vo-Tech in Hanover. "As a teacher you have to figure out how a student learns and how they can best get to the result."

The system helps those struggling with certain math aspects and students who want to get ahead.

The mother-daughter team plays to each other's strengths: Susan is coordinating all the education and development of individualized plans, while Casey takes care of the business end.

Mathnasium is much different from a typical high school classroom environment, yet Susan says she never ran her classrooms the "typical" way. She enjoys the individualized curriculum and teaching style at Mathnasium.

"Mathnasium does it the right way. When Casey first brought the business idea to me, I though 'finally someone else thinks the same way I do!'" Susan said, who said even though she retired she never had any intention of giving up teaching.

The staff feels a similar way, "I love it because it tailors learning to the needs of the client. We're free to use many different things to teach the kids," said José Colón, who formerly worked in special education.

Once enrolled in a Mathnasium program every student gets a binder with worksheets and information in it. When they arrive they check in, pick up their binder and find a space to settle in.

"It can be at a table or on the floor, where ever they feel most comfortable," Casey said. At each workstation, or pod, there are supplies – a giant calculator, pencils, paper, and a three-hole punch. The walls of the 1,700 square foot space are painted a bright red and white with hand-painted math-related icons.

An instructor will touch base with them within a few minutes, but won't stay with them the whole time.

The methodology is to "teach and move on." An instructor will check back with the student to see if they need additional help.

"A huge, huge, huge part of our teaching method is Socratic questioning…we rarely give students the answer," Casey said, adding that method has already begun catching on even between the kids. An older student might pose a question to a younger one who is struggling with a problem.

And that's the kind of positive learning environment the Pinas want to foster.

"I want the kids to feel a sense of comfort and I want them absolutely to walk away knowing more about how they, as an individual, learn," Casey said. "Here they have the option to explore and see what works for them."

Through that knowledge about one's own learning process, she aims to have student achieve greater success in school and in life.

"Math applies to everything…we've been trying to think about what kind of career doesn't incorporate math and we haven't been able to come up with anything," Casey said.

Why Cohasset?

The location on Route 3A in Cohasset was targeted because of its central location and ease of access from several area towns.

"It's 10 minutes from all the surrounding towns," Casey said, adding the socio-economics of the town means the parents for the most part are conscious of education. Yet, before jumping in, they visited and spoke with other small business owners in the area.

"They were kind and welcoming," Casey said. The Marshfield residents were sold – Cohasset it would be for their new business.

Although the Pinas are expecting most of their business to be driven from the South Shore, the Mathnasium learning center is something for which parents are willing to travel.

"We have someone enrolled for the whole year that lives an hour away," Casey said.

'Deprived of liberty'

COMMENTARY

ROBERT C. ERNST, SR.

I really don't know when I learned that the reason for my apprehension was that I had not obtained required registration nor had I received a notice that it was due.

This is a personally embarrassing story but it is one that should be told and, given July Fourth recently passed – and the principles that is evokes – the timing is apt.

You really should not be reading about this in The Mariner because I visited offices in person, telephoned or by mail most all of our elected or top appointed officials, but all have failed to respond about an incident that is now about a month old. The incident itself is not unimportant, but what is important is that, in my opinion, the incident is evidence of the breakdown in representative government. The incident occurred, I believe, because of an administrative procedure imposed by an appointee rather than legislation enacted by elected representatives. The result has been the pain and suffering of their constituent.

The story is I left my home on June 22 shortly after 7a.m. for two medical appointments, one in Weymouth at 8 a.m., and another in Scituate at 9:30. Within minutes I found myself locked in the rear seat of a police cruiser, my car and its keys seized, and I wasn't sure why. I was calm, but confused. I believe that when dealing with the police the best policy is one of cooperation.

I was soon released from the rear of the cruiser and was driven home by an officer. When I got home I finally realized the reason: my car's registration had expired. At my home the officer found the title to my car in my "in" basket and that seemed to satisfy him.

The officer left after advising me to call my insurance company, which I did as well as calling and canceling my appointments. I was now alone back in my apartment and not much the worse for wear. Later that afternoon I was able to obtain the car's release from storage in Hingham at a cost of $94.

Let me give a little background: I am a slightly over 95 male, only a bit handicapped. I have a reasonably full medical history and am grateful for my longevity, which includes slightly less than five years in Massachusetts. I have lived in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Ohio. I have operated cars in all of them for over 70 years, but never previously been deprived of my liberty nor had my car seized – indeed, I can remember how, before moving to Massachusetts, not having even heard of this happening to anyone else.

Ohio dealt with a similar vehicular situation by sending a letter stating my car was due for inspection, which was basically an emissions test, which took place nearby at a "purpose designed facility." I was subsequently informed that my car had passed and provided with a document ($20), which I sent to the Motor Vehicle Bureau along with a fee. Soon thereafter I received my new registration and a sticker for my license. It was all quite simple, convenient and inexpensive.

I really don't know when I learned that the reason for my apprehension was that I had not obtained required registration nor had I received a notice that it was due.

It was apparent to me that the Police were uncomfortable with this task and, while they did not apologize, the original officer said that had he known the circumstances he would not have carried out the procedure.

Later, a superior officer said he just would not have done so — period.

It also became evident that this severe inconvenience was a fairly common practice and although I did not broadcast my predicament I learned that two golfing buddies had a like experience, as did a personal friend.

As a good citizen I feel I was treated very badly – I was deprived of my freedom and my property (my car). And I had to pay a substantial amount of money to rectify a simple oversight.

The personnel in local officials' offices were familiar with these occurrences and were inclined to blame it on the Registry of Motor Vehicles. I had no patience with this because I felt that Town officials were elected, in part, to protect their constituents from abuse and apparently had ample time to do so but had done nothing about it.

A more disturbing aspect of this incident goes beyond the failure of local officials to protect their constituents. I am as aware as anyone else who reads the newspapers about the culture of abuse and corruption that permeates political and public employment. I ponder about whether laws/regulations such as this may be the cause, or the effect, of the disrespect in which taxpayers are held or if it is a case of the taxpayers being "turned off" after years of similar bad laws.

I intend to pursue an audience with the selectmen in case they working on something to correct this abuse, which, I believe, they have both the power and capacity to do.

governing its siting.

We need to look at this setback requirement. While I agree that this is the weak link in our bylaw, I disagree with the idea that it should be relaxed. Perhaps it should be strengthened. What happens when one of these towers fails catastrophically? Has a failure analysis been done? Has anyone blown one of these things up, and measured the damage? Yes, it is unlikely that it will explode. I'm sure that if a flaming piece of turbine wreckage crashes through my bedroom wall and kills me while I sleep my children will be amused and delighted by the sheer improbability of the means of my demise. I, however, will have no opinion on the subject. At that point it will be too late. Right now is the time when I need to decide whether or not it is appropriate for the town to relax the wind bylaw setback requirement. You, too. Do you have enough information?

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

'When we hear thunder, we clear the water'

Sunshine often precedes a storm cell so there have been times when the beach has been cleared while the sun is shining.

We have hit the official halfway point of summer. The weather has been fantastic and the beach has been full a good portion of the summer. Please take a moment next time you are at the beach to take a look at the newly painted mural on the exterior walls of the bathhouse. Caitlin Mavilia planned and painted these terrific seascapes with the help of Hugh Gideon-Murphy (Please see story on page 7).

While our summer has had more than its share of glorious sunshine, we have experienced occasional afternoon thunderstorms. While New England and the South Shore don't necessarily experience daily lightning storms like the Caribbean or Florida, we do get storms that produce cloud-to-ground lightning. This is extremely dangerous near the water. Our certified, professional lifeguards' first responsibility is to prevent injury. Therefore, when we hear thunder, we clear the water.

We are now fortunate to have a device that tracks storms and even lightning strikes. We can tell how far a storm or cloud-to-ground strike is. When this storm and lightning meter detects a cloud-to-ground lightning strike within 10 miles, we will clear the beach. Sometimes the threat is not visible from the beach, but it is there. Lightning can strike 10 miles ahead of a storm cell, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Sunshine often precedes a storm cell so there have been times when the beach has been cleared while the sun is shining. Don't risk your life, the life of your family or the safety of our Surf Rescue Technicians. When asked to leave the beach, do so immediately.

POLITICAL NOTES

Gambling with our future

By Tim Finnerty
CANDIDATE FOR STATE REPRESENTATIVE

Out of state gambling lobbyists have spent millions of dollars to encourage Massachusetts lawmakers to allow casinos and slot machines at racetracks. I oppose the House gambling bill. Independent research has shown that casinos and slots can bring significant economic and social costs.

Voting for the gambling bill is the easy vote for legislators. The Speaker of the House and out of state lobbyists are pushing hard for casinos and slot machines. The Patriot Ledger reported that "casino and gambling interests have flooded Massachusetts with nearly $1.8 million in lobbying dollars during the first six months of the year."

Research shows that casinos can decrease the employment rate, reduce local government revenue and reduce local business earnings. In addition, casinos and slots bring crime, domestic violence and gambling addiction. Casinos are not the free lunch that proponents suggest.

Casinos a sure thing? Foxwoods casino bonds have lost approximately 80 percent of their market value.

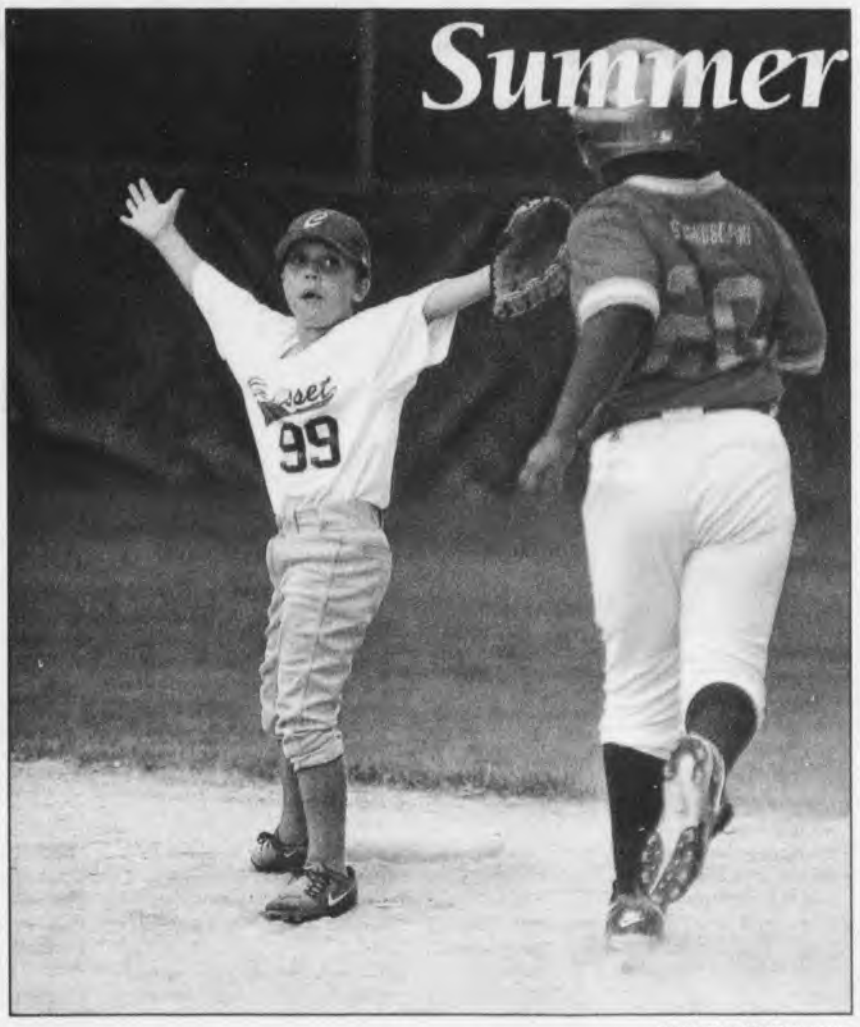
Cavanaro wins bronze

Cohasset star helps out Southeast at Bay State Games

The annual Bay State Summer Games are well underway, and a number of local athletes have risen to the top, including one local baseball player who took home a bronze medal. Here's some recent action from the Games.

The Southeast baseball team, featuring Cohasset's Jeff Cavanaro, Marshfield's Charlie LaPaglia (Marshfield High School) and Duxbury's Phil Sciretta (Noble and Greenough), won the bronze medal last Thursday with a 6-4 win over Central. In a tightly fought battle for the bronze, Southeast pulled through late to take the victory. Southeast fought back from a 3-2 deficit, rallying in the top of the sixth to take a 4-3 lead. Sciretta, who played first base, went 1-for-2. LaPaglia went 1-for-1 with a walk. He played left field.



Southeast held a very comfortable lead heading into the seventh inning against Northeast last Wednesday. But a 13-run explosion, yes, 13 runs in one inning, slammed the door on Southeast. Northeast took a 17-10 win. Every Northeast player in the lineup came to the plate twice in the seventh and each scored at least once in the inning.

Sciretta and Sharon High School pitcher David Roberto Jr. held Northeast to just two runs over the first five innings, but the bullpen fell apart. Sciretta pitched three innings, allowing two runs on two hits. He struck out one batter. At the plate, LaPaglia, who played left field and batted out of the number two spot, went 2-for-2 with an RBI and two runs scored.

LaPaglia and Sciretta contributed to Southeast's 10-8 win July 6 over Metro, which actually jumped out to a 4-3 lead

Boston Breakers players visit South Shore YMCA

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

Hanover — It's not every day that a professional athlete comes to town, let alone five professional athletes, a couple who have played in the World Cup and the Olympics. Five members of the Boston Breakers of Women's Professional Soccer visited the South Shore YMCA in Hanover Wednesday to show off their skills to more than 400 kids.

"I think it's awesome. The kids were really looking forward to it. They've been talking about it all week," South Shore YMCA Senior Program Director Brian Kowalski said. "We're just really excited to have this opportunity. It's awesome to be able to do that for them. It's a unique experience for sure. They kept asking, 'When are they coming, when are they coming.'"

The kids, ranging in age from 3 to 14, go to camp for two weeks, and during that span, the counselors said they hold a "special event" for the kids. When the Breakers approached the YMCA, camp directors thought it'd be a great idea.

"It's awesome to be able to host this event," Kowalski said. "And it's great that the Breakers wanted to come down here."

Boston Breakers' Assistant Coach Lisa Cole came to the YMCA joined by Breakers' co-captain Leslie Osborne, who played in the 2007 Women's World Cup, English international Kelly Smith, who scored 73 goals in 66 games with Arsenal Ladies Football Club in England before coming to Boston, Chioma Igwe, a midfielder/defender from Santa Clara University who played for the Chicago Red Stars last year, Tiffany Weimer, a forward/midfielder who played for FC Gold Pride last year and played college soccer at Penn State, and Liz Bogus, who scored her first WPS goal last week against Atlanta.

Each player demonstrated a different skill before the campers broke off into groups to work on the skills, which ranged from how to cut while dribbling a ball to the pull back move.

"I think it's a really great opportunity for these kids being able to play soccer with these professional athletes," said camp counselor Ari Marino of Pembroke. "They're learning to develop their skills. And being active is most important. They're having a good

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

Golfers love to spew philosophy about this wonderful game and life.

I don't know why, but it's true.

I've learned a great deal about the game from talking and watching other golf aficionados.

I've been lucky. I've been able to sit down with some special people and pick their brain, listen to what they have learned and apply it.

I'll never forget the summer after I sat down in the backyard of Herbert Warren Wind in his Weston backyard and talked golf. It wasn't a talk. I simply listened and I have a much better understanding of the game.

Another evening I'll never forget during the Masters' Tournament one April in August. I sat in a comfortable den, watching the Red Sox play the Blue Jays. Sam Snead was telling some of the most intimate stories. Bob Goalby was mixing drinks and piping in colorful comments and Billy Casper was cooking steaks on the grill out on the patio. It was an education.

There have been so many times like this. I cherished the days I covered tournaments with the Patriot Ledger's Roger Barry and he held everyone's attention with his stories and vignettes.

But there was one person who taught me more about the game and the way it should be played than anyone else.

It was Dick Haskell, who died last week at the age of 84.

He was the first honest-to-goodness true golfer I knew.

It wasn't that he was such a great player. But it knew the game and what it was all about.

It understood its purpose.

When we first met, I had just taken up the game.

Fortunately, my editor at the Boston Globe, allowed me to cover the sport and the first golf executive I met was Dick, the long-time executive director of the Massachusetts Golf Association.

That was some 30 years ago and I appreciated his patience in explaining so many intricacies of the game to me those first few years.

He was a great teacher.

I realized earlier in our relationship Dick and I would be good friends when we played our first round of golf together at his course, The Country Club in Brookline. It was a weekday morning and, of course, in those days before the Golf Boom, the place was empty. I thought I was a fast player, but we must have sped around there under two hours.

He played a no-nonsense round and he was a no-nonsense guy when it came to running the Massachusetts Golf Association.

Still, he had the demeanor of a pussycat. When he told you something, it was like he was letting you in on a secret. If he had an opinion, it was never based on prejudice or biased and he would back it up with facts and solid reasons.

I'll never forget the summer after I sat down in the backyard of Herbert Warren Wind in his Weston backyard and talked golf. It wasn't a talk. I simply listened and I have a much better understanding of the game.

If he liked what you wrote, he would call you and tell you why. And if he didn't like it, he never got mad. His criticism was always constructive.

Dick was the right person at the right time with the Massachusetts Golf Association as it made the uneasy transition of an organization dominated by very wealthy and exclusive clubs to what it is today, an organization where most of its clubs and members play public golf.

It's almost fitting he passed last week, during the State Amateur, which was one of his most favorite events.

And when you think about it and realize that the tournament was being played at the state's most exclusive venue, Myopia Hunt Club in South Hamilton, and the defending champion, Billy Drohen, plays out of Brookmeadow CC in Canton, as public a course as you will find, it is the defining tribute to Dick's years of work at the MGA.

Dick was as comfortable at Leo J. Martin municipal course, where the MGA offices were for many years, to places like Myopia.

But I think his favorite round was a special day in Ipswich, back about 20 years ago, at the Labor-In-Vain Golf Course.

It was there Dick entered the game as a when he was 10 years old.

Eventually, during the manpower shortage of World War II, the course went to seed and no longer existed.

It was on the Crane estate and for that one day, they turned it into a golf course. It took months and months of perpetration for that one round of golf. But in Dick's eyes, it was worth it.

Widow's Walk Golf Course

What is in your bag?
Ping S-i3 8 degree driver, Callaway X 3-wood, Ping G-10 21 degree and 24 degree hybrid woods. Ping i-3 Blade 5 through 9 irons, pitching wedge, gap wedge, swand wedge and Ping Tour 60 degree wedge, Ping B-60 putter.

What's the best round you played, where and when?
It was at Greenfield Country Club in 1973. It was a college golf match. I was 18 years old and it was the first time that I went real, real low with a 65. My back nine started with a birdie, birdie, eagle, birdie, birdie stretch.

Who would be in your dream foursome?
My dream foursome would be Jack Nicklaus, Tiger Woods and one player who I could beat.

How did you start playing golf?
I actually took the game up by accident at age 12 after a ski injury that didn't allow me to play baseball that spring and summer. I found a set of my father's clubs in the garage. I was fortunate to live near a school field where I could hit balls back and forth. It was unfortunate that the clubs were left-handed, so I had to hit them turned upside down. Once my parents saw what I was doing, they purchased a set of right-handed junior clubs for me. My parents were always very supportive of golf and made sure they were available to transport me to the course. I grew up playing a lot of team sports, but I have always enjoyed the individual nature of golf.

Besides Widow's Walk, what is your favorite golf course?
I have always enjoyed Longmeadow C.C. It is a great Donald Ross course in the western part of the state that has a great assortment of par-4 holes.

What's the best golf tip you ever received?
Maintain adequate grip pressure to support the motion of the club, but keep the wrists, elbows, and shoulders tension free for maximum clubhead speed.

What makes Widow's Walk so special?
Widow's Walk has some of the finest public course putting surfaces anywhere. Some of the ocean views are spectacular and for the nature lovers the birds and wildlife are abundant.

A place you could call home

Lakeville Country Club will not host a U.S. Open.

Nor will it be the venue for the Massachusetts Open.

But it is a place where you can tee it up and have fun.

Lakeville Country Club

Course of the Week

The average golfer will be will be challenged from the opening tee shot to the final putt, but they will not be overwhelmed and feel like giving up on the game.

When I first played golf, it was called Reservoir Hights, a fascinating name.

I was a hardcore new golfer and tried to play every day of the year, even when there wasn't too much snow on the ground.

And what was intriguing back in the day was that they had heated golf carts.

This place seemed to be always open.

Being so close to the Cape, its sandy based allowed it to be one of the first course you could play in late February or March.

And there was – and still is – a place where you felt at home.

You never feel like an intruder, which unfortunately is the case at so many courses.

There are courses that try to kill you with kindness, which can make you feel uneasy, while others seem that they are doing you a favor by allowing you to pay good money to tee it up.

At Lakeville, you seem to be one of the family and what is better than that?

And they have some holes that will linger in your memory long after you play here.

Of course, there is the signature hole, the 16th hole, a downhill par-3 to a green surrounded by water.

You hit your short iron and then hold your breath, hoping the ball lands on the green.

It is 140 yards chock full of fun.

The next hole is another knuckle cruncher. It's another par-3 and it's a long carry (180 yards from the tips) over water to a small green.

These two holes can turn around any match quite quickly.

And then the par-4 18th hole is in your way of what could be a career round.

It's only 370 yards, but you play every inch and when you are done, you realize why it is the hardest hole on the back nine.

On the tee you can't stray to the left or you're in the water. If you push it right, you're in somebody's back yard, out of bounds.

You have no choice but to hit it straight.

That's the easy part.

The second shot in all uphill to a green cut into the side of the hill.

Take an extra club, but be wary, you could hit it over the green out of bounds again.

And when you get to the green, it isn't an easy two-putt.

It is one of the most solid finishing holes you will find.

From left, Thomas Flibotte (Cohasset), Will Delorey (Norwell), Steve Sousa (Marshfield) and Alex Kinnealey (Cohasset) were selected All Stars in the rising Senior group. This is a very prestigious tournament and the kids should be congratulated.
Both Black Jack teams were represented very well, both making it into the playoffs.

The USTA National Father Son Grass Court Championships were held at Longwood Cricket Club this week. 64 teams from around the country competed on the bucolic grasscourts in Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Robbie Hill, Cohasset High School No. 1 singles player and Brian Hill, Sr., CHS No. 1 singles player in 1972 and Cohasset's varsity coach, took on the top father son teams in the United States.

The pair lost a hard fought match to quarterfinalists John and Mick Walters from College Park, Texas 6-3, 6-4 in the opening round.

Both Walters were 6' 5" with booming serves. Mick plays first doubles for St. Edwards University in Texas.

In the consolation round the Hills lost a nailbiter 7-6, 6-3 to Peter Palandjian, formerly ranked No. 200 in the world, and his 17-year old son Petros.

time, and that's all that really matters. All day they were like, 'When are the Boston Breakers going to get here.'"

The Breakers went around and helped out all of the kids work on their newly learned skills. Smith, who has taught skills clinics back in England, said it was fun to see so many kids excited about learning new moves.

"It's fun. Obviously we were looking forward to it when we knew we were coming here because there's a good number of kids, and they're all interested in soccer and want to be here," Smith said. "To have 400 kids here today like this is great. It was a good turnout."

After the skills clinic, the kids had a chance to get autographs from all of the players. All of the kids got a free ticket to a Breakers game.

"It means so much, for not only the community but for the team because we can reach out to local kids and have them come out and play," Igwe said. "And we're role models to them. It feels good."

The counselors enjoyed watching their kids learn from the pros.

"I think this is just a great opportunity for the kids to really learn how to see some good soccer skills and to hopefully evolve their skills, so they can pursue it later in life," said Mike Fanning of Norwell.

"I think it's a great way to get kids into sports," added counselor Olivia Huie, also from Norwell. "They just really look up to the players. It's a great experience."

Unit director R.J. Harris, 23, from Hingham, said, "I think it takes a lot of effort to listen. I think it's great to have people here that they can listen to and learn from. I think it's great. They were excited all week about it. It really gets them motivated to do this. It raises their self-esteem, and they get really good players to give them some tips."

All of the kids at the camp were in awe of the Breakers, even ones who don't even play the sport.

"I think it's pretty cool because I've never seen a professional athlete before," said Andy Grant of Marshfield.

"I thought it was really cool because we got to meet the team, and you learn all this new stuff that you've probably never even heard about before," said Kingston's Cameron Campbell, who was trying out new techniques with his brother, Jarrod Campbell.

A ton of the younger campers thoroughly enjoyed the experience of playing with the professional soccer athletes.

"My favorite part of soccer is goal-scoring," Jack Leahy of Pembroke said.

"I was so excited to meet them at first," said eight-year-old Jaclyn Hanlon of Hingham, "and I didn't know how much fun this would be."

"This is a good experience," young camp-goer Ryan Marchant of Rockland said.

"I liked this a lot," said eight-year-old Meghan Keliher of Norwell. "I just love this camp."

"I think it's cool that we got to play with the players and coaches," said eight-year-old Michael Byrnes.

"I think it's great that we got to meet the players," said eight-year-old Matthew Walters of Hanson.

"It's pretty cool," nine-year-old Marshfield resident Avery Johnson said. "I'd like to do this again. It's fun."

"It's amazing," said Thomas Boyd, 7, of Marshfield

"This is pretty cool," said eight-year-old Colin Riordan of Marshfield.

Before the Breakers left, the played a five-on-five game against some of the male counselors. After the guys took a 3-0 lead, the Breakers stepped it up.

"I think the reason we reached this level is that we're all so competitive. Even a game against counselors, we're like, "Wait a second, we're down three goals, we've got to come back and win this,'" Igwe said.

Chioma Igwe takes a bow while being introduced to the campers as Leslie Osborne, Liz Bogus, Tiffany Weimer, and Kelly Smith applaud her.

"It was the bumpiest pitch ever," Smith added, "but at least we won."

The greatest part of the day for the Breakers was seeing the kids enjoying every second of the skills sessions.

"Their energy rubs off on you," Cole said. "You see and hear them cheering and getting excited about it. They get a sense of, 'maybe I can be doing that one day.' It's fantastic."

The Boston Breakers are part of the seven-team Women's Professional Soccer league. They play their home games at Harvard Stadium in Cambridge. For more information, visit www.bostonbreakers.com or www.womensprosoccer.com.

'Great show for kids being kids'

up this weekend. The first show is today (Friday, July 23) at 2:30 and 7:30p.m.

"These kids are so ready to do a show," director Lisa Pratt said on Monday night during rehearsal. "This is great show for kids being kids…They have really captured the attitude, the internal angst, of being 13."

The musical's plot centers on Evan Goldman, an almost 13-year-old preparing for the celebration of his Bar Mitzvah in New York City. His life is then turned upside down when he finds out his parents are getting a divorce and he is moving with his mother to Appleton, Indiana.

Evan's sentiments on the move: "My life just went to hell."

And that's where the play begins.

The cast, by and large, are in love with the music, the dancing, the storyline, and their fellow cast mates.

The music is written by Jason Robert Brown (one cast member called him "a genius") and is part rock-and-roll, part pop and part hip-hop.

"There's different genres, the music is very upbeat," said Zach Prescott, 13, of Weymouth. Zach is plays "Archie," one of Evan's 'outsider' friends. This is his first CDC production and he never felt like the "Archie" of the group.

"It was a really inviting cast. They are relaxed and fun to hang with," Zach said.

Sara Ratto, 17, of Scituate, is another CDC newbie.

"Honestly, this is the best thing that's happened to me all summer. I found great friends, it's a great environment and I'm doing what I love," Sara said. Her role is "Patrice," Evan's neighbor and friend. Her character is a girl who knows who she is though she is labeled "a geek" by her peers.

"I definitely can relate. I feel like everyone thinks they are a geek, or feels like a loner, at some point…You never know where you stand at that age," Sara said.

Four of the 12-year-olds have pulled double duty this summer with the CDC – they played lead roles in the "Seussical, Jr." and were part of the "13" cast.

"It's definitely kept us busy," said Madison Pratt, who played the Cat in the Hat in "Seussical."

But, the double rehearsals brought the group of drama enthusiasts even closer together. They would rehearse for "Seussical" from 4 to 6p.m., have dinner together, then rehearse "13" from 7 to 9p.m. In addition to the 12-year-olds, five teenagers took on the role of production intern for the "Seussical" show.

(Top right) Cassie, played by Faith Porter, 14, of Cohasset, and Evan, played by Andrew Lemieux, 16, of Scituate jump up with the rest of the cast of "13" in the opening number.

"We were more like a family this summer," Madison said. "I liked working with both age groups and I love both shows," Madison said.

Fellow Cohasset 12-year-old Madison Hindley, who played the Sour Kangaroo in "Seussical," loves the opening song of the show aptly titled, "13."

"I like how it explains a 13-year-old's anger, all their issues. That's what this show is all about, getting through being 13," Madison Hindley said.

The 12-year-olds also have a unique perspective to offer the show – as they are the same age as the characters they play.

"This show is much more modern and relatable (than "Seussical")," Madison Pratt said.

Madison Hindley agrees. "This show is about teenagers and reality. It's real life. And it has a great music and great dancing."

The youngest member of the cast is 11-year-old Zack Herman and he joined a mere two weeks ago.

"I caught on quickly because everybody was so supportive and willing to help me," Zack said. "The show is so much fun; the dancing is awesome."

Knowing his 13th year is not that far off, Zack said he could relate to the story. "It makes me a little creeped out though," he said with a laugh.

The cast members all agree that "13" is a show worth seeing – and they are sure it won't disappoint those of all ages, including 13.

"We put our soul into this show – and we have fun doing it," Sara said.

Evan, played by Andrew Lemieux, 16, of Scituate finds himself in a dilemma, as his friends won't go to his bar mitzvah party if he invites another classmate of theirs.

The cast of "13" keeps the spirit of the original cast of "13" alive by wearing similar t-shirts with the number 13 as the original teenage cast did for the Broadway show.

Regis College offers master's in health administration

By Kimberly A. Hooper
DAILY NEWS CORRESPONDENT

WESTON – In a time where the demand for health care is growing rapidly, Regis College is now offering a full-time master of science degree in Health Administration.

The program, which will launch this fall, is part of Regis' graduate effort to develop its School of Nursing and Health Professions.

"Growth in health care is expected to increase," said Mary Ann Hart, program director for the Graduate Program in Health Administration at Regis College. "Baby boomers are older and this is increasing the demand for more health care. Also, the national health-care reform means 31 million more Americans will be able to get health insurance."

Hart said the program at Regis teaches students management skills and tools for budgeting and also has a large public policy focus.

The full-time program takes a year and a half to complete and anyone with a bachelor's degree who is interested in the health-care field is eligible to submit an application for the master's program.

"We have a very wide range of students who will be studying for the master of science in Health Administration," said Hart. "Some people come back to school after a long time or they might have worked in a business or administration setting and now they are interested in the health-care field. These people want to be able to apply management skills they already have and now use them in an area that can be more rewarding."

Hart said the program has a diverse group of students. Some students applying to the program have been right out of college or they are looking to retool themselves. Hart also said many students want a change of careers and the health-care industry has many open opportunities.

"You name it and we welcome that variety," said Hart. "We have people applying who are in their early 20s to late 50s. This diversity makes our classrooms rich. We aren't a large school and people receive a lot of individual attention here. Classrooms range from five to 20 students and everyone knows your name. We pride ourselves on that."

The National League of Nursing recognized Regis College as a Center of Excellence in Nursing Education. Regis was the first school in New England to be recognized with this award.

Health administrators, also referred to as health-care managers or health-care executives, are needed everywhere that health care is being delivered. "Health administrators plan, direct, coordinate and supervise the delivery of health care," Hart said.

Two examples of health administration jobs are a director or assistant director of medical records and assistant director of radiology. Health administrators are not only needed in hospitals but other health-care environments as well.

"Nursing homes, outpatient departments, health insurance companies, physician group practices, public health departments, and other state and federal health agencies need health administrators," said Hart. "Managers and directors are within all of these different areas and the job possibilities are limitless."

Health administrators can also work in the areas of finance departments, human resources, marketing, management, patient-care services, health-care quality, and planning and development.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the 2010-2011 median annual wage of health administrators in May 2008 was $87,040 for those who worked in hospitals; $74,130 for those in outpatient departments and clinics; $74,060 for those working in physicians' offices; $71,450 for those in home health care services; and $71,190 for health administrators working in nursing care facilities.

Students are eligible for acceptance into the Health Administration program if they have a bachelor's degree and if they have taken the GRE (Graduate Record Examination) standardized test. The GRE can be waived at Regis College if a student's undergraduate record is sufficient.

"Waiving the GRE is a big attraction at Regis," said Hart. "If an undergrad's record is good enough, they can take two courses at Regis without fully matriculating into the program. If the student receives a B or better in these two courses, the GRE will be waived."

Hart said this is a good idea because some people who apply have been out of school for a while and the idea of testing can be daunting for them.

"By taking two courses, people who are not sure about the health administration field are able to sample the program and see how they feel about it," she said.

Regis offers a New Student Grant where students can receive 20 percent off their first two courses. Not only will the GRE be waived, but students will be able to apply these credits to the program in the future.

For an online application, go to www.applyweb.com/apply/regiscg/ or download an application at regiscollege.edu/grad. The $50 application fee can be waived if students attend one health administration information session and sign up for one course.

"We make it as easy as possible for students to join the programs at Regis," said Hart. "One of the most attractive things is that students are able to schedule classes so they can actually work full time and go to school full time."

Classes for the master's in Health Administration are offered Tuesday and Thursday evenings and one weekend day every other week. Between these classes there is an online component for certain courses. The full-time option currently has rolling admission and students have the opportunity to apply for a $10,000 scholarship.

"We want students who are going to create a critical mass for the program," said Hart. "We are going to review applications and look for students who are going to say yes to us and then determine from there who will receive the scholarship."

Mary Ann Hart, left, director of Regis College's Graduate Program in Health Administration, talks with Dean of Nursing Science and Health Professions Antoinette Hays outside College Hall at Regis College in Weston.

In addition to scholarships, eligible students can apply for graduate degree loans and financial aid.

Tuition at Regis for the master of science in Health Administration costs about $35,000, but scholarships and grants may significantly decrease that cost.

Full-time students take a total of 14 courses (42 credits). Twelve of the courses are required and two are elective courses.

Health administration courses are offered during the fall and spring semesters as well as during two summer sessions. Summer courses may be taken either summer session prior to the first or second fall semester.

In students' final semester they complete 100 hours of field experience in a health-care setting.

"We try and help place students in an area of interest for their field experience opportunity," said Hart. "Regis College has a lot of relationships with major hospital systems and long-term health-care facilities. We are currently talking to health-care insurers and state agencies about field experience opportunities."

Besides the full-time program in health administration, Regis offers part-time and certificate programs for students who cannot commit to a full-time course load.

If a student enrolls part-time in the program they can take one to three classes per semester. Certificate programs require students to complete four courses. Two classes are electives in health administration and two others are required courses for a certificate.

Regis currently offers certificates in Informatics (Health information technology), Gerontology (study of aging), and Health Policy. Students can simultaneously enroll in a certificate program while working toward a master's degree.

So why choose Regis' for a master of science in health administration?

"We offer the flexibility that people need these days," said Hart. "Students have a lot of demands on them and we work with them to create those flexible schedules. The faculty currently works in the health administration field. This is a real world program and the staff really understands what is going on in the health-care industry."

An open house for all graduate programs will be held at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 25, at at Regis College, 235 Wellesley St., Weston. For more information about Regis College and the master of science in Health Administration, visit www.regiscollege.edu or contact the Office of Graduate Admission at 781-768-7330.

A 'dill-icious' way to learn about pickles

Many would argue that kosher pickles are as Jewish as bagels and lox on a cream cheese-smeared sandwich. But what makes a kosher pickle kosher? And is there anything inherently Jewish about pickles? Who can one turn to when grappling with such gastronomically inspired questions? The Pickle Rabbi, of course. Rabbi Mendy Margolin, aka the Pickle Rabbi, has answers for all these questions.

Margolin learned the art of pickle making from an 86-year-old Jew in Los Alamitos, Calif. The rabbi was able to coax the "tricks of the trade" out of the gentleman by promising to utilize the secretive information to teach Jews about Judaism.

So what is the secret to making a kosher pickle? Rabbi Pickle admits that there is no wrong way to make a pickle. "It is not a recipe as much as it is an art," he said, but adds, "No authentic kosher pickle has vinegar in it." To learn more about his secrets, come to the class.

A joint project of Hingham Quincy Chabad and Temple Israel of Nantasket, the Kosher Pickle Factory class will take place at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, July 28, at Temple Israel of Nantasket, 9 Haddasah Way, Hull. Cost is $14, and each participant will go home with a personalized jar of pickles, a $5 value. Space is limited, and reservations are suggested. For more information, visit www.HQChabad.com or call Rabbi Shmulie at 617-850-5935.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 2, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't gnash those pearly whites because you might have to delay your plans. This could give the Lucky Lamb a better perspective of what's been done, and what still needs doing.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Scoring financial bull's-eyes is easy for the focused Bovine who knows the ins and outs of the marketplace. But even with your success record, caution is still the watchword.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Watch that tendency to over-romanticize a situation that should be given closer scrutiny. Better to be suspicious now and ask for an explanation, or face a sad surprise later.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Bruised self-confidence can make things difficult unless you accept the fact that you have what it takes. Ignore the critics and concentrate on believing in yourself. Good luck.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Congratulations on what you've accomplished. But this is no time to curl up for some serious catnapping. Your rivals are probably already working on plans to overtake your lead.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your adventurous side wants to play a more dominant role this week, and you might want to oblige. Try to arrange for some getaway time with that special person.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Taking logical approaches to pesky workplace issues can help resolve even long-standing problems. A shift in policy might catch you by surprise. Be alert to signs of change.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your kindness and compassion are exactly what are needed in dealing with an awkward situation in the early part of the week. Share the weekend fun with family and friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Keeping your focus straight and true is a good way of getting your points across. Save any variations for a later time. The musical arts are important this weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Reject advice to cut corners in reaching your goal. Better to take a little more time to do the job as you promised. You'll gain new respect for your honesty and integrity.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't allow a troublesome situation to grow so big that it will be increasingly difficult to deal with. The sooner you speak up, the sooner everyone will be able to benefit.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Confronting someone who is making a lot of mistakes could be the kindest thing you can do both for that person and for anyone who could be adversely affected by the errors.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Lennie Baker joins old band mates in 'Bowzer's Original Doo Wop Party'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When performer Lennie Baker heads from his Halifax home to the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset and the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis next weekend to appear in concert with "Bowzer's Original Doo Wop Party," the saxophonist will be reuniting with band mates from not one, but two of the groups he helped make famous.

"Lennie played sax with Danny and the Juniors before he joined Sha Na Na, so it will be a reunion of sorts for him with Joe Terranova and Frank Maffei who'll be on hand from that group next week," explained Jon "Bowzer" Bauman last week from his home in southern California of the shows he has planned for the Music Circus and Melody Tent next week.

Baker, who grew up in Whitman, and Bauman both joined Sha Na Na in 1970 and were with the group through its television heyday, 1977-81, and memorable appearance as Johnny Casino and the Gamblers in the 1978 movie musical version of "Grease." These days, Baker, 64, is retired from show business, except when coaxed by old friend Bauman to step back into the spotlight.

"Lennie Baker is one of my closest friends from Sha Na Na and one of the funniest men alive. Probably 95 percent of the best Sha Na Na stories you'll ever hear involve Lennie. He is also godfather to my daughter, Nora. The feeling is just amazing when Lennie and I work together. We'll be doing some of the duets that we did together with Sha Na Na. And, of course, we'll sing 'Blue Moon,' which is our signature song. Lennie and I have always gotten along very well and so everything floods back instantly when we reunite and it is almost like we never stopped working together."

Halifax resident Lennie Baker will perform with his good friend and former band mate Jon "Bowser" Bauman July 31 at South Shore Music Circus and Aug. 1, at the Cape Cod Melody Tent.

Many of the artists who'll come together next week do so under their original group names, thanks in part to Bauman's work on Truth in Music efforts nationwide. When Bauman—who created the character of muscle shirt-wearing but muscle-less greaser "Bowzer" when he replaced Alan Cooper as bass singer for Sha Na Na—isn't touring with The Stingrays, he is traveling the country lobbying politicians on behalf of the Truth in Music committee he chairs in the Vocal Group Hall of Fame. With Bauman's leadership, Truth in Music bills—protecting artists from identity theft and consumers from deception and fraud—have been passed in many states, including Massachusetts where the legislation was co-sponsored by Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth).

With Bauman as host and performer with the Stingrays, next week's line-ups will also feature some of the biggest hit-makers of the Doo Wop era, including Charlie Thomas's Drifters, performing "There Goes My Baby," "Save the Last Dance For Me," "On Broadway," "Up On the Roof," "Under the Boardwalk," and "This Magic Moment," Danny and the Juniors, singing their hits "At the Hop," "Tallahassee Lassie," and "Twistin' USA," the Crystals, led by original member Dolores "Dee Dee" Kenniebrew, performing their hits including "Da Doo Ron Ron," "Then He Kissed Me," and "He's a Rebel," while the now 87-year-old Little Joe Cook, his falsetto intact, will be on hand to sing "Peanuts" and other hits he had as lead singer of The Thrillers and The Sherrys. Rounding out the bill will be Jay Siegel & the Tokens, singing their hits "The Lion Sleeps Tonight," "Portrait of My Love," and "Tonight I Fell in Love."

Bauman plans to showcase his talent as a pianist, too, performing a number he learned long before he first Brylcreemed his hair and rolled up his T-shirt sleeves.

"I'll be playing the 'Clair de Lune,' by Claude Debussy. This is the first year that I've performed it since I was 12 years old," says the Brooklyn-born Bauman, 62, who began taking classes at the Juilliard School as a pre-teen. "It is the most nerve-wracking part of the show, because I like it when I don't mangle the classical piece."

"Bowzer's Original Doo Wop Party" will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Saturday, July 31, and at the Cape Cod Melody, 21 West Main St., Hyannis, on Sunday, Aug. 1. For tickets and information, visit the box office, cal 800-745-3000, or go online at either themusiccircus.org or melodytent.org

Harbor History

Barron estate, Hugo's highlighted

Historical Society hosting special exhibit

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In May, news broke that several of Cohasset's most iconic and well-known building were up for grabs.

Up for grabs, that is, if you could afford the $55 million price tag.

The waterfront mansion at 49 Margin St., the Cohasset Harbor Inn, the Mill River Marina and the two harbor restaurants Atlantica and the Olde Salt House combine for a real estate package that would be hard for anyone to match.

What prospective buyers from out-of-town, or those new to town, might not be able to discern from the photos posted on the real estate listing is the deep and storied history embedded in these properties.

In a trip to the Cohasset Historical Society that all can change. The group recently unveiled an exhibit dedicated to the properties and their history.

Historical Society director Lynne DeGiacomo and volunteers dug deep into the society's archives to bring to life pieces of the storied history of the waterfront property.

In the end, the exhibit focuses on the world famous Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant (now Atlantica) and the original house at 49 Margin St., a Victorian-style wood frame house once owned by Mr. Clarence Barron, a well-known financier, at the turn of the century.

The exhibit is teeming with interesting tidbits, artifacts and photographs of a bygone era.

DeGiacomo hopes the harbor-centric, and timely, exhibit will draw visitors to the society's headquarters.

"In the summer everyone gravitates toward the harbor, so we thought we'd bring a little bit of the harbor here with Hugo's and the Barron estate," DeGiacomo said.

The Historical Society was able to use photographs to replicate, to the best of their ability, a table setting of Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant and a sitting room from the Barron estate.

The Society has one complete place setting that once adorned the tables of Hugo's and was the means of serving likely thousands of boiled lobsters.

When Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant opened in 1940 by Hugo Orme it quickly became "a destination" for

Meals Tax on the table

Rooms tax also under consideration

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

An informal poll of the members of the Budget Planning Group at their meeting Tuesday showed the committee has an appetite for a meal's tax.

The Meals Excise Tax is a local option tax that requires a vote of Town Meeting.

If the Budget Planning Group has its way – then the meals tax could go before the fall Special Town Meeting.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he could reserve a place for the meals tax on the warrant whose deadline is Sept. 24.

The Budget Planning Group, which is comprised of representatives from key committees involved in the budget process, was formed about a year ago to assist with the budget process by recommending fiscal policies and looking for efficiencies as well as developing a long-range financial plan for the town.

So far 110 of the 351 cities and towns across the state have adopted the meal's tax, including Hingham. Hingham voters approved the tax at their annual Town Meeting last spring.

"We should absolutely do it."
— Ed Lappen,
Budget Planning Group

In 2009, the State Legislature approved a new local option meals tax to provide some relief for towns facing budget shortfalls due in part to local aid cuts. Communities may levy a tax of up to .75 percent on the sale of restaurant meals originating within the town or city by a vendor. This is in addition to the current 6.25 percent state sales tax on meals. A $60 meal would cost an additional 45 cents with the .75 percent increase.

Griffin explained that the meals tax would apply to all meals subject to the state sales tax and is collected by the state and distributed back to the town.

The Department of Revenue starts collecting and remitting revenue from the tax on the first day of the calendar quarter following 30 days after Town Meeting acceptance.

Water Dept. asks for voluntary conservation

Especially in outside watering

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

This summer has been hot.

With the exception of a few thunderstorms, this summer has also been very dry.

As a result of the weather – and lack of precipitation – for the first time in recent years, the Cohasset Water Department is taking preventive action to ensure the water supply stays in plentiful supply.

At its meeting last week the water commission discussed the status of the water supply. Largely due to the lack of precipitation, the water department has issued a voluntary water advisory.

"Basically that means we are asking our water users to be thoughtful in conserving water," said Water Commission chairman Chris Seebeck. A call for voluntary water conservation, especially in outside watering, is the first step in the water ban ladder.

Aquarion Water, the private water company that services Hingham, Hull and 285 homes in North Cohasset, issued a odd/even handheld only outside watering ban three weeks ago. Norwell currently has a restriction on outdoor watering, handheld only watering in the mornings and evenings. Scituate instituted an odd/even outdoor water restriction as well in recent weeks.

According to Seebeck, under the water department's permit, there are actions that need to be taken when there are especially dry conditions. In Cohasset's permit if there are two consecutive months where precipitation is less than 65 percent of the norm for those months voluntary water advisory is issued.

"The reality is we may have to issue an outside watering ban soon."

While Seebeck said over the last month the reservoir has been use over the last month, the water in Cohasset is still ample. The Aaron River Reservoir has about 400 days of water in it currently. A "watch situation" is triggered when about 330 days remain in the reservoir.

"We're nowhere at a point where (the water source) is forcing us to do this," Seebeck said.

But, if the dry weather continues another few weeks the next step in the ladder of water ban. A watch situation would likely entail a handheld outside water only on odd/even days corresponding to your street number.

Car crashes, OUI arrest, road rage and other incidents

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

MV crashes

• A 42-year-old Cohasset man reported that his 1999 Acura, which had been parked in a parallel parking space on South Main Street on July 10, was damaged when another vehicle apparently backed into the driver's side tire. The resident reported the incident on July 19 after the garage where he had had the car towed determined the car had been hit by another vehicle.

• An 82-year-old Scituate man in a 2010 Mercury Milan had slowed and stopped at a crosswalk on South Main Street near the Scituate line when his car was rear-ended by a 1994 Ford Mustang operated by an 18-year-old teen. Both cars were headed toward Scituate when the accident occurred at 3:09 p.m. on Monday (July 19). Neither car was towed and there were no reported injuries, police said.

• A 53-year-old Stoughton man who works at Shaw's Plaza, reported when he came out at 4:26 p.m. on Monday (July 19) his 2009 Acura had been sideswiped with damage to the passenger side. Police said surveillance tapes did not cover that part of the parking lot. The car did not have to be towed. There are no suspects at this time.

• A 1997 Toyota Camry, operated by a 28-year-old Hull woman, was rear-ended by a 2002 Toyota Camry, operated by a 74-year-old Scituate woman, on King Street (Route 3A) at about 2 p.m. on Tuesday (July 20). The Hull woman had slowed down when her car was hit by the other Toyota near Fitness First. Both vehicles were headed north. Neither car was towed and there were no reported injuries. The 74-year-old woman was cited for following too closely on a state highway, police said.

Car break-in

A 47-year-old Cohasset Bayberry Lane man heard a loud crash outside his house at about 12:30 a.m. on Tuesday (July 20). He observed a dark-colored, perhaps red, sports-type vehicle flee from the neighborhood. Further investigation revealed the man's 1998 Volvo station wagon had been broken into. Police said the front windshield and driver's side window were smashed. Nothing was stolen. A large granite rock was found next to the car, police said. Police put a BOLO (Be On the LookOut) to area towns for the foreign vehicle that has a spoiler on the rear deck.

Missing student

A local family was sent into a panic last week when the foreign exchange student from China, who was staying with them, went missing.

As it turned out, the student, who does not speak English very well, had been picked up by a relative that morning (Tuesday, July 20) and had gone to New York to visit family. Police said the student was eventually located and was safe but had not communicated well with his host family about his plans due to the language barrier.

Gas pump

The owner of the gas station in the village reported to police that someone cut the hose to one of the pumps. The incident, which was reported on Wednesday (July 21) at about 9:30 a.m., is under investigation.

Discipline

Police said the parents of a 17-year-old Cohasset boy are handling his discipline after the 2003 Lexus he was driving with friends was reported as being seen in the cove area on Summer Street with trash being thrown out the window and almost running over two children in the crosswalk. The report from a concerned citizen came in at 2:19 p.m. on Wednesday (July 21). An officer went to the house and talked to the boy's parents who said they would handle the matter.

OUI arrest

A 50-year-old Scituate woman was arrested on Route 3A in Hingham for operating under the influence of alcohol, operating negligently, operating with an open container of alcohol and for marked lanes violation last Wednesday (July 21).

The arrest followed a report from Cohasset's Stop & Shop where a caller saw the woman take her pants off, urinate in the parking lot and stumble around her car. She got back into her 1997 gray Chrysler four-door car and headed north on Route 3A at about 9:38 p.m.

Cohasset notified Hingham Police who made the traffic stop and subsequent arrest.

Summonses

• A 61-year-old Scituate woman is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation after she was stopped for failure to stop at a stop sign last Thursday at 1:32 p.m. at Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road. A registry check revealed her license had expired on her birthday in earlier this month. She was riving a 2003 Toyota Camry and was able to get a neighbor to come to help her out so the car did not have to be towed, police said.

• A 41-year-old Dorchester woman is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop at 2:02 p.m. on Sunday (July 25) at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Ridge Top Road for having an expired inspection sticker. A check with the registry revealed the woman's driver's license had expired on her birthday in June. Her car was towed.

Courtesy booking

Cohasset police booked an 18-year-old Cohasset man that was wanted in Hingham for allegedly using a hammer in an assault incident. A Cohasset detective saw the 1996 Chevrolet Tahoe with the teen inside and made the arrest for Hingham. The teen was booked and then turned over to Hingham, police said.

Hingham police said the teen had been involved in a disturbance at a home on Cushing Street in Hingham allegedly over a girlfriend. Police said he allegedly pushed another male, pulled a hammer out of his waistband and began to swing at the alleged victim who was able to back away to avoid being hit with the hammer. Hingham police searched the area; Cohasset police located the vehicle behind the Cohasset Stop & Shop. The Cohasset teen has been charged with assault and battery and assault with a dangerous weapon (hammer).

Money stolen

A 26-year-old Cohasset woman from Beechwood Street reported at 6:52 p.m. on Thursday (July 22) that $175 had been stolen from her purse at her house. She believes the suspect is the 16-year-old friend of a friend from Hingham who, she said, was the only person with the means and opportunity. Police are investigating.

Parents missing

A Duxbury boy called police at 2 a.m. on Friday (July 23) because he was concerned that his parents had not returned home from the Music Circus. Police checked the parking lots and did not find their vehicle.

Soon thereafter, he called back and reported that his father had called him, police said.

Road rage

A 9-1-1 caller notified police at 9:49 p.m. on Friday (July 23) that 15 minutes earlier a man had gotten out of his pickup truck and used an object to bang on the window of another vehicle, then he dove on Beechwood Street toward South Main Street. Police were not able to locate any vehicles matching the description provided by the caller.

Warrant

A 32-year old New Bedford woman was arrested following a traffic stop at 12:06 p.m. on Saturday (July 24). Police said the brown Ford van she was driving had an expired inspection sticker and an officer pulled the van over near Route 3A and Beechwood Street. A registry check revealed there was a warrant for her arrest out of Fall River District Court for motor vehicle offenses.

Mailboxes

While on an unrelated call at 10:12 p.m. on Saturday (July 24) on Forest Avenue, the responding officer discovered that five mailboxes on the same side of the roadway had been damaged and knocked off their posts. Police are investigating.

Vandalism

A 54-year-old Cohasset man reported that someone spray-painted his storage trailer behind his business on Pleasant Street. The matter is under investigation. The report came in at 4:20 p.m. on Sunday (July 25).

Citizens named to audit review

Selectmen named Lawrence Aherne, 188 Lamberts Lane, and Pascal Marat, 103 Aaron River Road, to the Water Department Audit Proposal Review Team to help evaluate proposals from consultants in response to the town's Request for Proposals.

The men will join Tim Reardon and Merle Brown of the Advisory Committee and Patrick Gallagher of the Water Planning Group on the proposal review team.

Aherne and Marat attended Monday's Selectmen's meeting where they presented their qualifications and earned praise from Selectmen.

Selectman Fred Koed said the men would provide "two great skill sets" to the committee.

Selectmen Chairman Karen Quigley thanked the men for offering to volunteer.

Aherne, a CPA, comes to the table with experience at both large and small accounting firms. Marat is an experienced technology and management consultant.

Through the RFP process the town is seeking to hire a qualified, independent person or company to undertake an immediate financial audit of the Water Department's finances, operations, management structure and governance. The consultant hired would have up to 60 days once the contract is executed to issue a final report.

The audit is in response to the fiscal crisis with Water Department finances that have resulted in significant impact on ratepayers, taxpayers and the balance of town government. Until very recently, the Water Department faced a fiscal 2010 deficit of more the $700,000 and going forward a deficit of $1.1 million. The town held a Special Town Meeting on June 14 to address the crisis and reduce the deficit.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said yesterday (Thursday) that about 13 went out and three were returned. Proposals were due July 28 (Wednesday).

Meals Tax could be served up at fall Special Town Meeting

So far 110 of the 351 cities and towns across the state have adopted the meal's tax, including Hingham.

Griffin said estimates for a full year of revenue for Cohasset if the town adopted the tax would be about $105,000 or about $8750 a month.

He said that many towns have been waiting for other area towns to adopt the meals tax first.

Some have argued that a meals tax would hurt the restaurant business.

Ed Lappen of the Budget Planning Group said it would amount to about 3 cents on an ice cream and "would not affect the market at all," in his view.

"We should absolutely do it," Lappen said.

No one on the committee raised his or her hand when asked for an informal showing of hands asking if anyone objected to the meals tax.

Griffin also brought up the Room Occupancy Tax, another local option tax. The town could implement up to a 6 percent occupancy tax on all local hotel and motel stays. Currently 176 out of the 351 municipalities have adopted the tax. Some towns, like Hingham, do not have any hotels or motels. In the area, Braintree has a 6 percent tax; Hull (4 percent); Marshfield (4 percent);, Rockland (4 percent) and Weymouth (4 percent).

Cohasset could expect to realize from $10,000 to $20,000 annually for each one percent tax, Griffin said. Using the lower estimate, the town could realize about $40,000 annually for a 4 percent tax and $60,000 for a 6 percent tax.

The Budget Planning Group is also looking at all the fees charged by the town, such as the beach stickers, cost of pay-as-you-throw bags, the fees charged for liquor and food licenses; and even the fees to license dogs or obtain a marriage certificate.

The discussion of fees drew scrutiny from Selectman Leland Jenkins who was in the audience. He suggested the Budget Planning Group look at ways to cut costs instead of raising fees. One suggestion he made was to have the town send out real estate bills just twice a year rather than quarterly. The mailings would each have two quarterly bills. Hingham and Scituate both use this billing system.

Consolidating vehicle maintenance among all town departments – or even regionalizing maintenance with other towns – is also being discussed.

Budget Planning Group Chairman Sam Wakeman was not optimistic about future local aid from the state.

He said several times during the meeting, that going forward Cohasset needed to plan as if it was going to receive no local aid at all.

The Budget Planning Group is made up of representatives from Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee, School Committee and Capital Budget Committee.

Water Department asks for voluntary conservation

an outside watering ban soon," Seebeck said.

As part of the water department's own conservation efforts the fountain in the Meetinghouse Pond on the Common will be turned off. At this point in time the fountain spouts fresh drinking water that is not recycled. A plan currently exists to revitalize the pond and create an underground holding chamber where the water will be recycled.

On the flip side, the hot weather has encouraged increased water usage – one day more than two million gallons were consumed – and could help buffer the financially struggling water department's bottom line.

Ten ways to conserve water

These tips and more can be found at www.cohassetwater.org.

• Water your lawn only when it needs it. Step on your grass. If it springs back, when you lift your foot, it doesn't need water. So set your sprinklers for more days in between watering. Saves 750-1,500 gallons per month. Better yet, especially in times of drought, water with a hose.

• Fix leaky faucets and plumbing joints. Saves 20 gallons per day for every leak stopped.

• Don't run the hose while washing your car. Use a bucket of water and a quick hose rinse at the end. Saves 150 gallons each time. For a two-car family that's up to 1,200 gallons a month.

• Install water-saving shower heads or flow restrictors. Saves 500 to 800 gallons per month.

• Run only full loads in the washing machine and dishwasher. Saves 300 to 800 gallons per month.

• Shorten your showers. Even a one or two minute reduction can save up to 700 gallons per month.

• Use a broom instead of a hose to clean driveways and sidewalks. Saves 150 gallons or more each time. At once a week, that's more than 600 gallons a month.

• Don't use your toilet as an ashtray or wastebasket. Saves 400 to 600 gallons per month.

• Capture tap water. While you wait for hot water to come down the pipes, catch the flow in a watering can to use later on house plants or your garden. Saves 200 to 300 gallons per month.

• Don't water the sidewalks, driveway or gutter. Adjust your sprinklers so that water lands on your lawn or garden where it belongs—and only there. Saves 500 gallons per month.

Complaint sent about Sandy Beach religious services

Selectmen give letter short shrift

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"The services do not interfere with beach operations and in fact it is a nice thing. This is the first I've ever heard of anyone objecting."
— Robin Lawrence, Sandy Beach Association

Selectmen gave short shrift this week to an anonymous letter they received from "Concerned Beachgoers" that was postmarked July 20 complaining about religious services being held at Sandy Beach.

Selectmen Chairman Karen Quigley mentioned the letter during Monday's meeting and simply said: "Sandy Beach is controlled by the Sandy Beach Association and not the town."

This is the third summer that St. Stephen's Church has held summer worship at 7 a.m. on Sundays on Sandy Beach. The service is open to everyone.

The letter, which did not have a return address other than "Citizens for Sandy Beach" stated "it is inappropriate and possibly illegal for the town to be involved in any way, by permitting religious services to be hosted at Sandy Beach and use of related resources. It definitely involves town property and town resources, which likely violates constitutional restrictions," the letter stated.

"Further it is offensive to people of faiths other than the one being promoted as well as those of no affiliation.

"It also opens the town up to having to accommodate everyone from witches to warlocks to any bizarre belief system one could imagine, some of which may promote views of activities offensive to the mainstream…"

The letter went on to say Selectmen and Town Counsel should carefully review the matter.

"There is plenty of space in and around churches – please keep the beaches a neutral zone – without the promotion of any ideology – for all to enjoy."

Town Manager Bill Griffin noted that because the letter is unsigned, it is impossible to know whether it came from one person or a group.

In a press release announcing this summer's services, the Rev. Margot Critchfield, rector of St. Stephen's stated, "It's a wonderful way for people from all walks of life to come together for a relaxed and informal worship service."

Beach parking stickers not required before 8 a.m. St Stephen's also has a second service Sunday mornings during the summer at 9 a.m. at the church, she stated.

Robin Lawrence, president of the Sandy Beach Association, said St. Stephen's writes a letter to the association every year asking permission to use the beach.

"The services do not interfere with beach operations and in fact it is a nice thing," Lawrence said about the beach services. "This is the first I've ever heard of anyone objecting."

St. Stephen's is not the only church to hold outdoor services in the summertime.

Second Congregational Church holds informal Sunday services at 8 a.m. at the Cohasset Sailing Club off Border Street at the harbor from July 4 through Labor Day.

According to the church's website, everyone is welcome.

"…if you are an early riser or have a busy day ahead, come join us for worship al fresco with the beautiful backdrop of Cohasset Harbor," the website states.

The anonymous letter brought up witches and warlocks. During the summer of 1986, there was a lot of controversy about the filming of the "Witches of Eastwick" in town, including using First Parish for a "devilish" scene. Some of the loudest objections to the film came from witches, themselves, who strongly objected to the depiction of witches in the John Updike novel on which the film was based.

Putting a cap on drainage and runoff

Stormwater Bylaw deemed a success

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"When you moved to Cohasset, the first thing handed to you was not an apple pie but a lawsuit."
— David Farrag, Conservation Commission

Conservation Commission Chairman David Farrag told Selectmen on Monday that Cohasset was a different world just two years ago.

The topography of Cohasset – which is known for its rocky ledge – has not changed, but how the town is handling potential drainage issues has.

Thanks to the Stormwater Bylaw enacted in July of 2008 – the town is a friendlier place because run-off problems from new development or home expansions can be avoided before the fact.

"Without it (the bylaw) the kettle had boiled over to an apex, literally neighbors were lawyering up," Farrag explained. "When you moved to Cohasset, the first thing handed to you was not an apple pie but a lawsuit."

Farrag said over the past two years, the Conservation Commission has issued 23 stormwater permits under the new bylaw (for residential and commercial projects that disturb more than 5,000 square feet) and has issued two administrative approvals for projects that add a net 500 square feet of impervious area.

The reason for so few administrative approvals is that individual homeowners find ways to disturb less area, such as gravelling part of a driveway, for example.

Farrag explained efforts to handle stormwater and drainage issues are nothing new in Cohasset. He said at one time – as far back as the early 1990s – there was a drainage committee that has been defunct for many years. "Unfortunately, they did not take our drainage problems with them," he quipped.

He also said that before the Stormwater Bylaw, which was passed by the 2008 annual Town Meeting – there were successes, such as the reconstruction of the Border Street culvert that involved several state agencies and the cost of which was leveraged through money from the Community Preservation Fund. "It was 100 percent paid for with no debt," he said.

Another example was requiring drainage improvements during the Little Harbor sewer project. Farrag said if the road was going to be opened, then the opportunity was there to do some drainage work as well. Town Meeting subsequently approved additional funds for the drainage work. He noted without drainage improvements, catch basin grates were like "water bubblers" during storm events.

Farrag said the Stormwater Bylaw was a "piece of the puzzle" in terms of solving the town's stormwater problems. He explained that many of the town's in-take systems are built for four or five homes and now serve 15 or 16.

The bylaw accommodates development but does not stop it and ensures that any stormwater issues are not made any worse than what already exists, he said.

The Conservation Commission works with town consultants Norfolk Ram Group LLC engineers as its stormwater agent. The cost of Norfolk's services is paid for through fees charged to the applicant or developer.

Farrag said the bylaw is working on another level. "We have not had one lawsuit or any appeals as part of this process," he said, explaining that is it good to have a bylaw that is not "a litigation maker."

Farrag was joined in his presentation by fellow commissioners, Sarah Charron and Edward Graham.

Charron pointed out that abutters who attend the hearings want to be assured that things are not going to be any worse for them.

Farrag said before the bylaw there was a lot of development pressure to put "10 pounds into a five-pound bag." The new bylaw makes sure "we put five pounds into a five-pound bag or less."

Graham said working with Norfolk Ram has helped the commission be better prepared to review applications.

Bylaw at a glance:

- What is stormwater management: Stormwater management involves carefully considered site design to help ensure that stormwater runoff does not cause flooding, erosion, water quality degradation, and contamination of drinking water supplies.
- Stormwater Bylaw: The Bylaw and the associated Stormwater Management Rules & Regulations establish minimum requirements and procedures to control the adverse effects of increased stormwater runoff, decreased groundwater recharge, and nonpoint source pollution associated with new development and redevelopment.
- Permits: The Bylaw requires the issuance of a permit by the Cohasset Conservation Commission prior to certain land alteration activities. The Bylaw establishes two types of permits: (1) Administrative Approval (for smaller, simpler projects) and (2) Stormwater Permit (for larger projects requiring a public hearing).
- Fees: For administrative approval ($50) and for Stormwater Permit applications, $500. Total collected to date for applications is: $13,700.

Town to seek MOU with schools for cable-TV studio

Selectman Paul Carlson, who is also a member of the Cable Advisory Committee, updated Selectmen on the status of the CAC's efforts to secure space for a new local access TV studio on Monday.

Plans are to seek a Memorandum of Understanding with the School Department about using space at the middle-high school.

During the renovation of the middle-high school, a space for a studio adjacent to the library and a control room were incorporated, but never outfitted with the studio equipment. The "studio" space is used as classroom during school hours.

Carlson — who noted that classes are over at 2 p.m. and the school remains open until 10 p.m. that could provide a window of time for local programming — said the studio would be an opportunity to reactivate video programming at the middle-high school. "It would be a win-win all around," he said.

Town Counsel would prepare the MOU — that would iron out details such as access, security, and rent — Carlson said.

The town expects to receive a total of about $100,000 annually from Comcast and Verizon (through their subscribers) to pay for community access programming and equipment.

For years Cohasset utilized a television studio on Route 53 in Norwell (and before that a studio in North Scituate) to film local programming like the popular local talk show "Our Town."

But a year ago, Comcast closed its Norwell studio and left the area towns without the ability to produce local access television.

The Cable Advisory Committee initially planned to carve out an area in the front of the Town Hall auditorium to build the television studio. Yet, the project has now gone out to bid twice and returned with estimates roughly double what had been budgeted.

In late June, the Cable Advisory Committee sent a letter to the School Committee requesting to talk about using the space for local cable access.

Carlson said the CAC hopes to be on the School Committee agenda in August.

143 SWEATSHIRTS

One of our readers, Pat, spent all day Saturday going to every shop in Cohasset Village looking for sweatshirts that say "Minot's Ledge Light" (with a small picture of the top of a lighthouse), then it says, Cohasset, Massachusetts - 1 - 4 –3.

She reports that nobody in the shops ever heard of such a sweatshirt, and they do exist as she owns one. She also spent some time on the phone calling places in Scituate, but, once more, all in vain.

Harbor History

Historical Society highlights the Barron estate and Hugo's

fresh lobster, seafood and an unforgettable view.

In two year's time, Hugo's was able to cook and serve over two million lobsters, according to a Boston Herald article that is part of the exhibit. In 1946, the restaurant was sold after Hugo passed away, to John Carzis, a Greek immigrant, who led the restaurant in its heyday.

Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant was truly a destination restaurant that became "world famous." It received Holiday Award from Holiday Travel Magazine every year since 1964 to Carzis died in 1979 according to a Patriot Ledger article in the exhibit.

In addition to the table setting, the exhibit includes newspaper clippings on the restaurant, photographs, and menus (be sure to take note of the prices!).

Beyond bringing in thousands of out-of-town visitors, Hugo's also employed hundreds of local residents over the years.

"It was really an industry," said Kathy O'Malley, president of the Historical Society. Summer, of course, was the busiest time, but the restaurant was opened year round.

Across the harbor hidden by meticulously maintained landscaping was and is "The Oaks" estate. Yet, the vine-covered brick Georgian-style mansion was not the original structure on the property.

In the 1850s a house was built on the harborfront property, and later it was sold to actor Lawrence Barrett who turned the house into a Victorian-style estate. Then, Clarence W. Barron, a well-known financier, purchased the property. It was when he and his wife Jessie Barron lived there that the property became known as "The Oaks," historical society records show.

"In the summer everyone gravitates toward the harbor, so we thought we'd bring a little bit of the harbor here with Hugo's and the Barron estate."
— Lynne DeGiacomo, historical society

Barron's granddaughter, Jessie Cox, built the current Georgian Revival style mansion in the 1930s. The famous Cohasset Barron/Bancroft/Cox family were the founders of the Dow Jones Company, The Wall Street Journal and Barron's Weekly.

In addition to the many photographs of the Victorian-style home with many intricate details, there is an 1898 oil painting of a serene Cohasset Harbor with the house prominently in the background.

One missing piece to the exhibit – and something the society would love to have – is a photograph of Mrs. Clarence Barron (Jessie Barron).

However, the society has several dresses that once belonged to the woman. Three of those dresses, some of her hats and accessories, as well as a negligee are on display.

The dresses, which were donated in the 1960s by the Bancroft-Barron families, were the first textile pieces of the Historical Society's now extensive collection. The society has over 3000 pieces of wearable history in its collection.

Mrs. Barron's parasol and hat are made of cream linen and are on display at the exhibit.

Saving our local estuaries

COMMENTARY

JUDETH VAN HAMM

This article is part of a series on the Weir River Estuary leading up to an Estuary Stewardship Forum next winter.

An estuary is a place where fresh water and salt water mix. Hull, Hingham and Cohasset are edged by estuaries. The Weir River Estuary forms the border between Hull and Hingham and Cohasset. The Back River Estuary separates Hingham and Weymouth. The Gulf River which flows into Cohasset Harbor runs between Cohasset and Scituate.

Estuaries rank along with tropical rainforests and coral reefs as the world's most productive ecosystems.

Estuaries rank along with tropical rainforests and coral reefs as the world's most productive ecosystems.

The mixing of lighter fresh water and heavier salt water trap and circulate nutrients such that they are often retained and recycled by benthic (bottom dwelling) organisms to create a self-enriching system. This mixing of fresh and salt water creates a transition zone where fish, birds and animals of all sorts congregate to feed, find refuge, grow to adulthood, and stage migrations. Estuaries provide habitat for more than 75 percent of the U.S. commercial fish catch, and an even greater percentage of the recreational fish catch.

Hull, Hingham and Cohasset's estuaries are part of the Massachusetts Bay estuarine system, which is one of the 12 major estuarine systems in the world. All of these major world estuaries have lost more than half of their species in the last 200 years. Massachusetts Bay is home to about 43 percent of the species present 200 years ago. Due to conservation efforts, Massachusetts Bay is one of the three major world estuary systems that have been recovering.

Please mark your calendar to attend the 4 p.m., Sunday, Aug. 29 annual meeting of the Hull Land Conservation Trust at the Weir River Estuary Center on George Washington Boulevard, which will include a presentation on the role of The Trustees of Reservations along the Weir River, its Estuary, and Hingham Harbor.

Judeth Van Hamm is a member of the Weir River Estuary Park Committee, Hull Land Conservation Trust, Weir River Watershed Association and The Trustees of Reservations.

Atlantic Symphony Orchestra plans new season

Some organizational changes at annual meeting

The South Shore's Atlantic Symphony Orchestra is orchestrating some big changes in its organization. But the 2010-2011 ASO season that is about to begin, with popular Music Director Jin Kim on the podium once again, offers the same glorious range of classical music that has helped make the orchestra a mainstay of the South Shore arts scene from Duxbury to Braintree.

Vicki Quinn, right, and Roy Harris, both of Hingham, are serving as co-presidents of the board of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra.

The all-professional ASO introduces the new season with the traditional Sunset at the Abbey program on Saturday, Aug. 28 — this year combining the elegance of classical ASO chamber playing with the "classic Sixties" sounds of special guest Border Road. In concert after concert Border Road has sold out, playing acoustic "blues to the Beatles, with lots in-between." On Glastonbury Abbey's expansive lawn in north Hingham, the festivities begin at 4 p.m.

It's all designed to whet the audience appetite for Masterworks Opening Night on Saturday, Oct. 16, at 7:30 p.m. at Duxbury's Performing Arts Center. There, the full ASO opens the program with the Berlioz Roman Carnival overture, followed by Copland's Appalachian spring and Dvorak's glorious Symphony No 9 "From the New World."

With far less fanfare — but a sense of celebration nonetheless — the ASO displayed its organizational changes at the orchestra's annual meeting on Monday, July 19. The backdrop was its new Weymouth offices at 408 Washington St. Attendees welcomed new Executive Director Ronald Vigue, a veteran arts executive with previous administrative service for Philadelphia's Orchestra 2001 and for The Boston Camerata. In the ASO position, he succeeds Nina Wellford, of Hingham, who over a dozen years helped guide the ASO from its origins as the Hingham Civic and later the Hingham Symphony Orchestra. While moving on to other activities, Wellford intends to remain deeply involved with the orchestra.

Despite so many changes "behind the music," however, the ASO's performance schedule for 2010-2011 continues to sparkle with Maestro Jin Kim's programming touches.

Cameron Markley, of Marshfield, also stepped down as president of the ASO board after six years, turning over the post to new co-presidents Vicki Quinn and Roy Harris, both of Hingham. Hingham's Susan Ackermann takes over as board clerk. And in a new committee structure designed by Markley, Hingham's Bill Koplovsky becomes treasurer and chair of the finance committee, while Donna Milani Luther, of Norwell, heads an audience development committee and Scituate's Jay Habegger takes over the development committee. Jeffry Morris, of Hingham, heads the governance committee.

Despite so many changes "behind the music," however, the ASO's performance schedule for 2010-2011 continues to sparkle with Maestro Jin Kim's programming touches. Two "Joyful Noise" concerts — the first of them at Braintree's Thayer Academy Center for the Arts on Saturday, Dec. 4 — will be held again this year. And on Sunday, Jan. 30, Thayer will be the venue for the Atlantic's traditional family "Discovery Concert," this year featuring Rob Kapilow's charming "Green Eggs and Ham," a music version of the Dr. Seuss book.

Other concerts in the season will be held in Hingham's historic Old Ship Church in February, and Boston's breathtaking Jordan Hall in March. A full description of the new season is available at www.atlanticsymphony.org. The ASO's new phone number at the Weymouth office is 781-331-3600.

Claire Watts Receives Best in Show Honors

Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage is proud to congratulate Claire B. Watts of the Cohasset office, awarded a coveted prize for her talents outside the world of real estate. Claire participated in the South Shore Art Center's annual Arts Festival by submitting 2 water color paintings and a quilt into the juried show. Claire was delighted to learn that her works were accepted, one of her water colors won a prize and she was especially ecstatic when she learned that her quilt won "Best in Show." A member and student of the South Shore Art Center for many years, she has enjoyed the benefits of a fine gallery and exceptional teachers.

When interviewed, Claire found it challenging to explain how a quilt is made from its concept to implementation without a personal demonstration. She expressed the challenge of creating something from a personal vision and that it helped her achieve balance in her work as a Realtor. Bringing her creative background to real estate occurs more often than one would imagine. A careful blend of patience, details and stitching them all together is what she likes to do when bringing her customers and clients together as she's been successfully doing for over 31 years.

Davenport Crocker, Senior Vice President and Manager with Coldwell Banker shared, "We're so proud of Claire. Her drive and determination are legendary and well known by her real estate clients over the years. Now we see how this incredible talent and focus has complimented her success in art. Well done Claire – I join your peers in applauding your recognition."

Once in a lifetime experience for hosts and students

EF Homestay Program connects cultures

Cohasset convened its own version of a mini "United Nations" on July 15th, as students from China, Spain and France were welcomed by 100 local families, many of whom held signs of "Bienvenue," "Bienvenido," and "Welcome" as they waited with great anticipation the arrival of the three coach buses from Boston. It was a slice of Americana, which, as one host "mom" pointed out, could be likened to an episode of Extreme Homemakeover. The crowd of at least 200 people in the St. Anthony's parking lot, all eagerly awaited their new family members, as part of the EF (Education First) Homestay Program — a three-week program in which international teenage students are immersed in American culture.

Education First is a global language travel company that specializes in international cultural exchange, foreign language instruction, and educational travel.

Education First is a global language travel company that specializes in international cultural exchange, foreign language instruction, and educational travel. Cohasset resident, Matt Smith, is President of EF's Homestay Program nationwide. Smith and his wife, Anna Smith, came up with the idea of adding Cohasset and surrounding towns to the list of EF student offerings.

"Traditionally, New England has not been receptive to this type of program," says Anna Smith, EF coordinator for this first-ever South Shore program. "Florida and California have more than 4,000 students coming each year — they have beaches and great weather and Disney World. However, there is a growing demand for oversees students who want to see American Universities. What better place than New England?"

Since April, Anna has been working full time on this project — not an easy task with three small children at home. Her "work" began with identifying families in Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Hingham who would make great host families. In a grassroots effort, Anna personally recruited most of the families through friends and the Cohasset Recreation Fair and articles in the Mariner. Bee Raymond of Hingham; Katina Bentley of Scituate; Siobhan Stackpole and Peg Jordan of Cohasset were also instrumental in identifying potential host families.

Anna donated her $5,000 stipend — which she earned in her role as EF Cohasset Coordinator — to the Cohasset Education Foundation. She humbly says that what she truly "earned" from this experience was the opportunity to feel a part of something bigger. According to Smith, moments like the Welcome Party when she looked across Milliken Field and observed hundreds of people speaking different languages and getting to know one another have been truly "magical."

The students have not been idle since they arrived. Each day from 8:30 — noon there has been American "school" at St. Anthony's Parish. Classes are overseen by Stephanie Noble, Middle School Social Studies teacher and Cohasset resident.

"Trying to get nearly 100 students, speaking four different languages to do anything on a timely basis is a bit like herding cats! The students love to shop, complain loudly about classes and enjoy the company of their peers, much like American students," says Noble.

There have been impromptu picnics at World's End and the beach and the farewell party that is planned for tonight. In addition the host families have had their own adventures with each of the students. Some have been to Boston, Provincetown, the theater, boating, and a few have taken their student to other parts of New England.

The host families are getting just as much out of the program as their guests.

The Naclerio family is hosting 16-year-old Jules from France. The teen has been helping their son with skateboard tricks and their daughter with her French. Both are helping him with his English.

"The only 'failure to communicate' we have had so far was the first day," recalls Rosann Naclerio. "We stopped to pick up a pizza at Cosmos, and Jules thought we had arrived home. He unloaded his suitcase and carry on and began to bring them to the entrance or the restaurant thinking that was where we lived. Other than that, there have been no mishaps —except the fact that, upon our very first introduction, he was wearing a Yankees baseball cap!"

Then there is the universal connector of music. After picking up Winnie, a Chinese student, the Grenier family had a drive home to Scituate that was full of attempts at getting to know their new "family member," as well as trying to break the awkward silence.

"Finally, I turned on the radio to KISS 108 thinking maybe music would make her feel more comfortable. A new song began and a smile spread across Winnie's face. She leaned forward, pointed at the radio and triumphantly said, "Lady Gaga!" Talk about your ice breakers," says Diana Grenier.

The experience has not been limited to this one zip code. School is a half-day and the other half is spent on daily adventures, which have included Canobie Lake, Plimoth Plantation, Wrentham Outlets and last weekend's trip to New York City.

"Times Square was far and away the favorite site on the NYC tour. The students want to see glimpses of what they [think] they know about America, all learned through television and movies," says Noble.

Both students and host families have to had to overcome more than basic language and cultural barriers. According to Noble, the biggest cultural challenge has been for them to recognize that they have to follow certain American customs: One cleans up after eating, one is on time and must be quiet and respectful when another person is speaking. Everything from using an American shower to eating a "lobsta" (a word beautifully pronounced by Julia — a Spanish student who is now fluent in slang) have been part of everyday learning that took place inside homes throughout this town. One student was locked in a bathroom the very first night until his host family realized he'd been in there way too long. Last week someone mistakenly pulled the fire alarm and the fire trucks came. Everyone wanted their picture taken with the Cohasset firefighters and thankfully, the firefighters were very gracious.

Noble continued, "These little moments when they are able to observe our daily lives and are fascinated by what they see, are very touching. The host families have been fantastic and are the biggest part of the students' experience."

If your family is interested in being a host family in the Summer of 2011 please contact Anna Smith at annasandell-smith@yahoo.com, until then au revoir, zài jiàn, and adi"s.

Appetite for a Meals Tax?

Cohasset has the option of joining 110 other municipalities across the state, including Hingham, in adopting a Meals Tax.

The Meals Excise Tax is a local option tax that requires a vote of Town Meeting.

In 2009, the State Legislature approved a new local option meals tax to provide some relief for towns facing budget shortfalls due in part to local aid cuts. Communities may levy a tax of up to .75 percent on the sale of restaurant meals originating within the town or city by a vendor. This is in addition to the current 6.25 percent state sales tax on meals. A $60 meal would cost an additional 45 cents with the .75 percent increase.

The Meals Tax is just one of several proposals on the table to help Cohasset on the revenue side.

The Budget Planning Group – which serves in an advisory capacity – is also looking at the Rooms Tax, as well as myriad fees increases for everything from beach stickers to dog licenses.

While the Meals Tax could raise $105,000 annually and a 6 percent rooms tax, about $60,000 – revenue from raising fees for local permits, liquor licenses, marriage certificates, etc. would be less, but could be fairly substantial in total.

The reality is that Cohasset – and other towns – can no longer depend on local aid (revenue sharing from the state) to be a sure thing. The economic problems facing the state and our nation are not going to go away anytime soon. We could be in this for the long haul in terms of trying to become fiscally independent. By doing so, state aid would be like a bonus but not something to be relied on.

Selectman Leland Jenkins, who was in the audience during Tuesday's Budget Planning Group meeting, mentioned having the town send out its real estate tax bills twice a year as opposed to four times.

Scituate and Hingham both use this system.

While twice-yearly bills (with two bills in each mailing) may not be as convenient – it would save money.

We agree with Mr. Jenkins that looking at ways to save money before raising fees and taxes is critical.

However, the current recession requires a multi-pronged approach if Cohasset wants to maintain services that contribute to our quality of life.

Nothing appears to be off the table in terms of the research and brainstorming being conducted by the Budget Planning Group. Investigating having all vehicle maintenance done by one entity (from school buses to DPW trucks to police cruisers) or perhaps regionalizing the maintenance service with other towns is also being examined.

The Budget Planning Group and ultimately the Town Manager, Finance Director, Selectmen, Advisory Committee, and School Committee, have their work cut out for them.

We support their efforts and hope other citizens with good ideas will come forward.

End of busy, productive formal session

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

The amendment is part of an economic development bill passed by the House that would streamline economic development agencies and make Massachusetts more attractive to businesses.

The formal legislative session winds down this week on Beacon Hill as supporters of dozens of pending bills seek to have legislation approved by the House and Senate before the end of formal business on July 31. In addition to passing a budget intended to close an estimated $3 billion gap, the Legislature approved a number of bills meant to protect public safety, assist small businesses and taxpayers.

Several of the bills that have been approved by the House of Representatives are geared toward boosting the state economy and getting residents back to work. As you may recall, I wrote to you back in March about a legislative proposal I support to allow small businesses to pool their health care costs. I am pleased to report that portions of that bill were incorporated into legislation designed to control health care costs for small businesses. Among its provisions, the bill requires insurance carriers to submit rate filings to the State Department of Insurance, which could deny the increase if the rates are found to be inadequate, excessive or unreasonable in relation to the benefits provided. The bill prevents drastic increases in rates for individuals and employers, and allows patients access to prescription drug discounts.

The House also recently passed a sales tax holiday proposal that, if approved by the State Senate and Governor, would take place Aug. 14 and 15. The amendment is part of an economic development bill passed by the House that would streamline economic development agencies and make Massachusetts more attractive to businesses. I am a member of a conference committee that will iron out differences between the House and Senate versions of that bill.

The sales tax holiday applies to retail sales excluding any single item priced higher than $2,500 and does not apply to gas, steam, electricity, motor vehicles, motorboats or meals.

In an effort to help workers find new jobs during this difficult economy, the Massachusetts House of Representatives voted on July 20 to override a gubernatorial veto and restore $12.5 million to the $24 million Workforce Training Fund. The Fund provides employers with grants aimed at educating and training existing members of the workforce and new hires. Through the beginning of this year, more than $175 million in grants have been awarded to train almost a quarter-million workers through the Workforce Training Fund.

In other recent action, the House passed a bill to close a loophole to ensure that crimes committed in violation of "Jessica's Law" are covered. District attorneys and the Attorney General's office recommended the technical corrections to bring child protection laws into compliance with the intent of Jessica's Law. The legislation, approved on Monday, July 26, amends registration laws to ensure that crimes established under the 2008 law are covered, including aggravated forcible rape of a child, aggravated rape and abuse of a child and aggravated indecent assault and battery on a child under 14. Individuals convicted of such crimes would be required to register as sex offenders. The proposal now heads to the Senate for further action.

Recently legislation was passed establishing a Silver Alert program to assist in locating seniors with Alzheimer's or other forms of dementia who have gone missing. The program would work similarly to Amber Alerts. The Silver Alert program would provide for a coordinated approach to locating an individual with dementia. The bill directs law enforcement and other key response resources to focus in a geographic area consistent with the missing person's last know location. The legislation requires training for law enforcement and key responders. This training will be incorporated into emergency personnel training that is currently in practice.

Some 120,000 people in Massachusetts have Alzheimer's disease with the number expected to increase by 17 percent by the year 2025.

As part of the budget for the new fiscal year, the Restaurant Rejuvenation Act was signed into law on July 1 allowing restaurants to serve alcohol starting at 10 a.m. on Sundays. Prior to this measure, restaurants were prohibited from serving alcohol until Noon on Sunday. The change in the law is expected to help the restaurant industry, which employs roughly 10 percent of the work force, and could generate tens of millions of dollars per year for the state.

The House and Senate were expected to take up a number of other subjects before the close of formal business on July 31. Bills that are considered controversial in nature, or that require a roll call vote under the State Constitution, have to be approved before that deadline, otherwise the legislation will have to be re-filed for the next legislative session, which begins in January.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and one precinct in Scituate.

Steeple no longer a towering issue

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

The Steeple is Raised — On Friday, July 23rd the long-awaited day arrived. The crane truck came to Cohasset to locate the new steeple on top of the Unitarian Church tower. The workers hovered around as the steeple was unwrapped and carefully lifted to the top of the belfry. By late Friday the deed was done and the workers wrapped up their work. In the first photo the truck-mounted crane has been unfurled in preparation for lifting the steeple. If you look at the second photo, which is a close-up photo, you can see that some of the trim pieces at the bottom of the steeple are missing. These will be replaced later. How would you like to be the person who climbs up the ladders shown in the close-up to the tippy top of the steeple? Neither of us will volunteer, for sure!

BMPs — We have spoken about BMPs from time to time, but a refresher course might be in order. There are a lot of misconceptions about BMPs. When we talk about BMPs we are talking about the devices that handle and clean up storm water before it is released back to the natural habitat. BMPs are mandated by federal and state regulations whenever new stormwater systems are built. So, there is no way we can construct storm drainage systems without the inclusion of BMPs. As of this date, Cohasset has in excess of 44 BMPs installed and operating.

Years ago, whenever there was a problem with storm water on the roads or in other places, it was common to collect the water and let it loose into the closest stream or body of water. This may have worked well before life got so complex with lawn fertilizers, so many vehicles on the roads, and whatever sources of pollution we have these days.

Now, whenever storm water is collected it must be cleaned to some degree before it is released back into the environment. That's the law! With the introduction of the Cohasset Stormwater By-Law several years ago, more private storm water projects now fall under the clean-up requirements, as well.

What do the initials "BMP" stand for? It stands for "Best Management Practice." It really consists of a variety of techniques that have proven themselves, over the years, to effectively remove selected pollutants from a stream of stormwater.

So, now we've talked about why we have BMPs. Let's review what they really are. When surface water is collected, there are two basic ways it is usually cleaned. The first is a bioremediation device. That's a pretty big mouthful. In bioremediation devices the stormwater is cleaned up by a combination of plants and various soils that extract the nasties from the water before it is released to wherever it is being sent. Bioremediation devices also might have a coarse debris trap that catches large particles in the stormwater before it is passed to the bioremediation facility. Some debris that might be removed in this manner would be road sand resulting from wintertime deicing. The lion's share of the clean up is done by the plants and soils. Eventually, the soils will become so loaded with the trapped pollutants that the plant life will die and the Bioretention facility is no longer effective. At this point the specially compounded earth will be replaced and new plants reestablished. The plants used depend on the environment where the bioremediation facility has been constructed. You may have heard of the term "rain garden" which is a type of bioremediation system.

The Crane Prepares for the Big Lift

The Final Resting Place.

A second type of BMP is a centrifugal or vortex separator. These are buried devices that send a stream of storm water into a cylindrical chamber tangentially to the chamber. This creates a circular path that causes the heavy and lighter materials in the stormwater to be separated and held in specially designed chambers within the BMP. The cleaned water is then released. Just like the bioremediation devices, these too require periodic maintenance, or cleaning. The oily materials, floating materials and sandy sediment must all be removed during maintenance of these BMPs. After the centrifugal separator type of BMP is installed, the only evidence of a buried structure is a regular manhole cover that is visible.

These centrifugal BMPs vary quite a bit in size varying form about 4 feet in diameter to 12 feet in diameter, or more. Vortex separators have been tested and will remove about 95 percent of the pollutants. This allows the stormwater being released to be significant cleaner as long as the devices are cleaned regularly. Cohasset has actual test data that shows that some areas served by relatively recently installed BMPs are releasing substantially cleaner storm water to our streams and estuaries. That's a really good thing!

The legendary life of Pancho Villa

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Pancho Villa (June 1876-July 1923), Part Two:

Mexico 1913: The Revolution three years old, ex-dictator Diaz exiled in Paris. Mexico City in ruins – no electricity, garbage and dead bodies in the streets, cannon shells exploding daily in business and residential areas. Elected President Francisco Madero is advised/persuaded/ordered to resign. Three days later, he's assassinated. In the next 10 years presidents come and go with dizzying speed. One forgettable unfortunate manages to keep his seat – and his head – for only one hour, another for just a month. A popular saying at the time: "The fastest way to lose your head is to win the presidency."

On March 13, Pancho Villa, infuriated over the assassination, crossed the border from Texas into Mexico with an army of eight men. Within a few months nearly 1,000 more had joined, some out of loyalty to Villa, some to fight for the Revolution. And some, as one of them told an American journalist, because "...it is good, fighting. You don't have to work in the mines..."

In November, Pancho Villa and his Army of the North captured a coal train, dumped out the coal, and installed 2,000 men. The train continued on its way to the Mexican border city of Juarez, which was fortified by 4,000 federal troops. With his usual tactic of "swoop and surprise," Pancho prevailed. A few weeks later, he declared himself governor of the state of Chihuahua (who dared protest?) and set about building schools, distributing "appropriated" cattle to poor families, dividing up acres of wealthy Spanish-owned lands among disabled veterans. He re-allocated more than 800,000 acres of timberland owned by American newspaper mogul William Randolph Hearst. Some said it was in retaliation of the Hearst newspaper policy to portray the average Mexican immigrant as a lazy or violent degenerate who stole American jobs.

Like all great heroes and villains of fact and fiction, Pancho Villa during his lifetime inspired both reverence and revulsion. Some presidents hailed him a savior, others denounced him a scoundrel. Married at least four times (and never divorced) he often stated philosophically "Women are happier when they are wives." If they betrayed him or he lost interest, he simply packed them off with enough money to start a new life elsewhere. Or, according to other stories, he just killed and buried them, sometimes along with their husbands. A teetotaler, he drank cherry coke and lectured his men on the evils of demon run, saying it was impossible to win a revolution while drunk. He never smoked, and his favorite book was "The Three Musketeers." For decades after his death, when questioned as to why they followed him, old men would often answer, "Because I liked him."

They were received by President Eulalio Gutierrez and the diplomatic corps. Villa agreed to sit in the presidential chair for a photograph.

Like all great heroes and villains of fact and fiction, Pancho Villa during his lifetime inspired both reverence and revulsion.

In December 1914, the Revolution still raging, Pancho Villa and his Army of the North. and Emiliano Zapata, (the other legendary hero of the Revolution) and his Army of the South, made a victorious entry into the capital, Mexico City, along with 50,000 fighters. Apparently, both were invited to sit in the President's chair to be photographed. Zapata modestly refused because it was "unseemly," but Pancho Villa obliged with a wide grin.

In October 1915 President Woodrow Wilson officially recognized President Carranza, and Villa again was outraged. Swooping (not sneaking this time) over the border he raided Columbus, New Mexico – incidentally, the first and only foreign invasion of the United States – killing 17 Americans. Similarly outraged, Wilson ordered General John Pershing and 15,000 cavalry and infantry, along with eight biplanes, into Mexico with orders to arrest Pancho Villa. The Americans chased the Mexican hero and his men all over Chihuahua, where he had intimate knowledge of every rock and gully. After six months of playing hide and seek, and with World War I looming, Pershing gave up and went home. Final price tag for this costly game of tag? About $130,000,000.

Weary of war, the Mexican government finally accepted his surrender in 1920 and retired him on a general's salary to Chihuahua City. Along with entertaining a steady stream of American reporters, Pancho set about plowing, planting and investigating new ideas like crop rotation and artificial insemination of cows.

On July 20, 1923, shortly after finishing some business – legitimate this time – in the local bank, he was assassinated. Then buried. Then exhumed and the head severed from the body. Was Yale University's secret Skull and Bones Society responsible for the theft? Did Prescott Bush (grandfather and father of successive Bushes) authorize the $25,000 payment for the head? Where is the head today? Accusations, denials and wild stories still persist about the real life of the legendary Pancho Villa.

HEALTH NOTES

Smoking, alcohol problems persist

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

An estimated 434 smokers live in Cohasset (8.3 percent of adults, age 18-plus). The adult smoking rate is 48 percent lower in Cohasset than statewide.

As of July 22, the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act prohibits manufacturers from distributing for sale any tobacco products labeled or advertised as "light," "low" or "mild" because many smokers mistakenly believe they cause fewer health problems than other cigarettes. Despite their taste, smell or look, healthy cigarettes are an impossibility.

Smoking stats. The following Cohasset smoking figures are based on 2008 Mass DPH data: The rate of illegal sales to minors (those under age 18) is 63 percent lower in Cohasset (3.3 percent) compared to the state of Massachusetts (8.9 percent). Mortality of all ages from lung cancer is 19 percent lower among males and 31 percent lower among females. Rate of hospitalization for lung cancer is 29 percent lower among females and 23 percent higher among males in Cohasset compared to the rest of Massachusetts.

An estimated 434 smokers live in Cohasset (8.3 percent of adults, age 18-plus). The adult smoking rate is 48 percent lower in Cohasset than statewide. The rate of smoking during pregnancy in Cohasset is 85 percent lower.

Since the Mass Health Tobacco Cessation Benefit cessation program began in July 2006, 15 smokers from Cohasset have used the benefit – an estimated 41.7 percent of smokers living in Cohasset.

Alcohol stats fortunately for Cohasset, have not typically been maintained by towns as were those of tobacco. Thus the effects of its abuse are not fully realized until such statistics are explicitly stated for us all to ponder.

The World Health Organization estimates that about 76 million people throughout the world suffer from alcohol-related disorders. According to recent studies, approximately 53 percent of adults in the United States have reported that one or more of their close relatives has a drinking problem.

Alcohol dependence and abuse cost the United States an estimated $220 billion in 2005; more than associated with obesity ($133 billion) or with cancer ($196 billion).

The overwhelming majority of youth (74 percent of 8- through 17-year-olds; 74 percent of 8- through 12-year-olds; 74 percent of 13- through 17-year-olds) cite their parents as the primary influence in their decisions about whether they drink alcohol or not.

The 25.9 percent of underage drinkers in the United States who are alcohol abusers and alcohol dependent drink 47.3 percent of the alcohol that is consumed by all underage drinkers. Problem drinkers are mostly found in young adults between the ages of 18 and 29. Conversely, the age group with the fewest alcohol problems is adults who are 65 years old or older.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates 17,000 alcohol-related traffic fatalities in each of the last three years. In the United States, research has demonstrated that continued alcohol abuse is one of the major risk factors for violence in intimate relationships.

Fifty percent of U.S. homicides are alcohol related. Overall, about three-quarters of all prisoners in 1997 were involved in alcohol or drug abuse in some way in the time leading up to their current offense. Forty percent of U.S. assaults are alcohol related.

2.6 million binge drinkers were between the ages of 12 and 17. More than 100,000 U.S. deaths are caused by excessive alcohol consumption each year. Direct and indirect causes of death include drunken driving, cirrhosis of the liver, falls, cancer and stroke. Women are more likely to die 11 years earlier from cirrhosis of the liver and violence caused by alcohol abuse than their male counterparts. Across people of all ages, males are four times as likely as females to be heavy drinkers. Total cost attributable to the consequences of underage drinking – more than $58 billion per year. Most vulnerable to alcohol and drug abuse are young adults 18 through 25.

3.1 million Americans – approximately 1.4 percent of the population 12 and older, mostly between 26 and 34 – receive addiction treatment for alcoholism and alcohol-related problems. Studies suggest a relationship between work stress and the development of drinking problems.

Congressional hopefuls have their say at debate

By Benjamin Brown
BBROWN@CNC.COM

Fifteen minutes before the debates began for candidates seeking the 10th Congressional District seat, supporters — Republican and Democratic — filed into an already overcrowded Mayflower Room at Plymouth Town Hall July 26. With their sweatshirts draped across multiple chairs, supporters anxiously justified their reasons for saving seats, but to no avail.

Audience members sporting "O'Leary" stickers clashed with the many red T-shirt-clad supporters of Republican state Rep. Jeff Perry of Sandwich lining the room, looking for a place to sit.

That prompted debate moderator Christine James of WATD to call politics throughout the area, and Massachusetts in general, a "blood sport.

"I've never seen as much interest in this race," said James. "Who would have thought? Boston area — people into politics."

The pre-primary forum, sponsored by the Plymouth Area League of Women Voters, WATD and PACTV, was broadcast live via 95.9 WATD radio. It was the first debate during the race for the 10th Congressional District to feature every candidate from both the Republican Party and the Democratic Party.

George Brennan of the Cape Cod Times and John Kelly of The Patriot Ledger joined James in a series of questions throughout the night, which itself was split into two separate debates — an hour-long session for the four Republican candidates, and one hour-long session for the two Democratic candidates.

With only one minute until going live on the air, James gave the audience the "shush" sign, easily quieting a room full of onlookers.

Republicans

Republican candidates for the seat being vacated by retiring Democratic U.S. Rep. William Delahunt of Quincy may have varied their message from person to person during the debate, but the theme of their unified march was the same: spending in Washington, D.C., has grown out of hand and it must be stopped.

In his opening statement, former state treasurer Joseph Malone of Scituate lamented against the "bully" of big government, and vowed to fight against a Democratic administration that he said has been forcing legislation down the throats of Americans.

"I can't simply walk by and let that happen," said Malone. "I saw that big bully rear its head again, and I'd love nothing more than to go down to Washington and vote against (Speaker of the House) Nancy Pelosi."

It was the theme of the night for the Republicans.

"The reason I'm here tonight is the government in Washington is completely out of control," said Hanover resident Robert Hayden. "They've stopped listening to us… I cannot sit back on the sidelines and let this happen."

Raymond Kasperowicz of Cohasset said he was "just what Washington needs" to restore balance to a city that has yet to experience the hardships running rampant throughout the rest of the nation.

"The federal government is the only growth industry," he said. "Washington is the only growth city. That needs to change."

In his opening statement, Perry pledged to do what he has been doing: continue to author and deliver legislation that will make a difference. He said he would support the military, immigration reform and work against over-taxation.

"You'll hear the real deal from me," he said.

During the first round of questioning, candidates offered their opinions on whether Congress was correct in extending unemployment benefits to workers currently unable to find jobs. All agreed that Congress' approach could have been better.

Perry claimed that 99 weeks of unemployment was enough and suggested lowering the capital gains tax, while Kasperowicz recommended a three-tiered system, where those without jobs would lose the full amount of benefits as the weeks progressed.

"The No. 1 thing we can do at the federal government level is to have the federal government do just what it's supposed to do and no more," said Kasperowicz.

Hayden said he believes extending benefits will take away the urgency for people to find jobs, while Malone sided with U.S. Sen. Scott Brown's belief that the government should "extend benefits with a check, not a credit card."

Candidates offered some of their most unified rhetoric while fielding a question from James on whether they supported comprehensive immigration reform. Every candidate criticized the system, pointing to a need for change.

Hayden likened the issue of illegal immigrants cheating the system to being cut in line at Dunkin' Donuts, and voiced his support for Arizona's controversial new immigration law that would allow authorities to question potential illegal immigrants based on suspicion alone.

"What about the people waiting in line (for legal immigration)?" he said. "I know I don't like to be cut in line when I'm at Dunkin' Donuts. Shame on the federal government for not doing their job, and shame on anybody who doesn't support Arizona."

Kasperowicz called the current system "outrageous." Malone called it "disgraceful."

"I can't understand how state officials have let it get this far," said Kasperowicz. "It happened under George Bush as a governor and as a president. Build the darn wall. One of these days, a group of terrorists is going to come across the border and we're going to be asking ourselves, 'How did we let this happen?'"

Perry said he would deny immigrants access to state and federal benefits unless they could prove they were here legally. He also said he believes employers should be penalized for using illegal immigrants as workers.

During the "lightning round" of the debate — when candidates were asked to provide brief yes/no responses to questions — all the candidates agreed that raising the retirement age would be a good thing, and also agreed that it would be possible to lower taxes as well as the national debt. They also agreed that the Bush tax cuts should be allowed to continue.

When Perry asked his fellow candidates whether they supported Gov. Deval Patrick's decision to pursue national education standards that could lead to the replacement of the MCAS, therefore sending Massachusetts "back to the middle" of the pack in terms of academic achievement, Hayden responded that he "hadn't really given it a lot of thought," but that he would "support any federal money that's necessary."

Kasperowicz replied that students must have school choice, and that parents should be able to send their children wherever they want.

"We should get the federal government out of education," he said.

Malone seemed critical of Patrick's decision, and claimed the state was "doing some very good things."

"Now, we've brought ourselves to a lower level," said Malone. "Education is being played with by politics, and it's doing a tremendous amount of damage."

In his closing statement, Perry called the race for the 10th Congressional District an "engaged race." He said voters would have a clear choice and that they would need somebody to take on big issues, support troops "unconditionally" and should send a conservative down to Washington.

Meanwhile, Kasperowicz said the people of the district would have no choice but to do the right thing and that he would be the man for the job.

Hayden and Malone again spoke against big government, calling it "out of control."

"The people of this district are wonderful, but they're being smothered by big, intrusive government," said Malone.

"We have to act now," said Hayden. "I truly believe that the best days are ahead of us, not behind us. I'm not a politician. They're not going to like me down in Washington; I'm going to butt heads. But, I'm here to get a job done — I'm not here for anything else."

Democrats

While the Republican candidates were congenially supportive of each other's quest to end big government, Democratic candidates William Keating, the Norfolk County district attorney; and State Sen. Robert O'Leary of Barnstable spared no opportunity to trade jabs, calling each other out for flip-flopping on issues and discussing a allegedly edited clip by Keating that painted O'Leary as anti-small business.

And though Republicans claimed cutting the federal government would be the answer to many of the nation's problems, both Democratic candidates called for a more targeted approach to government regulation.

"I've never seen a time like today where our government institutions have failed us," said Keating.

O'Leary said the past two years have been tough, and that in order to move forward, politicians and residents will have to work together. He said he wanted "very passionately" to take on that job.

Keating jumped into the hot seat quickly after Brennan cited his desire to offer an independent voice while accepting union endorsements.

"They're not just unions," said Keating. "They're individuals. They have expressed a desire to work."

Keating went on to explain that jobs would be the biggest factor in this campaign.

"Those are the people who hurt, and I want to put them back to work," he said.

The debate then focused on O'Leary's supposed vote against tax credits for small business, which he denied. He explained that the "vote" was, in fact, actually a discussion from the floor within the representatives' chambers on Beacon Hill, and that his full answer had been doctored by Keating to inaccurately reflect his true sentiment.

"He cut part of that response out," said O'Leary. "I think he should take it down, and I'm actually quite upset about that."

O'Leary went on to explain that he would like to create relief for small businesses by giving them access to insurance rates similar to those that big businesses receive.

Again, Keating took on the spotlight after Kelly questioned his roots to the district. Despite the accusation that he moved to the district only shortly before announcing his candidacy, Keating claimed to have strong roots in the area for a number of years. He pointed out that he has held property in the district for several years and has grown very familiar with many of the communities throughout the district.

"I don't think anybody has broader or deeper roots in this district than I have," he said.

As a state legislator eligible for approximately $40,000 a year in pension, O'Leary was asked whether he planned to collect his retirement money while accepting a federal salary in Congress. He said no, and that he had no plans to retire whatsoever.

"You can't be double dipping," he said. "I'm not looking to retire."

Instead, if elected, O'Leary said he would refocus all of his efforts on his new job, leaving behind the benefits of a state-funded position.

On the subject of stimulus money, both candidates agreed that a more refined approach would help the economy recover and create jobs. But in order to work, the Democratic candidates said it must target specific areas.

"In the end, recovery won't occur unless there's growth in the economy," said O'Leary.

He advocated for "continued federal relief targeted" at specific things like new buildings at Bridgewater State College as a way to kick-start the economy again.

Keating agreed, but mentioned another area where he believes the federal government should spend stimulus money.

"It should be more targeted in the future," he said. "Stimulus money can be used to create real, full-time jobs, particularly in the green sector."

This, Keating said, should be taken with the "same sense of urgency as the Manhattan Project."

O'Leary said a good way to bring resources back to the United States would be to end the war in Afghanistan, where he said the nation has been drawn increasingly deeper into local conflict. He noted the war's $13 trillion price tag, claiming the conflict has done little to advance national interests.

"I believe we should end that war sooner rather than later," said O'Leary. "Frankly, we need to refocus those resources back here."

Keating agreed, but recognized the good work the men and women in the military have done thus far. He explained that the war was originally meant as a counter-insurgency, and that the military should pull out of Afghanistan by July 2011, or even sooner.

"I hope and pray that (the Afghan government) can take advantage of the opportunity we gave them," said Keating.

And like their Republican counterparts, both Democratic candidates supported reworking the way the federal government approaches immigration, advocating for a more secure set of borders across the nation. Keating explained that multiple immigration laws across the country have done little to help the situation.

"We cannot have 50 different immigration laws," he said. "It's a disgrace, frankly, that bills are not coming to the floor in Washington. We need desperate federal action."

O'Leary agreed that the nation should secure its borders, and criticized Republicans, who earlier that night called for a physical wall. He said he was surprised to hear them call for action when the process was already under way.

"We need to recognize that the current system is broken," he said. "And, finally, for those who are here now illegally, we need to set up a process to deal with that."

Agreement on issues seemed to end there, as O'Leary and Keating began to criticize each other for their views on casino gambling and the Cape Wind offshore wind turbine project in Nantucket Sound, with both accusing the other of flip-flopping.

After O'Leary explained that he would be against casino gambling, Keating's criticisms stopped just short of labeling O'Leary as hypocritical.

"If you feel that strongly, why not eliminate the lottery or Keno?" said Keating.

Keating then asked O'Leary why he advocated for Native Americans seeking land that might be used for a potential casino.

O'Leary explained that while he opposes casinos, he supports Native Americans who seek land in trust through recognition from the federal government.

Regarding Cape Wind, O'Leary said he would support the project if it became more affordable, "of course," but that right now he is opposed to it because there was no competitive bidding, no idea how much the project would cost and no assurance that the jobs would be Massachusetts-based.

"I'm struck by the fact that in earlier forums, you were opposed to Cape Wind and now you're for it," he said to Keating.

In reply, Keating accused O'Leary of changing his stance on Cape Wind "in a matter of a few minutes."

In his closing statement, O'Leary said it remains unclear where the election would go, but highlighted that it would be a critical one.

"This clearly is a race between myself and my opponent in the primary, and between the Republican and Democratic parties in the general election. It's not clear where it will go, but this election will end up affecting the national agenda," he said.

Keating explained that helping the public by creating jobs would be his primary focus if elected.

"I got into this race because people are struggling," said Keating. "When they tell you to send a message to Washington, you don't send that message — we need to send a messenger."

Casino plan is a bad gamble

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

As the debate progressed, I became increasingly convinced that we weren't making a smart bet, that instead, we were a naïve mark being suckered into a high-stakes game of three-card monte.

I went into the recent Senate debate on casino gambling with an open mind. We already have legalized gambling in Massachusetts; the state Lottery does about $4 billion in annual business, with some of its busiest outlets located in my district.

During the debate, I weighed the purported economic benefit of expanded gambling. The states of Connecticut and Rhode Island make tens of millions of dollars annually off Bay State residents who travel out of state to play at their casinos and slot parlors. Three $500 million casinos would require thousands of temporary construction workers to build, and additional permanent full- and part-time employees to operate. And the state would take in 25 percent of gross gaming revenues — a haul possibly worth upwards of $300 million annually.

However, as the debate progressed, I became increasingly convinced that we weren't making a smart bet, that instead, we were a naïve mark being suckered into a high-stakes game of three-card monte. The debate reminded me of April 1997, when the Legislature was sold a bill of goods about how funding the Big Dig through tolls on the Massachusetts Turnpike was a low-risk, high-reward proposition.

In the end, following seven days of debate and parliamentary maneuvering, I voted against the bill, partly out of personal opposition, but also because I found this to be a bad bill and a bad deal for Massachusetts. Here are some of the reasons why.

• A budgetary loss — Under the best circumstances, the state would receive $300 million annually in direct taxes from casino gaming. The Senate is smart by not allowing much of this money to be built into the state's operating budget. Approximately $30 million is set aside for increased social service spending, mitigation for local communities and cultural facilities and job development programs. And $90 million apiece would be split up and used to pay down state debt, pump up state reserves and buffer any hit to the state Lottery system.

However, there is evidence to suggest that this money will not be enough to offset the economic damage caused by casinos. According to the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, a likely 10 percent hit to Lottery revenues would cost the state $144 million, a net loss of $54 million for our cities and towns. Studies from Connecticut suggest that the cost of providing social services to problem gamblers and their families will cost significantly more than the $10.5 million currently earmarked. And the hit to local cultural facilities and performing arts centers could be significantly more than $3.5 million, as more and more performers and shows are lured to the deep-pocketed casinos.

• The Wal-Mart Effect — Casinos are notorious for sucking the economic life out of surrounding business districts. In a recent study, more than half of business owners in Illinois riverboat casino towns reported either a negative effect or no effect on their businesses from the presence of casinos. The 20,000 new full- and part-time casino jobs will be offset by the loss of jobs elsewhere in the state, as disposable income is spent at the casino instead of at local restaurants or shopping centers. And, with foreign investors dominating the casino market, the majority of profits will be sent out of the country, rather than reinvested locally.

If the Legislature wants to debate ways to grow jobs in Massachusetts — and it should — then let us pass a bill that addresses the impediments to economic growth such as high payroll taxes, high utility costs and a suffocating regulatory system.

• Unfair competition — In the Senate bill, casinos would be handed a number of competitive advantages not given to other Massachusetts businesses, most notably the ability to have happy-hour promotions and set up smoking sections for patrons. No other restaurant, bar or entertainment facility in Massachusetts is able to give away free booze, and only licensed cigar bars can allow customers to light up.

• Targeting the working and lower-class — Even without casinos, the average Massachusetts resident already spends approximately $726 annually on Lottery products, the fifth-most in the nation. And while movies such as "Ocean's 11" and "Casino Royale" have perpetuated the image of casinos as a place for big-money players, the reality is that the average person who visits a casino is working class or low-income with a mortgage and a family.

• Loss of cultural identity — At one time, Massachusetts took pride in being dubbed the Athens of America. We were the home to John Adams and John Hancock, Ralph Waldo Emerson and Henry David Thoreau, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Horace Mann. We have an economy that, more than any other in the nation, is driven by brainpower, thanks to our concentration of universities, hospitals and research centers. And our Blue Laws may have been remnants of our Puritan founding, but when we debated whether to repeal them, they forced us to reflect upon and consider our values as a Commonwealth.

• Crime — A 2006 study examined crime rates in every county in the nation with a casino covering a period of 20 years, from 1977 to 1996. On average, the counties that a casino moved into showed a local crime increase of 8 percent. Additionally, neighboring counties showed a significant increase in cases of aggravated assault, robbery, burglary, auto theft, larceny and rape. When a casino is built, crime follows.

• Unemployment — The states with the most casinos also have the highest levels of unemployment. In Nevada, with more casinos than any state, more than 14 percent of the workforce is unemployed. The state it displaced at No. 1, Michigan, is home to 27 casinos. California, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York, states that all have casinos, also are experiencing huge budget deficits.

I did propose a more cautious entry into the casino gaming business by offering an ultimately unsuccessful amendment that would have allowed for one casino initially, with additional casinos allowed only after a 10-year moratorium and an independent cost/benefit analysis. I felt this was a smart approach that prevented the market from being oversaturated from the start, without a clear idea of the economic and social ramifications upon Massachusetts.

Again, I tried to counter the negatives with the positives, but in the end, I felt casino gambling, particularly as proposed in the Senate bill, was a bad bet for Massachusetts.

Republican State Sen. Robert Hedlund represents the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Experience pays off for soon-to-be 50 Hadges

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

Life begins at 50…if you are John Hadges, who won his second Massachusetts Amateur Championship in three years July 16 at Myopia Hunt Club in South Hamilton.

For more than a quarter of a century the soon-to-be-50 Hadges (his birthday is in August) tried to win the State Amateur.

Five or six times he's been the medalist – that means he had the lowest 36-hole score – in the on-site qualifying at the State Amateur, an amazing feat.

However, when the match play phase of the championship began, he always ran into a buzz saw and was eliminated.

That is until two years ago when Hadges beat fellow Thorny Lea member Matt Parziale in the finals at The Kittansett Club in Marion. He finally won the championship that eluded him for so long.

And this year he won it again.

He is the 19th player to win two State Ams.

He comes from a great golf club. He is the fifth Thorny Lea member (Ed Connell in 1965, John Tosca '59 and '70, Bruce Douglas '75 and '76) and Steve Tasho '81 and '85) to win the championship.

However, this victory at Myopia, if anything, it is a great tribute to his physical fitness, hiking up and down the hills and dales of this ancient golfing grounds for five hot and humid July days, some 282 holes. For you stat freaks, that's nearly 60 miles as the crow flies.

"I don't feel that old," admits Hadges. "It certainly was hot. But it went by fast. We started on Monday and the next thing you knew it was Friday. It was a blur. Every day was the same. Drive to the course, play golf, drive home, eat dinner and go to bed."

He hasn't thought much about the victory, even a week later. "I guess it hasn't sunk in," he said.

Hadges doesn't play that much golf anymore.

Compared with other top-flight amateurs in the state, it's very limited.

He'll tee it up in the Norfolk County Classic at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy. And then there's the Hornblower Memorial at Plymouth Country Club, another of his favorites along with the Ouimet Invitational that winds up at Woodland in Auburndale, and of course the Tarlow Invitational at his home course in Brockton.

"I only play in seven or eight events every year," said Hadges.

He avoids USGA (United States Golf Association) events. He represented Massachusetts in the USGA's State Team Championship last year in St. Louis, and really did not enjoy it. It was too much time away from home.

Hadges is a husband and father first and that's more important to him than any championship he could win.

He and his wife, Diane, make a perfect match. She was a college tennis star and plays both golf and tennis.

He has as much fun toting his daughter, Kate, 8, to the Weymouth Club for tennis twice a week, or having his 4-year-old son, Jack, tagging along with him to Thorny Lea for a few holes before dusk than playing in any state level tournament.

Practice? Hadges makes time. He will sneak over to Thorny Lea when the sun rises in the early morning before heading to work at a commercial real estate company. Head pro Peter Norton, who has known Hadges since he was 12, says when he shows up at 6 in the morning Hadges is hitting balls or working on his short game.

"I don't play any social golf," admits the two-time State Amateur champion. For instance, this week he takes Kate to a tennis camp at Stonehill College in Easton and when that's over, he'll take her to a golf clinic at Ponkapoag in Canton.

"We want to give our kids the opportunity to do everything and anything," said Hadges. "For instance, Kate tried soccer and she didn't like it."

It's a busy life, but he is enjoying it and somehow it is helping his golf game.

"I think the easiest thing for me is just playing competitive golf," said Hadges. "What's hard is preparing for a tournament, finding the time to practice. But that's OK."

He has his priorities. Because of his limited schedule, he'll never win the Richard Haskell Player of the Year award. He's in second place behind last week's New England Amateur winner Brian Higgins of Franklin Country Club. Hadges didn't play in the New England Am. It was too far away, in Connecticut.

"I only want to play in events around here so I can be home at night," said Hadges. The State Mid-Amateur, one of his favorite tournaments, "was out of the area and I didn't even go."

He will be old enough to attempt to play in next year's US Senior Open. "I don't know where it is. If it was close to home, that's the only way I'd try. Everything would have to align just right for something like that to happen," he said.

He'll have a big decision next spring.

Hadges has the opportunity to become a three-time State Amateur champion. Only five golfers, including Francis Ouimet, have ever accomplished that feat.

But there is a catch.

The State Amateur is at the Wyantenuck Club in Greater Barrington, some 156 miles from his home.

"Right now, I don't know what I'll do for that," said Hadges.

Stearns' passion has been consuming

Southers Marsh in Plymouth celebrates its 10th anniversary next spring.

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

His favorite spot on Southers Marsh in Plymouth is the 14th hole.

"You can see 85 percent of the golf course from there and it's beautiful to see all the green," said Will Stearns Jr., who along with his father, built this sporty 18-hole track a decade ago.

Course of the Week

They brainstormed the idea of building a golf course on their land in 1995, when Will was finishing up at Harvard.

"I started playing golf and you know how it can be so consuming," he said.

For more than 100 years his family owned the tract of land and for most of that time it was cranberry bogs.

But in the 1990s, when the cranberry market went bust and it cost more to grow cranberries than you would get for selling them, they looked for another financial venue.

Will's passion for the game gave them the idea of building a golf course.

They already built a makeshift five-hole course around the bogs. It really wasn't much of a course.

"My father read up on how to build greens. But when he built them, they were about 1,000 square feet, way too small," said Stearns. "When we tried to play it, we found that out."

Novices with dreams often make mistakes like that. It is how you learn.

"We figured four of us adults and high school kids could build it ourselves," recollects Stearns.

"Boy, we didn't know what we were getting into," he added.

Stearns figured if he built a golf course, they could play all the time.

Wrong.

"That was my biggest mistake," admitted Stearns, who works the course almost every day of the week. "And I only get to play six or seven times a year."

Problem is, when he tees it up at Southers Marsh, he just sees more work to put on his to-do list.

"You see things as a golfer that you don't see when you're maintaining a course. I guess, it's a good thing to do and just makes our course that much better because of it."

It has been an adventure from the first shovel into the ground.

They hired a golf course designer, Dahn Tibbetts, who laid out the holes, constructed the greens, tees and bunkers, and they figured they could do all the grunt work.

"When Tibbetts drove out the last bulldozer and it was built, I figured we were all done," said Stearns.

Wrong again.

"But we're as busy today as when we were building it," said Stearns.

A golf course is a living, breathing entity. "It's high maintenance. The grass doesn't know it's Sunday. Friends call us up and say, 'Let's have a barbeque or let's go to the beach,' but we have to pay attention to the greens. If we don't and lose them, we're out of business," added Stearns.

Although they were novices when they entered the golf course business, they proved to adapt well with solid business practices.

"We found our niche," said Stearns.

Southers Marsh doesn't compete with the high-end courses, such as Pinehills and Waverly Oaks.

It will never host the US Open or even the State Open.

Instead, it caters to the average golfer looking for fair course at a fair price. They can play Southers Marsh three times for what one round costs at a high-end upscale course.

Southers Marsh also discovered another revenue stream they were not aware of when they put together a business plan.

They found out the value of golf outings, functions and weddings.

"When we went to the bank, we did not include any of that in our projections," said Stearns. "We figured we might have an outing or two on a couple of Mondays. That's it."

But it has been a valuable segment of their business. Southers Marsh has more than 100 full-field golf outings every year. The function and the wedding business has been a welcomed bonus, too.

But they work for their money.

"We're here at 5 in the morning mowing greens and we're kicking golfers out of the bar at 10 p.m. It makes for a long day," said Stearns.

And golf?

"I play here a few times a year and it's a good thing, but not very good for my game."

At the 2008 Beijing Summer Olympics, Steven, Mark, and Diana Lopez made history as the first trio of American siblings to compete on the same Olympic team since 1904. The sport: the Korean martial art of Taekwondo. The Lopez siblings brought medals home from Beijing, while bringing interest in the sport of Taekwondo to millions. In Hanover, one Taekwondo school is nurturing its own team of future Olympians.

Fabio and Kyria Takahashi, owners and instructors of Xcel Taekwondo Center, spent the week leading up to July 4th bringing an elite team of eight junior and three senior competitors to the U.S. Junior Olympic and Senior National Taekwondo Championships, held in Orlando, Fla. More than 3,000 competitors from across the U.S. convened on the Orange Country Convention Center for six days of sparring, forms, and many other events. Kyria, a former national champion and international competitor herself, as well her husband Fabio, a Brazilian National Team member and AAU National Team member, both know what it takes to prepare for an event of such magnitude, and were determined to instill the same focus and goals in their students.

The Xcel competition team endured months of extra training including speed and agility, endurance, and timing drills. The instructors added special training in other sports such as soccer and basketball, with a little dodge ball thrown in for fun.

Competition team members competed in several local tournaments to mentally prepare themselves for national competitions. One such event, the Northeast Open Taekwondo Championships, was hosted by Xcel Taekwondo Center and held at the Hanover Middle School. The group even took a field trip to see the recent remake of The Karate Kid for extra motivation and inspiration.

For many team members, especially those who had never experienced Nationals, the enormous venue and thousands of spectators was initially overwhelming. But thanks to the encouragement and training of Kyria and Fabio, the competition team was physically and mentally prepared to compete.

Day 1 of Nationals highlighted sparring matches for 6-7 and 10-11-year-olds. Norwell's Anna Kirchner, 6, had a close first match in the girls Yellow Belt Sparring Division and walked away with a bronze medal. Ten-year old Cornell McWilliams II of Rockland won two matches in the boy's 10-11 Yellow Belt Sparring Division, earning himself a gold medal and the title of National Champion. Cousin Dana and sister Lydia, members of the Xcel competition who chose not to compete, cheered McWilliams from the sidelines.

Ten-year old Olivia Elie, also from Rockland, was the last to compete on Day 1. Olivia won her first match in the 10-11 girls Yellow Belt Sparring Division with a 13-1 win, and then went to win her next two matches, earning her a National Champion title.

Day 2 of the competition featured Forms, a combination of stances, blocks, punches, and kicks that students need to perform with strength, balance, coordination, and confidence. Eleven-year old Brittany Peacock of Norwell competed in the 10-11 year old Yellow Belt Forms Division. She performed her form three times, earning herself a bronze medal. Hanover's Ryan McKeever, 12, competed in n the 12-13 year old boys Green Belt division. With 12 competitors in the group, McKeever battled it out against them one by one, taking the division after eight rounds and earning himself a gold medal.

On Day 3, nine-year-old Andrew Peacock of Norwell competed in the boys 8-9 Yellow Belt Sparring Division. He won his first two matches, before losing to the eventual gold medalist. He earned himself a bronze medal. Nine-year old Jack Gurney, of Norwell, competed in the boys 8-9 Green Belt Sparring Division. Gurney fought his way through four matches to earn a gold medal and National Champion title. Ryan McKeever competed in the boys 12-13 Green Belt Sparring division, but was eliminated after a very close first first match.

The 14-17 year olds competed on Day 4. Elijah Grant, a student from Worcester who trains at Xcel on weekends with his brother Jayson, competed in the 14-17-year-old Boys Black Belt Bantam Weight division. Grant won his first fight but lost his second, cutting him just short of finals. Day 5 of the competition brought a much-needed rest to the team, which celebrated its wins at Disney World.

The last day of competition featured Adult Black Belts. Xcel partners with C.W. Taekwondo of Cambridge and coached three of its students, while CW's coach was in Spain at the World University Taekwondo Championships. While all of CW's students performed admirably, none of them made it through to the finals. Jayson Grant, brother of Elijah, won his division, earning him the title of National Champion. Jayson has also earned a spot to try out for the upcoming Pan Am Championships as well as the opportunity to try out for the 2012 Olympic Trials.

The Xcel competition team returned home exhausted but excited, eager to share their experience and their medals with their fellow students.

"Honestly," said Kyria, "I'm not competing myself anymore, so to put everything I know into these kids and have them go out there and perform the way they did makes me feel just as great as me standing on that podium." With an eye on future competitions, as well as the 2012 Olympics, Kyria added, "When competing, all we ask is that they go in there and try their best, win or lose, as long as they gave it their all, that will make us proud. I chose to make Taekwondo a huge part of my life, and if these kids have any of the same opportunities that I had, to meet different people, travel the world, represent our country doing something that they love, then all of the extra hours of training will be worth it."

Xcel's competition team acknowledges that they would not have had the experience of Nationals without the unwavering support, fundraising efforts, and encouragement of their family and friends.

Xcel Taekwondo Center is located at 24 Rockland St. (Rt. 139) in Hanover. The Center offers a range of classes and private lessons for all ages and abilities in Taekwondo, Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu, Yoga, and Sports Agility Training.

South Shore Conservatory's kindergarten class forms a 100 in honor of their 100th day in school.

Welcomed addition to an arts-based kindergarten

CONSERVATORY NOTES

JILL MARTIN YOUNG

At South Shore Conservatory, we fully recognize that kindergarten is a critical time for honing very specific literacy skills, and that there are many technical aspects to emergent literacy that are individual to each learner. Simply said, children have very diverse learning styles, and must be taught to read in a style they understand.

With this in mind, I am excited to welcome Reading Specialist Laureen Brown to both our pre-k and kindergarten staff. Laureen is Orton Gillingham certified, and with her contributions of time and expertise, we will merge our emphasis of arts immersion with technical assessment and comprehension. Her multi-sensory approach to reading instruction will be helpful to all of our students, even those struggling readers. Children cannot love what they cannot comprehend, and they can only comprehend when learning involves hands-on, arts based experiences. Young readers must acquire the ability to connect what they know to what they hear and read.

Let me explain how an "arts principled" classroom contributes to language development, critical thinking skills, and most importantly, a love of reading and learning. Songs, pictures, movement, and play acting allow children to develop holistically because they allow children a rich variety of ways to interpret and decode the world. By providing diverse opportunities for children to learn and demonstrate their knowledge, an arts-based curriculum engages a child who may otherwise reject the use of conventional and traditional pedagogy. The Orton Gillingham approach is similar in that it teaches reading based on each child's individual learning style.

Our end of the year play, "The Grouchy Ladybug" is an example of engaging all learning styles. My young scientist loved cultivating ladybugs in the classroom. My young artist loved painting the backdrop for the play. My young mathematicians love the element of time and sequencing in the play. My young musicians and movers sing and dance their hearts out to the musical piece at the end. My young linguists and narrator love to read and speak their lines. For me, the greatest moment in the play is watching 16 happy, confident children hug each other and bow to the audience.

Our all-day kindergarten class never stops making those connections through literature and the arts. Just as with the My Father's Dragon trilogy, our children map new worlds, act out amazing adventures, sing songs, and draw new characters every day. Because of this rich and holistic approach, the outcome is excellence in personal and academic growth. My appreciation for arts education has led me down this path especially at a time when the "arts" have become obsolete in many school systems. An arts-based curriculum transforms a learning environment into a place of discovery where all the senses and intelligences are engaged and where all learners can succeed. I know this to be true because I experience it year after year as I wave goodbye to smiling artists, singers, musicians, actors, and dancers who feel confident and ready to conquer the world!

For more information about the Conservatory's arts principled preschool, pre-k and kindergarten programs, visit www.sscmusic.org or call 781-749-7565, ext. 17.

Jill Martin Young is the Conservatory's lead kindergarten teacher. A graduate of Stonehill College, she received her masters degree in education from Wheelock College, with a concentration in Pre-K through third grade/inclusionary practice. Jill lives in Marshfield with her husband Linton and 4-year-old Owen.

Dory finds a new home on Little Harbor

The first wooden boat built in the Hagerty boathouse since the days of Fran Hagerty has found a home on Little Harbor. The 16-foot Swampscott Dory built under the direction of Richard Wilmore and christened "The 1772," is now owned by Steven Golden. CMI is happy for Steve, Amy and the Golden children, especially the grandchildren, who will enjoy many rows in the waters of Little Harbor.

A second Swampscott Dory project is now underway. Interested residents of any age or skill level can join the program for any length of time, be it just a morning or afternoon, a an entire week, or more. The general overview of the project runs as follows, while details can be found at the CMI website at www.rowcmi.com. Sign up now by emailing Jack Buckley at jcbuckleyjr@gmail.com.

Week two, July 26 through 30: Strongback, bottom, transom and stem.

Week three, Aug. 2 through 6: Preparing planking.

Week four, Aug. 9 through 13: Beginning planking.

Week five, Aug. 16 through 20: Completing planking.

Week six, Aug. 23 through 27: Steam bent frames, sheer blocking, seat risers.

Week seven, Aug. 30 through Sept. 3: Fitting out breast hook, etc.

Week eight, Sept. 3 through 10: Fitting out gunwales, etc.

Week nine, Sept. 13 through 17: Finish work, painting, etc.

CMI's Hagerty Boathouse is alive once again with traditional wooden boat building. There's a growing enthusiasm about the process and the art of boat building taking root in the community's historic structure. And there's a growing interest in the product that emerges from the boathouse under builder Wilmore's guidance and instruction. Community members should feel free to be frequent visitors to the CMI boathouse to learn more about the community boat building program.

Let CMI know if interested in "commissioning" Dory #2. As its pre-built owner, a person will be able to see her come together through each stage of the process, as well as nurturing and sustaining a community boat building program.

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

Testing the waters, ensuring safe swimming

Sandy Beach is a private developed barrier beach, owned and managed by the Sandy Beach Association for the safe recreational use by Cohasset residents. Massachusetts Department of Public Health regulations mandate weekly bacterial contamination sampling of all ocean beach waters during the swim season (Memorial Day through Labor Day) by local boards of health. The indicator organisms are Enterococci, bacteria most closely related to developing gastro-intestinal illness as a consequence of swimming in contaminated water. Enterococci, generally found in human and animal waste, may be concentrated in coastal waters after a rain event due to fecal mattter being washed into the waters from surrounding land.

Results are reported in the number of bacterial colonies in 100 milliliters (ml) of water. Single-sample test results cannot exceed a specified number of bacteria colonies per 100/ml sample. Should the sample exceed the maximum allowable contamination level of 104 Enterococci/100 ml or a previous five-week geometric mean of 35 Enterococci/100 ml, the Cohasset Board of Health will immediately order Sandy Beach closed for swimming.

The results of Sandy Beach water sampling may be obtained by calling the Cohasset Board of Health at 781.383.4116, accessing the Mariner website at www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset, accessing the State Department of Public Health website at http://mass.digitalhealthdepartment.com/public_21 (Sample levels at every beach in Massachusetts can be found at this site), or calling the Beach bathhouse at 781.383.9618.

A "No Swimming Flag" – red, circle surrounding a swimmer graphic, X through the swimmer graphic - will be flown at the beach entrance on days that Sandy Beach is closed to swimming. Please comply with lifeguard instructions – to protect your family's health.

The Sandy Beach Association's goal of saving our valuable natural resource while retaining its safe recreational use continues to be of paramount importance, and we applaud the vigilance of the Board of Health Board in keeping our beach safe for swimming.

Three Ds of mosquito protection

The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project urges people to follow the 3 D's of Protection from Mosquitoes!

Drain: Many mosquito problems in your yard and neighborhood are likely to come from water-filled containers that you, the resident, can help eliminate. All mosquitoes require water in which to breed. Be sure to drain any standing water around your house.

Dress: Wear light colored, loose fitting clothing. Some mosquito species are attracted to dark clothing and some can bite through tight-fitting clothes. When practical, wear long sleeves and pants.

Defend: Choose a mosquito repellant that has been registered by the Environmental Protection Agency. Registered products have been reviewed, approved, and pose minimal risk for human safety. Wash repellant-treated skin after coming indoors.

Visit www.plymouthmosquito.org to find detailed information and links designed to provide you with the best and most current information on repellants. You can also call 781-585-5450.

Hull Performing Arts to present 'Toilers of the Sea'

Hull Performing Arts is in production for the musical "Toilers of the Sea: The Life of Joshua James," an original musical about Captain Joshua James written by Cinzi Lavin. Show dates are Friday, July 30, and Saturday, July 31, at Weir River Estuary Center; and Saturday, Aug. 7, and Sunday, Aug. 8, at Fort Revere.

Recently, Hull Lifesaving Museum hosted a rehearsal of the musical. The cast enjoyed walking through the rooms and halls that Captain James worked in during his lifetime. It was inspiring to imagine what the building would have been like during his lifetime. The exhibits and photographs that fill the station helped everyone in the cast envision the life of a member of that crew.

Hingham Vintage Base Ball Club Fall Classic

Hingham Vintage Base Ball Club's annual Fall Classic will take place on Sept. 11. Being the ninth anniversary of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, the theme for the game will be how baseball has played a role in helping the nation through difficult times. The game will be played to help both the Hingham Police Department and Hingham Fire Department.

Military veterans are being sought to tell their stories of both listening to and playing baseball abroad, especially during World War II, as well as to participate in the game's opening ceremonies.

Ava Cucina brings Italian cuisine to Ripley Road

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Great food, local art and even a small window into the world of the Kennedy family.

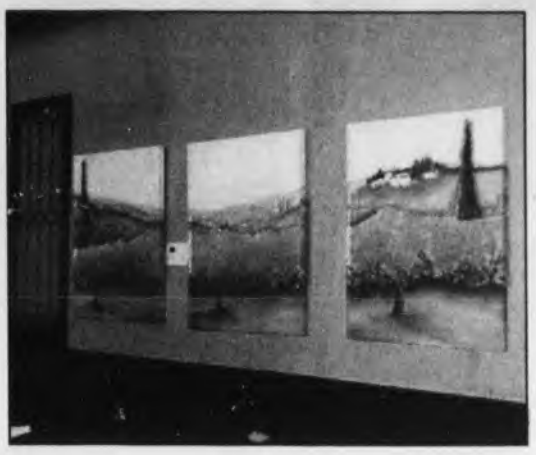
On any given night there are cars parked on either side of the street outside of Ava Cucina on Ripley Road in Cohasset. The Italian restaurant, which has been open since June, has great food, generous portions and a wait staff who make you feel like you're at home – a feeling that comes easily since most of the restaurant staff is immediate family and their restaurant is their home away from home.

"We wanted people here to feel like they could get simple Italian food in a casual atmosphere without having to make the drive into Boston," said co-owner, Annette Agostino. "Our hope is that we're the neighborhood restaurant where our customers are guaranteed a good meal of comfort food and comfortable atmosphere at a reasonable price."

"Our hope is that we're the neighborhood restaurant where our customers are guaranteed a good meal of comfort food and comfortable atmosphere at a reasonable price."

— Annette Agostino, co-owner

Annette and co-owner/husband, Vince Agostino, have been pleasantly surprised with the steady flow of mouths to feed at Ava Cucina. They and five children all work at the restaurant and do everything from the front of their "house" to the back. Vince is chef and Annette is the manager and each of their five kids do everything from waiting tables to bartending. It's all in the family, and that sets the tone for this unpretentious restaurant that also boasts a cozy bar and TV to watch the Red Sox and other teams as the seasons change.



The decor of Ava Cucina has changed since it was Bernard's. The large wall in the back is adorned with a commissioned painting by local artist Elaine Cummins. Cummins also has her now famous "sheep" hanging at Bia Bistro in Cohasset, as well as the Tinker's Son in Norwell. The three panel piece of art is a Tuscan scene that adds warmth to the cozy atmosphere of this family restaurant.

In addition, the decor also boasts a very unique Kennedy family connection. There are four panels of stained glass that used to be part of the Honey Fitzgerald Kennedy summer home in Hull.

"We've had these windows in our family for years," said Vince. "It was just a matter of finally figuring out how best to use them. Once we bought the restaurant we knew we had to incorporate them somehow."

The stained glass windows were set into boxes that serve as privacy screens between the main dining area and a beautiful, open atrium that has several tables where diners can enjoy the view of people passing by while they enjoy dinner at this newcomer to the Cohasset restaurant scene.

Visit Ava Cucina on Facebook.com for a full menu and hours of operation.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE
WEEK OF AUG. 9, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Avoid adding to the tension around you. Even a well-meant reaction against something you perceive as unfair could be misunderstood. Let things calm down, and then talk about it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for romance for unattached Bovines, and a good time for reinforcing the bonds between partners. Children's needs are important during the latter part of the week.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A compliment from a surprising source sends you wafting way up into the clouds, where — sorry to say — your view of what's going on is obscured. Come on down and face some reality.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Even a family-loving person like you sometimes can feel you're at the end of the line with contentious kinfolk. But things can work out. Remember that it's better to talk than walk.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A job-related move might hold more positive surprises than you'd expected. Go into it with confidence, and look for all the advantages it offers. Then decide what you'll do with what you find.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Driving yourself too hard to get something done on a deadline you set up can backfire. Ease into a more realistic finish date, and add more breaks to your work schedule.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of humor can brighten any dark period, and your laughter can dispel those gray clouds swirling around you. The weekend presents a surprising but welcome change.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be careful about the words you use, especially in touchy situations. The old Chinese saying that the spoken word is silver, but the unspoken gold could well apply here.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some facts could emerge to shed light on unresolved past problems. What you learn also might help explain why a once-warm relationship suddenly cooled down.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't let your pride get in the way of checking into what could be a great new opportunity. Get the facts first, and worry about procedure and protocol later.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A health problem in the family might have other relatives assuming that, as before, you'll take over the health-care duties. Surprise them and insist they share in the caretaking.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A series of changes can be unsettling, but in the long run, it can pay off with new perspectives on what you plan to do. Keep your mind open to the possibilities that might well lie ahead.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

John D. Walp

PITTSBORO, N.C. – John David Walp died Thursday, July 22, 2010, and was born June 6, 1935.

After a rich and full life, Jack Walp left us peacefully to be with his Lord. Jack was born in Nanticoke, Pa., educated at Penn Charter Preparatory School and then graduated from Lafayette College. Soon afterward, he was invited to Officer Candidacy School in Newport, R.I., and spent five years serving his country as an officer in US Naval Intelligence. Although his 30-year career was spent in consumer advertising, his many passions included sailing, photography, art collecting, writing, and study of theological history. He was a joyful eight-fingered jazz pianist who freely shared his gift at all kinds of gatherings.

Jack was a man of great integrity who made a lasting impression on everyone who met him. He challenged others to think differently about the world around them, and he was tenacious in all things intellectual. He vigorously defied cardiac disease for decades, and put his whole heart into everything he did with much enthusiasm and energy. He loved his God, his country, his family, his dogs, and his friends.

Jack continues to be loved by Beryl, his wife of 48 years; and three children, Allison Walp Dimsdale and her husband, Todd Dimsdale, Mollie Walp Ackner and her husband, Reade Ackner, and Davis Rosser Walp and his wife, Mora Melican Walp.; six grandchildren, Callie Rosser Dimsdale, Hannah Walp Dimsdale, Kara Ashlyn Walp, Brenna Beryl Walp, Peter Davis Walp, and Owen Emmanuel Ackner; niece and nephew, Gordon Hearst Rosser III and Meredith Fredricka Nelson Rosser DeFelice.

Heartfelt thanks are in order to Dr. Michael Blazing, Gail Cox, R.N., and their team at the Duke Heart Center, as well as the Duke Hospice at Meadowlands.

The memorial celebration of Jack's life is Sunday, July 25, at 4 p.m., at All Saints Church, 4310 Garrett Road, Durham, NC 27707. A private cremation ceremony was held at the Hall-Wynne Crematory. A private graveside service will be held at a later time.

In lieu of flowers, donations will be gratefully accepted at All Saints Church in Durham, NC and Duke Hospice at Meadowlands.

CIRCUS ATMOSPHERE

Counting Crows ready to put on a show

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Counting Crows Traveling Circus and Medicine Show will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Friday, July 30.

Some touring bands have set lists that are set in stone, but not Counting Crows. Two decades after they made their way from San Francisco Bay area college radio band to the big time, selling more than 20 million albums worldwide, the Crows have plenty of their own music and their own hits. They still like doing cover songs, however, and joining their tour mates on stage. Indeed, lead singer, songwriter, and record producer Adam Duritz has a message for anyone planning to see the Crows at the South Shore Music Circus on July 30 or Cape Cod Melody Tent on Aug. 14.

"People should definitely get to our shows on time, because we're on from the very beginning. We'll be there with Augustana and Notar, a New York rap artist, but we don't see them as opening acts. We'll be doing our own stuff, of course, but we'll also be sharing the stage with them," explained Duritz last week by telephone from New York of this year's Counting Crows Traveling Circus and Medicine Show. "Some of the guys from Augustana have sung on our albums, and I sing on their latest album. It is also great to have a rapper in the middle of the Traveling Circus. I'm working with Notar on a hip-hop album for my record label. He is a great freestyle rapper and a great writer. I'm getting a huge musical jones out of touring with Counting Crows these days."

Fans have had a similar feeling about the band – which still includes co-founder David Bryson on guitar and longtime member David "Immy" Immergluck, also on guitar — since the 1993 release of its debut album, "August and Everything After," and their first single, and first hit, "Mr. Jones." Duritz says that had Geffen Records had its way, things might have gone differently in those early days.

"I wanted 'Mr. Jones' to be our first single, but the label did not. They wanted 'Rain King' or 'Murder One.' I believed that 'Mr. Jones' was the right song to introduce us as a new rock-and-roll band. It isn't just a song about wanting to be a rock star. It is also about the hollowness that can accompany the experience of great fame. Like a lot of my songs, that one is about the flaws and emotional needs that so many of us have" says Duritz, who recalls learning the song's lessons very early in life. "My mom told me in the first grade that life isn't a popularity contest. I still can't believe how many of us grow up thinking that we need to be rich and famous in order to be happy."

The Crows' fame continued, of course, from that first hit song to eight top five singles, including the 2005 number one hit "Accidentally in Love" from the "Shrek 2" soundtrack, which earned Golden Globe, Grammy, and Academy Award nominations. According to Duritz, the group's most recent album, 2008's "Saturday Nights and Sunday Mornings," was about failing, but then turning around and going somewhere with your life. The Baltimore-born Duritz, whose childhood took him from Maryland to Boston, El Paso, and finally Berkeley, Calif., and who has struggled for much of his adult life with depression and dissociative disorder, last week celebrated an important anniversary with girlfriend, actress Emmy Rossum,

"I'm almost 46 years old and I'm just having my first-ever first anniversary with one girlfriend. It really means something to me. Writing songs is an amazing way to bring people in, but now I owe it to myself to live my life. I don't want to look back one day and realize I spent all my time writing music – I want to live, too."

For now, that life includes both personal and professional passions.

"I truly love making music. Counting Crows is a completely involving, overwhelming, passionate thing for me, but that does not mean it is always fun. This tour we're on now, though, with Augustana and Notar, is awesome, because it feels so good. This thing that we started out being obsessed over has now become something wonderful. Two of my best friends, David and Immy, are still in the band and we also have five new members out with us. Finding yourself on stage, and knowing that you are loving what you're doing and what you're hearing, is an amazing feeling."

Counting Crows Traveling Circus and Medicine Show will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Friday, July 30, and at the Cape Cod Melody, 21 West Main St., Hyannis, on Sunday, Aug. 1. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at either themusiccircus.org or melodytent.org

Cell antenna on Bear Hill

New access road may be needed

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Following on the heels of the First Parish's cell tower, the water department's Bear Hill water tank, located behind the Middle-High School, could be the next home to cell phone equipment.

However, the means to construct the cell antenna could be an issue.

At this coming Monday's Board of Selectmen meeting the issue of moving the access point to the water tank will be discussed. The item is scheduled for 7:30p.m. at the Selectmen's office in Town Hall. The current access road off Pleasant Street could be too close to a newly constructed home for the large trucks that are required to build the cell structure and accompanying building to pass safely.

The Water Commission will seek permission from the Selectmen to use a swath of town-owned property off of Reservoir Road as the new access point.

This isn't the first time the Water Commission has sought a change in the access road. In September 2009 the Water Commission came before the Selectmen to discuss moving the long used access road, a dirt lane off Pleasant Street, to a to-be-created access road on a town-owned land off Reservoir Road where a water main exists.

Residents did not want to increase traffic or have large trucks in what they called an already dangerous area.

At the time the commission said the new access road would move the access road away from residences. New homes are being built in the area of 100 Pleasant St. where the current access point is and the owner of the property is allowed under state law to relocate the easement within the property. The moved easement, which is regularly used by the water department, would pass by six residences. Instead, the water commission sought to create a new access road on Reservoir Road paid

Cohasset's beef connection

Facebook unites old friends and naturally raised cattle

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cattle. Facebook. Old friends.

These words might not seem related but for former Cohasset resident Gail Reardon they are the words that tell her story — and have helped to bring the pieces of her life full circle.

For the past two years the Flint Hill, Virginia resident has been raising Black Angus cattle on her small 10-acre farm and selling the beef through her business, MerryWood Angus.

Then, last spring she was introduced to Facebook and reunited with old friends, and in the process gained new customers.

"It's just been incredible," Reardon said, who has resided in Virginia since 1984.

Reardon grew up on Westgate Lane, off South Main Street, and went to Cohasset Public Schools until attending Notre Dame Academy in Hingham. She graduated from Notre Dame in 1972.

Her venture into cattle raising came after frequenting farmer's markets. She purchased some meat there, but she said she was never terribly impressed with it.

"So, I decided to do it myself," Reardon said. She lives in the heart of Virginia cattle country, about 50 miles west of Washington, D.C. Her acreage is in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, near the Shenandoah National Park.

"I'm a steak man anyway — and I can say they are absolutely delicious, and I'm not just saying that."
— Jay Fiori, Cohasset customer

Her location offered her glimpse into business of beef. Over the years she has been to livestock sales for both horses and cattle.

"(It's) fascinating. I've been immersed into a different world that Cohasset could offer," Reardon said.

The 55-year-old spends much her time devoted to her cattle business, but also is a loan officer for a mortgage company. In addition to the roughly 10 cattle she raises on a rotating basis she has a horse and four foxhounds.

The transformation into a Virginia cattle woman has been a learning experience for Reardon. She has sought help from outside sources and drawn on her education at Wellesley College where she majored in science.

Water plant improvements under review

MIEX being reconsidered

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In 2005, the Water Commission spent a lot of time and effort to determine the best way to improve the quality of water heading out of the plant. A violation of one of the federal water quality standards pushed the water commission to look at options, both large and small.

Flash forward to today, many improvements have been made to the treatment process at the plant. Yet, the biggest improvement has yet to come to fruition.

The pilot tested, designed and permitted MIEX pre-treatment system is a shovel-ready project. The next step for the project is Town Meeting, where it would need the town's support and the money, estimated at $5 million, to do it.

But, members of the Water Planning Group, a committee appointed to help steer the water department through its financial crisis, are not entirely convinced the MIEX system is the answer.

On Tuesday night (Aug. 3), the Water Planning Group got an in-depth presentation on the current plant, water quality regulations and the steps the water department has and could take to improve. Tom Keeffe of Tutela Engineering, one of the water commission's consulting engineers, gave the presentation.

The need for plant improvements is being driven in large part by stricter federal water quality regulations coming down the pike in January 2012. While it's debatable whether Cohasset water would be in violation of the new standards, historical results show the water could be very close to violating the standard for total trihalomethanes (TTHMs), a potential carcinogen.

With this information in hand, the Water Planning Group talked about the options they have to improve the plant to ensure the new standards would be met.

In Massachusetts, the maximum contaminant level is 80 parts per billion and was set based on the potential for an increased risk of these health effects by the EPA in 1998.

Right now, the town must comply with the federal standard of under 80 parts per billion for TTHMs on the basis of a rolling annual average. That means each quarter the water department takes samples at each of their four sampling sites. At the end of the year all four quarters at all four sites are averaged into a single number that must be under 80 parts per billion.

While the actual TTHM standard is not changing (it will remain at 80 parts per billion), the way the standard is measured is. Samples will still be taken

PICTURE THIS/Brendan Skerry

Name: Brendan Skerry.

Occupation: Special Police Officer.

Best day of your life: There have been many great days in my life, very tough to pick one specific day. I suppose graduating from Marine Corps boot camp was a very special day for me. The sense of pride and accomplishment, and seeing my family after completing the training was very rewarding.

Best (or worst) vacation/trip: I was driving from Florida to Arizona with my Dad two years ago and while in New Mexico we had stopped at a place called "Rock City". Rock City was just that: a bunch of rocks, and this "city" was about an hour from any civilization. Long story short, my Jeep broke down and we ended up in a local town for 3 days. The whole trip wasn't a total loss, but that was a long 3 days.

Favorite season: Summer and winter both have their benefits.

Favorite holiday: Christmas is a good time of year, the whole family has time off work and having young nieces and nephews, it's good to make Christmas a special and happy time for them.

Favorite meal: Chicken and pasta.

Best magazine: Sports Illustrated.

Best movie: "Beverly Hills Cop."

Best TV show: "Hell's Kitchen."

Best music, group, or artist: Too many to pick just one, I like all kinds of music from different eras and genres .

Pet peeve: People who pull quickly out of parking lots to get in front of you, and then drive slow or make an immediate turn.... You couldn't have waited until I went by? There were no cars behind me.

COURTESY PHOTO

Special Police Officer Brendan Skerry's goal is to get a full-time position on a police department and be a positive influence on people in the community.

Goal: To get a full time position on a police department and be a positive influence on people in the community.

Person you'd most like to meet: Col. Chesty Puller, USMC. The man has six Navy Crosses; he'd be interesting to talk to.

Biggest worry: Not a whole lot worries me. I'm alive and healthy and have the support of my family and friends, things are good.

Best part of Cohasset: Cohasset has an outstanding sense of community and pride. It's a really great place to work and has a lot to offer to anyone who comes here.

Cohasset residents charged under Social Host Law

Police said many of the partygoers had cars. Officers made sure that no one drove; all the teens were turned over to a parent or responsible adult.

On Saturday, July 31, 2010, at about 11 p.m., the Cohasset Police Department received a complaint regarding a neighborhood disturbance and underage drinking party at 11 Deep Run.

Police officers responded and found a large group of youth consuming liquor and playing "drinking games" in the rear of the property. Officers further observed that empty beer cans and cups were strewn about the property.

According to the police report, the group was extremely loud and was screaming and singing.

Officers identified the hosts of the party as Elizabeth McQuade, 50, and her son, Taylor McQuade, 18. Officers also identified 14 females and nine males, all under the age of 19 and from various towns, including Cohasset.

Officers determined through witness statements that Elizabeth McQuade had been present at the home for a substantial amount of time, and was allowing youths to consume liquor. She was arrested and charged with furnishing alcohol to minors ("Social Host Law"), keeping a disorderly house and disturbing the peace. Her son, Taylor, was arrested and charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and furnishing alcohol to minors ("Social Host Law"). Mother and son were arraigned in Quincy District Court on Monday, Aug. 2.

The 23 under-age party guests will appear in a few weeks before the clerk magistrate, who will determine if there is probable cause to arraign them on the charge of being minors in possession of alcohol, police said. Usually in these cases, if the teens have no prior record, they will be put into a diversion program that includes attending a class sponsored by MADD.

Police said many of the partygoers had cars. Officers made sure that no one drove; all the teens were turned over to a parent or responsible adult.

"We're happy that we were able to get everyone home safely and hold the hosts of this party accountable," Lt. William Quigley stated.

When Elizabeth McQuade appeared in court Monday for her arraignment on the charges stemming from Saturday's incident, she had to deal with a probation violation from a previous domestic violence case.

According to published reports, Judge Mark Coven released Taylor McQuade and Elizabeth McQuade, 50, on "personal recognizance." The judge has ordered that neither could use drugs or drink alcohol, and also that they must submit to related testing. In addition, Elizabeth McQuade agreed to Judge Coven's request that a sobriety-monitoring device be set up her home.

The case has been continued until the next hearing on August 30.

The Social Host Law stems from an incident that occurred in Cohasset on June 22, 1996, where Marshfield teen Gregory Smith left a graduation party intoxicated and was killed after hitting a tree on his ride home. The law was lobbied for by Smith's parents, and was enacted in 2000 to close a loophole in the old statute.

Seagull

A concerned caller reported an injured seagull stuck behind the dumpster at Fiori's Gulf Station on Chief Justice Cushing Highway last Monday (July 26) at about 6:29 a.m.

The Hingham Animal Control Officer captured the bird that was severely injured and had to be put down, police said.

Vandalism

Police are investigating a case of vandalism involving the destruction of the benches between Tedeschi's and French Memories in the village last Monday (July 26). The incident was reported at 7:50 p.m. Police said the benches were completely destroyed and have been replaced by the landlord at French Memories.

Police are putting more patrols in the village due to recent vandalism, including the benches last week and cutting of a gas hose at the gas station on South Main Street two weeks ago.

Wompatuck

A state worker from the Department of Conservation and Recreation went to the station last Wednesday (July 28) at 11 a.m. to report that a large rock near the reservoir had been freshly spray-painted with graffiti all over it. DCR patrols the area, which is in a remote section of Wompatuck State Park. Police have photos of the graffiti and the matter is under investigation.

MV accidents

• At 11:13 a.m. on Tuesday (July 27), a 2008 Jeep Liberty, operated by at 33-year-old Dorchester woman, was leaving Highland Avenue to turn onto North Main Street when the Jeep was "rear-ended" by a 2006 Volvo XC70, driven by a 62-year-old Cohasset woman. The Dorchester woman was transported to the hospital with minor injuries, police said. Both vehicles were towed. The Cohasset woman was cited for failure to yield at an intersection.

• At 11:13 a.m. on Thursday (July 29), a 1999 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by a 22-year-old Scituate man, lost its front tire and hit the traffic island at Forest Avenue and North Main Street. The Jeep was towed; there were no injuries, police said.

• At 7:18 p.m. on Friday (July 30), a 54-year-old Cohasset man in a 2006 Toyota Tacoma pickup truck overshot a parking space on Lighthouse Lane on Government Island and when he backed up, hit a 2000 BMW 323, operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset boy. The BMW had to be towed. There were no injuries and no citations.

Road rage

A 57-year-old Plymouth woman reported at 9:35 p.m. on Tuesday (July 27) that a Ford Mustang had been menacing her on Route 3A. She provided a plate number and an officer went to the residence. Further investigation revealed that the menacing had been a mutual thing and harassment had been going back and both between the two motorists. Both motorists were advised not to continue that type of behavior, police said.

Near tracks

• Four men from out of town were sent on their way after a report that they were close to the tracks near the Sohier Street crossing last Wednesday (July 28) at about 1:10 p.m. The men were trying to figure out how the crossing arms worked, police said.

• Two girls, ages 13 and 14, were taking a photo, using the right of way at the Sohier Street grade crossing as a backdrop at 8:50 p.m. on Thursday (July 28). They were standing in the middle of the crossing and were told not to play around that area, police said.

Skunk

The animal control officer responded to a concerned citizen's home on Nichols road at 8:41 a.m. last Thursday (July 29) to let a skunk out of a "Have-a-Heart" trap the woman had put in her garden to trap a rabbit. Instead, she caught a skunk, police said.

Summonses

• A 42-year-old Marshfield man is being summonsed to court for being in violation of a license restriction and speeding following a traffic stop at 5:51 a.m. on Friday (July 30) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Police stopped the 2000 Mitsubishi the man was driving for going 50 n a 35 mph zone. The man has a hardship license for motor vehicle violations allowing him to driver between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. By the time the paperwork was complete, it was 6:10 a.m. and the man was allowed to drive away, police said.

• A 19-year-old Marshfield man is being summonsed to court for operating an unregistered, uninsured vehicle after a traffic stop at 4:51 p.m. on Saturday (July 31) on Forest Avenue. Radar clocked the 1998 Dodge Caravan as traveling 43 in a 30 mph zone, police said. A computer check revealed the plates had been revoked due to insurance cancellation. The minivan was towed.

Designated driver

A group of two men and two women were horsing around in the Cohasset Plaza parking lot at 9:35 p.m. on Saturday (July 31) when a 9-1-1 caller reporting seeing the group arguing loudly and appearing to be drunk.

Briefly

Three Ds of mosquito protection

The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project – that includes Cohasset — urges people to follow the 3 D's of Protection from Mosquitoes!

Drain: Many mosquito problems in your yard and neighborhood are likely to come from water-filled containers that you, the resident, can help eliminate. All mosquitoes require water in which to breed. Be sure to drain any standing water around your house.

Dress: Wear light colored, loose fitting clothing. Some mosquito species are attracted to dark clothing and some can bite through tight-fitting clothes. When practical, wear long sleeves and pants.

Defend: Choose a mosquito repellant that has been registered by the Environmental Protection Agency. Registered products have been reviewed, approved, and pose minimal risk for human safety. Wash repellant-treated skin after coming indoors.

Visit www. plymouthmosquito.org to find detailed information and links designed to provide you with the best and most current information on repellants. You can also call 781-585-5450.

Fate of Treat's Pond project

Army Corps proposal could be voted on Monday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A three-year saga over the Army Corps of Engineers Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project proposal could be headed for a vote. The Army Corps has requested final work on whether the town supports the project by Sept. 1.

On Monday night, the Board of Selectmen will take up the controversial project once again. The item is scheduled for 8:30p.m. at the Selectmen's office in Town Hall.

"I'm going to ask for an up or down vote on Treat's Pond, specifically the Army Corp's saltmarsh restoration proposal," Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said in a phone interview this week.

The Army Corps of Engineer's aquatic habitat restoration project at Treat's Pond has been on the Selectmen's docket since it was presented to the board and a crowded room in June 2007.

Army Corps recommended installing a pipe from the failing pond plagued by phragmites to the harbor to enable a saltwater exchange. From there, the project and its many associated issue took many twists and turns and was one of the most controversial topics in town throughout 2008.

The Army Corps would contribute about $1 million toward the cost of the project, with the remaining funding, which was estimated to be about $600,000, coming from a non-federal source (likely the town or the state).

The most recent vote in regard to the project came in April. After a more than two-hour discussion the Board of Selectmen had a split vote, which essentially is a vote against, to pursue a study on what effects, if any, the project would have on the harbor.

Selectmen Ted Carr and Paul Carlson voted in support of pursuing a harbor study, while Quigley and Selectman Fred Koed voted against. Then-selectman Ralph Dormitzer had recused himself from all discussions and votes of Treat's Pond. Selectmen Leland Jenkins was elected in April.

The Treat's Pond issue is multi-faceted. There is the health and vitality of the pond, which is failing and being choked by a growing phragmite population, an invasive plant species. Then, there is an issue of stormwater and flooding. During severe rainstorms the area of Treat's Pond and the surrounding Atlantic Ave. area is subject to serious flooding for several residents in the past.

The Army Corps stated primary goal was creating a healthier wetland, but they have said it's possible a side effect could be improvement of the flooding situation.

No matter how the Board of Selectmen vote if the Army Corps project was pursued it would need to garner approval – and an allocation of money – from Special Town Meeting in November.

2007

2008

March: Letters to the editor pour in and discussions at Selectmen meetings drag on as controversy heats up on the Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project is on the warrant for Annual Town Meeting. Town Meeting supports a "resolution" to continue exploring the Army Corps plan and other stormwater solutions.

April: Board of Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr promises residents an open and transparent process when it came to the town's involvement with the Army Corps' proposed Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project or other alternatives for the ailing wetland.

June: The town's easement issue first comes into focus when the Sandy Cove property owners and the town could not come to a consensus on what rights were granted in a 1964 easement given to the town by Elizabeth Bigelow. The Board of Selectmen tries to find an amicable solution with Sandy Cove residents. Also this month, a well-attended workshop is held to discuss the problems and potential solutions to the flooding near Treat's Pond and Atlantic Avenue in relation to the stormwater master plan.

September: Treat's Pond makes another appearance on the Selectmen's agenda as the board grapples with how to best (and legally) access the drainage pipe on Sandy Cove beach.

October: The Selectmen place three articles outlining various options for Treat's Pond on the Special Town Meeting warrant. They are later removed from the warrant so the Selectmen can gather more information.

January: The Board of Selectmen was split — two and two — on one of the two Army Corps project options on the Treats Pond outfall and, without a preferred route, they could not get majority vote on supporting the project.

March: Town Meeting votes to give the Board of Selectmen the authority to accept an easement agreement from the six families whose property the easement to the Treat's Pond drainage pipe would cross.

April: The Board of Selectmen revisits the Treat's Pond drainage pipe/Sandy Cove easement issue with local residents. The issue once again goes unresolved.

September: Selectmen inch closer to an agreement with property owners over access the Treat's Pond drainage outfall at Sandy Cove, but still no easement or license is signed.

October: Selectmen ink a license agreement with a group of Sandy Cove residents so they can legally access the end of the Treat's Pond drainage pipe to clear it out to ensure flow and diminish severe flooding situations in the area.

February: The Board of Selectmen receives a letter from the Army Corps of Engineers asking for a final answer from the town on the Treat's Pond wetland restoration project. An answer is requested by April 15.

• April: The Board of Selectmen vote two to two on a vote to support a study of the expected effects on the harbor, if an interchange is established between Treat's Pond and the harbor, as is proposed by the Army Corps. A week later the Selectmen vote to send a letter to the Army Corps requesting more time to consider the project. They also ask for information about additional study or a peer review of the project. The Army Corps extends the deadline for an message of support for the project until Sept. 1, 2010. They also send an e-mail indicating the Army Corps would not pay for further study and a peer review was reserved for larger projects.

• June: The Stormwater Advisory Committee recommends to the Selectmen that further study is warranted for a stormwater outlet at Sandy Cove.

Latin teacher hired

A little more than a year ago the Cohasset Public Schools lost its long-time Latin teacher. The loss of the teacher effectively cut the program. An introductory Latin course was available through the online-only Virtual High School program.

School administration posted the position again this year and has found someone to fill the highly specialized teaching role. Theresa Raymond, who most recently taught Latin for the Scituate Public Schools, will start a half-time position in the fall.

Raymond has been a Latin teacher on the South Shore for more than 20 years. She holds a Bachelor of Arts in English from Emmanuel College and a Masters in Pastoral Ministry from Boston College.

Cost sharing with Hull

A meeting will be held to begin discussing ways the Cohasset and Hull public schools can work together to save costs.

"We really want to focus on services and supplies," School Committee chair Helene Lieb said.

Lieb, the Hull and Cohasset superintendents and the chair of the Hull School Committee will meet next week to discuss the possibilities of cost sharing that would be beneficial to both districts.

Veterans' website enhanced

The Town of Cohasset website includes information from all of its departments and offices, and the Veterans Agent website has been enhanced. It now provides many key telephone contacts and website addresses. However, it is not all inclusive as that would exponentially increase the size of the files and make it more difficult to use.

For more information, call the Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services at 781-383-0505 or email cohjoe@aol.com.

IN THE DRIVER'S SEAT!

The fact that the comfort of the driver's seat is critical to driver satisfaction is reflected in the fact that consumers report more complaints with seats that any part of the automobile, according to J.D. Power & Associates. From the manufacturers' standpoint, seating comfort not only has to meet consumers' expectations, but seats must also conform to increasingly more demanding safety standards. Moreover, auto manufacturers must design seats that can accommodate the widest range of body types. To meet these challenges, seats come with redesigned head restraints as well as more adjustments and creature comforts. For example, the percentage of automobile models offering heated/ventilated seats currently stands at 85% which is twice the number available a decade ago.

Clearly, small adjustments in the driver's cabin can make a big difference in driving. If you are uncomfortable in your driver's seat, you need to come down to ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT today. Our ASE Master-certified staff will be happy to offer some advice on how to adjust your seat, your mirrors and your steering wheel to provide the best possible driving experience. More than 200 violations so far

Aquarion water restrictions are continuing

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The mandatory water restrictions put in place by Aquarion Water Company for Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset customers on July 6 continue.

There has been only minimal rainfall since the date the restrictions were implemented. "The restrictions are still on and will continue to be in place," Aquarion Director of Operations Robert Roland confirmed this week. "We are monitoring the situation on a day-by-day basis based on precipitation. It's a supply and demand situation."

Aquarion has already issued more than 200 written warnings for violations, mostly for customers using underground irrigation systems or unattended sprinklers despite the restrictions. Aquarion crews are checking around the water company's service territory on a regular basis on the lookout for any violations, especially during early-morning hours when irrigation systems tend to be turned on.

In some cases, neighbors or motorists driving by a property have reported the violations. "You can pretty much drive around town and tell who is watering their lawns when you see a green lawn surrounded by brown ones," Roland said. "We're keeping an eye on the situation."

To report violations, call Aquarion Customer Service, 1-800-928-3734. To avoid confusion, Roland recommends that residents who have their own wells post a sign on their property indicating that this is the case.

Under Aquarion's rules and regulations approved by the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, failure to comply with the mandatory restrictions will first result in a written warning. Subsequent violations may result in the discontinuance of water service with termination and restoration fees ranging from a minimum of $50 to $325 depending on the day of the week, time of day, and holidays.

Should a customer's water be shut off due to repeat violations, Aquarion is required to contact the board of health, Roland noted, "since it then becomes a matter of public health and safety."

The mandatory water restrictions put in place by Aquarion Water Company for Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset customers on July 6 are still in effect.

"So far with most customers complying and the odd-even system, we've been able to manage [the water supply]," Roland said. "We're aware that many people have invested a lot of money in landscaping, so the odd-even system allows hand-held watering of shrubs and trees that could otherwise die. Grass does come back eventually."

The restrictions were and continue to be the result of continued high water demands resulting from the lengthy period of hot and dry weather the area has been experiencing. The lack of rain since June 21, combined with a significant heat wave, prompted more outside watering by customers, placing a significant strain on the water supply.

Outdoor watering is allowed on an odd/even basis, between 6 and 9 p.m., using hand-held watering devices only. The use of permanent irrigation systems or unattended sprinklers is not allowed. (On July 6, Aquarion mandated that all irrigation systems be shut off immediately.)

Under the odd/even water schedule, customers living at odd-numbered street addresses may water on odd-numbered days and residents of even-numbered addresses may water on even-numbered days using hand-held hoses only during those same hours. Hand-held hoses allow water to be directed to the specific area of need.

There are no plans for an all-out watering ban at this time, but a continued lack of precipitation could cause a change. "Accord Pond is at a level that's below average for this time of year so we are monitoring it closely," Roland said. "We also have a number of other wells around town."

In this phase, Aquarion is "asking customers to restrict their watering to plants, vegetables, and shrubbery. Please allow nature to dictate the color of your lawn," Harry Hibbard, Aquarion Vice President of Operations, stated in an earlier press release. "In addition, we are asking customers to eliminate all other non-essential outdoor water use, as well as to conserve water within the home."

Rainfall for April, May, and June was down by more than 52 percent compared to a 50-year average for the same months, according to Hibbard.

Under the MA DEP Water Management Act, Aquarion is only allowed to pump an average of 3.51 million gallons per day, on an annual basis. During the summer, water usage normally increases about 150 percent or more. Most of that increase is due to outside watering through the use of irrigation systems, according to Aquarion.

Significant rainfall needs to occur before the water restrictions can be lifted. "We're talking about three-quarters to full days of rain — not just a thunderstorm dropping a half an inch," Roland said. "Once the restrictions are lifted, we will notify our customers through the print media, the Aquarion and town websites, cable TV, and by removal of the signs [posted in affected towns notifying residents of the restrictions]."

For additional information and conservation tips call the Aquarion Water Company Customer Service Department at 1-800-928-3734, or visit the company website at aquarionwater.com.

Water-saving tips

Aquarion Water Company recommends several ways to use water wisely inside the home to help in the water conservation effort:

- Avoid running dishwashers and washing machines with partial loads.
- Repair all leaks.
- Turn off the water while shaving, brushing your teeth, and washing your face or hands.
- Fill water jugs and refrigerate them to avoid running the water to get it cold enough to drink.

In addition, water collected in rain barrels when there is precipitation, from dehumidifiers, rinse water from hand-washed dishes, or while running indoor water to reach a warm or hot temperature, is a good source for watering outdoor plants.

Water plant improvements under review

quarterly, but each sampling site will be averaged annually and must be under the 80 parts per billion. Essentially, each sampling site must stand on its own and comply with the standard. New sampling sites will be chosen by the DEP.

In addition to this rolling annual average number the new standards call for a quarterly report called operational evaluation level. This equation averages the two previous quarter's results and the most current results twice. At certain times of the year the TTHM levels tend to be higher, which could make it difficult for Cohasset water to meet the 80 parts per billion standard year round.

"We'll probably be butting up against it every year," said Water Commission chairman Chris Seebeck. However, not meeting the standard according to the operation evaluation levels is not a violation of the TTHM standard. At this point, Keeffe said, it's unclear how the state will use the operation evaluation levels except as a "warning sign."

With this information in hand, the Water Planning Group talked about the options they have to improve the plant to ensure the new standards would be met. The MIEX pre-treatment system, which removes a higher level of natural organics from the raw water of Lily Pond, is one of the most expensive options.

In a list of over 30 possible improvements developed in 2005 at a summit of all the water department consulting engineering firms the committee chose a few they want to revisit.

One was using chloramines instead of chlorine to disinfect the water. Another was injecting chlorine dioxide into the treatment process. Both had smaller price tags than the $5 million MIEX plant retrofit.

Water Planning Group member Ed Lappen said a lot has changed in the last five years, in both water treatment process technology and the water department.

"Let's start with this assumption: we're broke," Lappen said. "Let's put that to the engineers and ask what the engineers would recommend now."

Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt said he was in support of reviewing the different options, but wanted it to be realized that to pursue another option would take about three years time. It takes about a year to do the pilot testing (which must be done over an entire calendar year), another year to design the project and another to construct the project.

Others wanted to take the time to be sure any improvement were the right ones, and the ones that will take the department into the future.

"It hurts us not in the slightest to step back and re-evaluate," Lappen said.

The Water Commission was charged with talking to the Scituate Water Department, which implemented a chlorine dioxide program a few years ago, and seeking out other information on various options.

Mandatory water ban likely

Barring a "deluge" of water in the next week, Water Commission chair Chris Seebeck said a mandatory water ban will likely go into effect. Almost two weeks ago, the Water Commission voted to institute a voluntary water ban for all Cohasset water users.

The water ban would likely be similar to current ban mandated for Aquarion Water customers in Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset. The ban limits outside watering to handheld only, on odd/even days (according to your house number) and only water in the handheld mornings and evenings.

Other surrounding water districts are currently in a water ban: Norwell currently has a restriction on outdoor watering, handheld only watering in the mornings and evenings and Scituate instituted an odd/even outdoor water restriction as well in recent weeks.

The Water Commission will discuss the possibility of a water ban at their schedule Tuesday, August 10 meeting at the water treatment plant.

Rock tour of estuary Saturday

WEIR RIVER ESTUARY

JUDETH VAN HAMM

This Saturday, August 7, you are invited on a Rock Tour of the Weir River Estuary with geologist Declan DePaor of Hull. We will meet at 9 a.m. at the Estuary Center, 333 George Washington Boulevard in Hull near the bridge, to carpool.

The rocks in the vicinity of the Weir River Estuary reveal the fascinating geological history of our region.

The earliest rocks along the Estuary are about 600 million years old. They were created by volcanoes that erupted over the South Pole in a formation known as Avalon. The igneous rocks in Hull are from the lava flows, while the igneous rocks in Hingham and Cohasset are from the molten magma that cooled inside the volcanoes to form granite. The volcanic formations in Hull include: 1) gas vesicles (holes left by bubbles of gas), 2) lava pillows formed by lava bubbling up in water, 3) geodes (vesicles filled in with crystals) and 4) volcanic tuff (layers of volcanic ash that settled in water).

Roxbury puddingstone, also found close to the Estuary in Hull, dates from about the same time period 600 million years ago. It is a conglomerate rock made from many stones cemented together as at the bottom of a riverbed when the Earth was like a giant snowball.

The Estuary's volcanic rocks eventually became located within the supercontinent Pangaea. They broke off from northwest Africa and migrated to the edge of North America about 200 million years ago in the Jurassic Period at the time of dinosaurs.

The Weir River Estuary lies over the Ponkapoag fault. This fault and another that runs through Arlington create the rift valley known as the Boston Basin, which forms Boston Harbor.

The blue sedimentary stones that are so familiar on our beaches come from sediment that settled on the bottom of Boston Basin. Interestingly, if you walk Duxbury Beach, you will not find the blue sedimentary rocks.

Dikes formed in the rocks when quartz and other molten rock filled cracks. They range from small lines of quartz in pebbles to the large Jurassic dike that cuts across Black Rock Beach in Cohasset near the end of Straits Pond at the foot of Forest Avenue.

Green Hill next to Black Rock Beach in Hull is the first in the string of Hull's drumlins, hills made of glacial till formed by the last glacier 14,000 years ago. The flat lands between the hills were created by tombolos or tying sandbars. The bayside of the peninsula dates from about 4000 years ago, while Nantasket Beach was formed about 1000 years ago. For part of its length, Nantasket Avenue runs along the top of a sandbar about 2500 years old.

SUMMERTIME

Hey Cohasset, how is everyone doing today, August 6th? Can you believe I just mentioned August already? I am so sad in many ways that summer is going by so fast but I am determined to enjoy the rest of the summer one day at a time! I hope that everyone will join me as I do so and enjoy events, celebrations, big and small moments and more. Send in photos, news and celebration news that you would like to share with the community.

VANDALISM

I hate to start the column on a bit of a "downer" kind of way but feel the need to share a story sent to me by a set of very sad parents and members of our town. Rob and Anita Ross live with Rob's dad, Walter, as well as their sweet daughter Tori. Walter has cared for the planting and maintenance of the island outside of their home across from St. Anthony's Church for years and it is a wonderful tradition that he shares with his granddaughter Tori. Tori and Walter share a bond each year and especially when they plant the sunflowers.

Imagine how it felt when they went to bed one night to a beautiful island that they took such pride in and woke up the next morning to find it had been cut and several of the sunflowers destroyed? Sad, angry and for Tori, very upset over why? Whoever did this, stop next time you do something like this and decide if the 10 seconds of "fun" is worth it? As a community, we are so lucky that residents take the time to give time, talent and care enough to make our town look nice, do not ruin what is being shared and remember who you are affecting when you make a poor choice. Tori and Walter, keep smiling, do what you love to do and remember that 99 percent of us in Cohasset love what you share with us all! Thank you to you both!

Discovering your voice through drama

Emily Arsenault says her role as a teacher is to help students realize their stories, the characters waiting to appear, and give them the tools to bring them to life.

As a drama teacher at South Shore Conservatory, I live for witnessing the "light bulb" moment in my students' work. A shy student discovers his voice. A natural extrovert channels her energies into performance. Something comes alive in the eyes, a previously unseen character emerging with boldness and honesty. The "light bulb" manifests itself in many ways, but ultimately, is the moment when it clicks – when personality, preparation and confidence merge, resulting in a meaningful and genuine performance. It is, in essence, a demonstration of understanding and trust in the transformation of self to character.

I strongly believe that every student, regardless of age or experience, enters the room with the potential to have such a moment. For me, performance is the act of giving yourself permission to tell the story you already have inside. My role as a teacher is to help students realize their stories, the characters waiting to appear, and give them the tools to bring them to life. By establishing a safe space for creative risk taking, students have the opportunity to move beyond themselves and translate the inner emotional world into outward expression. Working with my students' own rich personalities and perspectives on the world, I can then guide them in refining and articulating the messages they mean to convey.

This fall, I am very much looking forward to working with young people – from preschoolers to high school seniors getting ready for college auditions – on discovering and cultivating their skills in creating and performing theater. For younger students, we play age-appropriate theater games to ease them into performance at a comfortable speed. Older students build on their experiences through developmentally appropriate drama workshops focused on scene study, improvisation and creating original works of theater.

In addition, I am thrilled to be collaborating with Brad Fugate of the Conservatory's Voice Department on one of our newest program offerings, the Saturday Stage Club, a preparatory program for middle- and high-school students interested in honing their skills as musical theater performers. Musical theater was my first love, and I can't wait to work with the Saturday Stage Club students on exciting material this fall. With our first session focusing on auditioning techniques, acting and vocal coaching for monologues and solos, and building a movement vocabulary, I look forward to watching our students light up South Shore Conservatory with their new discoveries as grounded, confident, and creative performers.

I am thrilled to be collaborating with Brad Fugate of the Conservatory's Voice Department on one of our newest program offerings, the Saturday Stage Club...

Paraprofessional pay revisited

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The paraprofessionals are back in a similar place as they were last year.

With a new hourly pay schedule, a departure from the salaried pay they have been receiving, many of the paraprofessionals could be losing about $1000 from their annual pay.

The School Committee discussed the paraprofessionals new pay structure at its recent meeting on July 28. For the time being the issue was tabled, but it will be discussed at the committee's September meeting.

"We feel we need to do more research and compare with other towns and within the district," said Helene Lieb, school committee chair in a phone interview.

The School Committee requested more information about how other districts pay their paraprofessionals and accrue sick benefits. A memo was sent from Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh to all the paraprofessionals and aides on July 7 informing them of the change from salary to hourly pay, change to benefits and what their hourly rate would be.

The new hourly rates, according to the memo, reflects a $1 per hour increase for instructional paraprofessionals and a 2-1/2 percent increase for clerical and activities aides.

Last September, the paraprofessionals, who primarily support special education students in the classroom at all three schools, were notified a day before school began that they were being shifted from salaried to hourly payroll. The payroll adjustment resulted in a loss of pay and a change to benefits.

Over the course of several school committee meetings, and a sub-committee meeting, the paraprofessionals spoke out against the changes.

As a result, in December, the School Committee voted to revert to a salary-based pay system and restore pay to the previous year's level. The committee also directed the superintendent to develop an hourly rate for 180 school days for the fiscal 2011, which began on June 1.

Depending on the special education needs of any given year there is a group of about 35 paraprofessionals or, as they are sometimes called, instructional aides, that performs a variety of jobs within the district. The majority, about 20, of them work side-by-side with teachers in the classroom ensuring a child or children on special education plans, or individual education plans (IEPs), receive the support they need to succeed.

In the coming year, the paraprofessionals may also have a change to the way they were receive their sick benefits. Full-time paraprofessionals will be issued seven sick days each year. However, each paraprofessional could only accrue up to seven sick days. Long-time employees who had accumulated scores of sick days (some have over 100) will no longer entitled to new sick days each year. They would not receive sick day benefits until the number of sick days fell below seven.

Lieb said she had received a call in regard to this specific loss of benefit and wanted to look at it more closely, especially how this policy compares to other school employee groups within the district.

Paraprofessionals are one of three non-union groups, or employees-at-will, working in the school district and are the largest group. Bus drivers and two central office secretaries are also do not have a union contract.

As of right now, the memo sent by Superintendent Walsh stands and contains the hourly rate by steps and position. The school committee will revisit the issue at their September meeting.

"There are new concerns, there is new information that presents a need for reexamination," Lieb said.

Gail Reardon grew up on Westgate Lane in Cohasset, but now calls herself a Virginia cattle woman. Her business, MerryWood Angus, sells naturally raised beef across the country. She has re-connected with old friends and made them customers through Facebook.

"My background in science has helped me to understand and change the way of finishing beef — and find ways to raise healthier beef," Reardon said.

To "finish" a cattle means to bulk it up so it's ready to be consumed. After some experimenting, Reardon said she has found a finishing method that yields a tasty and healthy beef.

"I intend to make a small dent in improving the wonderful food, beef! I only use Angus for their superior response to finishing," Reardon said. She still makes tweaks to her recipe and finishing methods.

The Virginia-raised natural Black Angus cattle graze in the fields of Reardon's 10-acre farm and are fed a clover mixed hay, along with minerals and natural grains. They are raised without hormones, steroids and antibiotics.

"The result is meat that is tender and juicy, full of flavor and low in fat," Reardon said.

A local farmer's group provides support and advice for small "boutique" cattle businesses like Reardon's company.

"It's really a complicated business. It's not the type of thing where you can just go out and buy a bag of feed," Reardon said.

Yet, the result, Reardon said is worth all the trouble.

"Some of my Cohasset customers have said my beef reminds them of getting beef from the Central Market," Reardon said. Long-time Cohasset residents will remember the once vibrant market in Cohasset Village that had its own butcher shop.

One of the Cohasseters that has tried the MerryWood Angus is Jay Fiori, a grammar school classmate of Reardon.

"We knew each other back in the day, in the 60s, but I haven't seen her since then," Fiori said. When they reconnected on Faceboo, Fiori eventually found out about her beef business. Pretty soon there was a box of beef on his doorstep.

"I'm a steak man anyway — and I can say they are absolutely delicious, and I'm not just saying that," Fiori said. "They are better than anything you can get at the store around here. It's nice and lean."

While she sells the beef locally from an outdoor farm stand in the center of Flint Hill (and plans to partner with a produce farmer to open a storefront this fall), Reardon also ships her beef across the country. Her customers hail from Massachusetts to California.

The reconnection with grammar school friends will bring her back to Cohasset in the next couple of years. Although she was not a member of the Cohasset High Class of 1972, she has been invited and plans to attend the CHS Class of '72's 40th reunion as an honorary member, she said.

New access road to Bear Hill may be needed for by the developer.

However, when before the Selectmen in September more than a dozen Pleasant Street and Reservoir Road residents came out to speak in opposition of the access road change, mainly citing safety reasons.

The new point of access off Reservoir Road is a curve that has been the site of more than a few accidents. It is also the origin of a path used by neighborhood children to walk to school. Residents did not want to increase traffic or have large trucks in what they called an already dangerous area.

"If we didn't have to do it for the construction (of the cell antennas), we might never have tried to move it again. But, this new access road is much shorter, it's on town-owned land, not private property and it's considerably further away from any residences," said Water Commission chairman Chris Seebeck.

Even before last fall, a Town Meeting article that would have authorized the access road move was withdrawn from the warrant in fall 2008.

"Hopefully we'll be able to address everyone's concerns regarding safety," Seebeck said.

Since 1889 the water department has used a dirt lane off Pleasant Street to access its property on Bear Hill. Before the water tank was built in the mid-1960s, a reservoir sat on top of the hill.

The addition of the cell antennas to the water tank would give the Water Department about $40,000 of additional revenue annually. The water commission has signed agreements with both AT&T and Verizon.

Cell antennas have become commonplace on water tanks throughout Massachusetts and do not interfere with the normal operation of the water department.

The cell phone companies paid a visit to the Zoning Board of Appeals this past December for an informal discussion yielded the decision the cell companies could proceed with a building permit.

School Committee gearing up for superintendent search

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As of June 30, 2011 the Cohasset Public Schools will be without a superintendent. With current superintendent Denise Walsh's departure next year, the School Committee is already spending considerable time and thought to find her replacement.

Although June 2011 is an entire school year away, members of the School Committee say they need to get moving on the superintendent search.

To aid in the process, the School Committee established a superintendent search subcommittee at their meeting on July 28. Members Jeanne Astino, Alfred Slanetz and Linda Snowdale will serve on the sub-committee.

"At regular school committee meetings there is so much other business that goes on we can't focus on this," school committee member Jeanne Astino said in a phone interview.

One of the first charges of the subcommittee is to identify a list of firms and/or consultants to assist in the search for a new school superintendent.

One of the first charges of the sub-committee is to identify a list of firms and/or consultants to assist in the search for a new school superintendent. The consultant will aid the school committee throughout the entire process of the search.

The School Committee will need to issue a request for proposals (RFP) to those firms and interview them in the coming months.

Both Astino and school committee chairman Helene Lieb said they hoped to identify the consulting group by mid-September.

Astino aimed to the first meeting of the sub-committee this coming week (as of press time the meeting day was not settled).

"We need to sit down and figure out what direction we want to go in. We're going to need some community input (along the way)," Astino said.

Yet, even with the entire school year ahead time is of the essence.

"We have time, but we've got to get moving," Lieb said. Her aim is to have the methods and means for the superintendent's search organized by mid-September.

Astino said most currently serving superintendent's need to give at least 90 days notice they are leaving their district.

"We have to work backwards from that," Astino said, which means having a candidate selected by late March in order to be in place by July.

"It's very important for us to get the right person. There has been a lot of controversy with superintendents, not just here, but in a lot of towns. We need to act relatively quickly to have someone in place by the time Dr. Walsh leaves," Astino said. She said she hopes the committee with support at least a New England-wide search, if not a larger net.

The sub-committee will report back to the full committee begin to vet the different options and report back to the full committee in early September.

"We've got a busy year ahead," Lieb said.

Ever wonder what it is like behind the scenes at the Cohasset Mariner and the Hingham Journal? Our shared office is at 73 South St., in downtown Hingham, in the Hingham Journal Building.

Our building – which we dearly love – was built in 1899 specifically for the Hingham Journal and its presses. At that time the Journal was some 72 years old and the Cohasset Mariner would not debut for another 79 years!

"73 South Street," our blog, will provide anecdotes, tidbits, short news items and more, about what it is like covering local news and about life in the newspaper business today.

Do you remember the "Lou Grant" show? We can assure you that there is never a dull moment at 73 South St. Our staff is never at a loss for words.

We hope you will check out "73 South St." at: http://blogs.wickedlocal.com/73southstreet/

You can also find us at www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset The 73 South St. link is at the far right on the "hot links" bar at the top of our homepage, just under the blue navigation bar.

On the blog this week we have been discussing Cold Corner or Cole Corner in Hingham? Which is it?

Cohasseters may not know that the corner is the one where Main, Central and Cedar streets come together – or, better known as that wicked turn on Main Street (Route 228) where the road makes a sharp 45-degree turn.

A Hingham caller let us know that she had seen "Cold Corner" in the Police Beat and "Cole Corner" in Hingham Yesterdays in the same edition of the Journal. She grew up in Hingham and thinks it is Cole Corner and wondered why the Journal had it two different ways.

In doing a little research we discovered that the Harts' history book on Hingham has it as Cole Corner. But John P. Richardson, Hingham historian, explained to us that as far back as 1870, there was confusion. Mr. Richardson says no one seems to know the spelling or the origin.

He provided a quote from Hingham historian, Solomon Lincoln, from April 1870: "I now intend to visit this evening Mr. and Mrs. Whiton, but I am not sure whether I am going to Coles Corner or Cold Corner."

Hingham police spokesman Lt. Michael Peraino said it is Cold Corner. He said he has heard from a good source that the corner got its name from the cold wind that used to blow down Main Street.

Retired Hingham Fire Chief Richard Wehter also says it is Cold Corner.

Does anyone have the definitive word?

Also, just to get you thinking. It is actually Queen Ann Corner. Numerous references in old Hingham Journal files do not have the "e" or the apostrophe "s."

Another question from a reader: Is it Chief Justice Cushing Highway or Justice Cushing Highway? Cohasset has it one way, Hingham the other.

Here's another for you – is it Surry Drive or Surrey Drive in Cohasset?

Thoughts?

Local meals/lodging taxes, a bad idea

TO THE EDITOR:

The Budget Planning Committee is considering two tax increases on our local businesses and community, a meals tax that will raise the tax on dining out by 11 percent to 7.0 percent, and a lodging tax that will almost double the tax on lodging to an incredible 12.25 percent. These taxes are a bad idea.

Should the person who eats at a locally owned restaurant be penalized because he did not purchase his food at one of our foreign-owned supermarkets? While a $.03 tax on the purchase of an ice cream cone may seem minimal, taxes by nature discourage behavior. When your children's grandparents come to visit, their hotel will be 6 percent more expensive, and while this may not "affect the market at all," it certainly is significant to my friends and family. Our village is a fragile ecosystem that depends on the success of our small businesses, and as a community we should be doing everything we can to encourage that success.

While we are at it, why don't we consider taxing other professions? We seem to have a lot of doctors in town, why not a doctor-visit tax? What doctor hasn't benefited from the resources of our first responders? Or how about the accountants? After all, if it weren't for all of these taxes and regulations, what would they have to do? These taxes are a slippery slope and we must stop them now.

There is no question that we need to get our finances under control. Like many consumers over the past decade, we borrowed too much, built too much, and made too many promises that will be painful to meet. The solution is not to single out specific types of businesses and levy excessive taxes on them. This hurts those businesses and leaves others wondering when the taxman may come for them.

Devoted drivers, support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The desk volunteers at the Road to Recovery (American Cancer Society) who arrange rides for people needing medical treatments, doctor visits, etc., recently held a luncheon for our devoted drivers. The luncheon was held at the Lightkeepers Residence in Cohasset and was enjoyed by all.

We wish to thank the following establishments who made generous donations: Fruit Center, Fresh Market, Roche Bros., Tosca's, Stop & Shop, Shaw's Market and Hannaford's. We appreciate their willingness to cooperate with us in honoring our volunteer drivers from many local communities who accommodate patients from our 13 towns and cities.

Thanks again for your generosity.

Cut spending, don't raise taxes

TO THE EDITOR:

As one traverses the streets of our town these days, an increasing intensity of residential "For Sale" signs suggest our citizens are having severe financial hurdles. One of the significant problems confronting all of us is not only current taxes but the looming specter of gigantic federal impositions come January.

Your consideration of a still further tax on Cohasset citizens for meals, rentals, beach stickers, marriage certificates, liquor, food and dog licenses disturbs me – and I imagine not a few others. Taxes once incurred, even for "temporary" usefulness, tend to become fixed and a part of the scenery.

Seldom do we see in this current economic climate the curtailing of spending. Yet, and notably, the Governor of New Jersey has just closed an $11 billion gap in his budget without raising taxes.

If a state as large as New Jersey can somehow reduce expenditures by $11 billion, quite possibly Cohasset, instead of adding even the suggested modicum of 0.75 percent to our tax burdens, could find a way to reduce our outflow by the Planning Group's own 0.75 percent. A look for instance, at shaving 0.75 percent from departmental budgets – not to include personal wages – might be efficacious. Such a rather revolutionary achievement could well excite the community's morale – an enchanting ambition.

Register to vote for State Primary

The last day to register to vote for the State Primary on Sept. 14 is Wednesday, Aug. 25. Registration will take place at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If people move, they may register to vote as soon as they move into their new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a "closed" period, they will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Gaining balance with guy wires

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Another important design of guy wires is that they are anchored to special supports that lock in place underground.

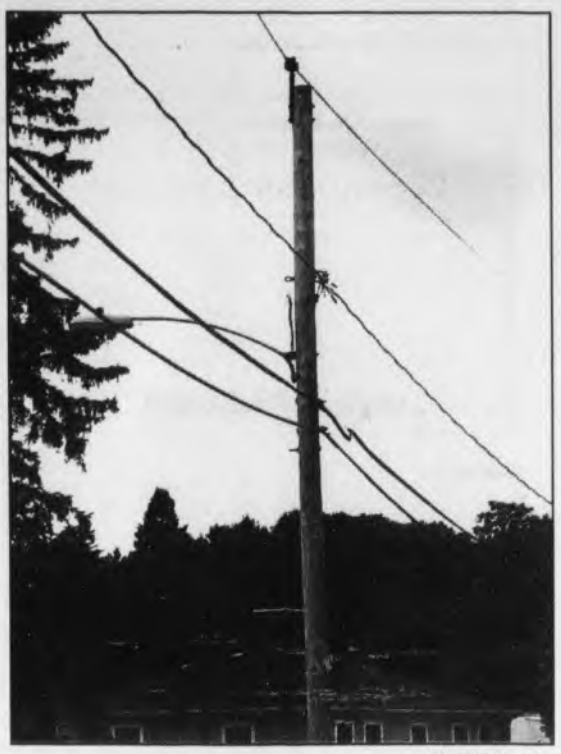
Stuff Happens — As you have probably gathered by now, the Greenbush Guys play a major role, from time to time, in the support of the DPW. This week was one of those times. It seems that the electric utility company, while doing a routine installation of their equipment some time ago, inadvertently damaged some of the Town's drainage infrastructure. The drainage system is at the northern corner of the Cohasset Historical Society property on North Main Street. There is a catch basin in the road, which gathers storm water from the road, and drainpipes send it down into Jacobs Meadow. This drain line has been there for quite a while.

Now, a bit of power company trivia… When power poles are placed, sometimes, guy wires are necessary. The reason can be understood if you take a minute and look at the wires attached to the top of a pole. If the wires attached to the pole create forces that pull on the pole in approximately opposite directions, the forces on the pole are considered balanced. With balanced forces, no guy wires are required.

However, when there are wires attached to the pole at different angles, this can create unbalanced forces, depending on the angles. The net result is that the unbalanced forces will tend to pull the pole off-center. Guy wires can then be installed to counterbalance these unbalanced pull forces. So, guy wires are often a necessary part of the power company infrastructure.

Another important design of guy wires is that they are anchored to special supports that lock in place underground. Their mounting holes are often drilled into the ground by an augur tool. But, the augers can sometimes drill through underground pipes, especially if no one knows that they are there.

At this specific South Main Street location, the power company did add a guy wire to counterbalance the forces of the wires. In fact, if you look carefully at the photo of the "pole with unbalanced pull," this is actually the pole in question and the guy wire can be seen going down to the left on the side of the pole. However, this particular guy wire went through the drainage pipe and punctured it. Of course, that's not a very good thing.



So how did the DPW find the problem? Based on the location of the guy wire, they were suspect that damage might have been done to the drainpipe. Recently, the DPW acquired a video camera with self-contained illumination that can be snaked through pipes and a movie can be made of the inside of the pipe. This has been very helpful in examining the internal condition of pipes with out requiring any excavation. This is a big time-saver and also saves the additional mess of construction. In this particular case we then made some still pictures of selected movie frames so you could see them.

Protect yourself from mosquito bites

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Reduce your risk of being infected by using insect repellent, wearing protective clothing and staying indoors while mosquitoes are most active.

Summer days are times to change your defenses against health threats. We've spoken about sun and its harmful effects. Now let's talk about other summer threats to our healthy lives. One of the most insidious is those from mosquitoes. The CDC lists 10 ailments on their website of mosquito borne illnesses. Incidents of both West Nile Virus and Eastern Equine Encephalitis in Massachusetts serve to warn us about such mosquito-transported diseases. Other mosquito carried diseases are Dengue Fever and malaria.

But in our busy days, we've all had the experience of being out somewhere and hearing or seeing and swatting, a mosquito.

Cohasset is now categorized in the Low Risk Category for WNV and we will remain in the category listing indicating that the risk is remote. According to the DPH, all of the current indications are that the risk for human cases of EEE in some areas of southeastern Massachusetts remains high. Although a widespread, aerial application of pesticides is being done, considerably reducing the threat.

Commissioner Auerbach has scheduled a conference call to brief local health officials on plans for aerial spraying in southeastern Massachusetts as a means of decreasing the population of EEE infected mosquitoes in the region.

Isolated WNV findings in mosquitoes are occurring. Although, generally the risk of human disease is not predicted to be high at this time, standard prevention messages and activities are being implemented.

Reduce your risk of being infected by using insect repellent, wearing protective clothing and staying indoors while mosquitoes are most active. If you think you or a family member may have EEE, it is important to consult your healthcare provider for proper diagnosis.

So far, about 30 cases of EEE occur Nationally with about in 17 Massachusetts cities.

And now let's talk about counting dead birds.

Early in the EEE/WNV eradication effort, following the identification of WNV in birds and mosquitoes in Massachusetts the DPH sought recommendations to strengthen several aspects of the state plan for mosquito-borne virus surveillance and prevention of mosquito-borne disease, including listing dead bird sightings. The program addressed methods of surveillance, risk reduction interventions, pesticide toxicity and communication.

When it was first introduced into the United States, WNV caused high mortality rates in certain species of birds, particularly corvids (birds of the crow family), thus reporting and testing of dead birds was a productive way to detect and monitor WNV activity in an area. In addition, blood samples from animals from other sources such as zoos or horse stables, or wild animals were evaluated.

Later, dead bird sightings became less effective and other methods of making positive findings in mosquitoes (WNV and EEE) in a given town were found; reported and adjacent towns were notified daily. Thus the EEE/WNV surveillance system began.

The level of EEE and WNV activity may occasionally present a potential for increased virus transmission to humans. Typically, risk for any individual is expected to be relatively low, and the routine precautions taken by individuals may be sufficient to reduce opportunities for infection. When such conditions exist, the DPH has a ready-made system in place for reporting such conditions.

MDPH now works collaboratively with other state agencies and regional mosquito control projects to collectively identify and support the use of safe and effective mosquito control measures based on integrated pest management principles.

Three Ds of mosquito protection

The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project – that includes Cohasset — urges people to follow the 3 D's of Protection from Mosquitoes!

Drain: Many mosquito problems in your yard and neighborhood are likely to come from water-filled containers that you, the resident, can help eliminate. All mosquitoes require water in which to breed. Be sure to drain any standing water around your house.

Dress: Wear light colored, loose fitting clothing. Some mosquito species are attracted to dark clothing and some can bite through tight-fitting clothes. When practical, wear long sleeves and pants.

Defend: Choose a mosquito repellant that has been registered by the Environmental Protection Agency. Registered products have been reviewed, approved, and pose minimal risk for human safety. Wash repellant-treated skin after coming indoors.

Visit www.plymouthmosquito.org to find detailed information and links designed to provide you with the best and most current information on repellants. You can also call 781-585-5450.

Apathy can have consequences

AMERICAN THOUGHTS

MARY JANE HANRON

Every election is important. From the local school committee to the President of the United States, all those running for office deserve the attention and interest of constituents.

Though the right to vote is a cherished and sacred one in the United States, there has always been a segment of the population that does not participate in elections of any kind. Countless members of the military have fought and died in battle in order to preserve our liberty and the concept of America. An immeasurable number of people look to our nation longing for such liberty and a system of free enterprise that will allow citizens to thrive and pursue happiness.

It is because of this that readers should be appalled at the data contained in the poll featured on the Cohasset Mariner page of the Wicked Local website. The question appears in other online pages in the Mariner group with similar responses. This poll is not scientific. Nevertheless, it provides a snapshot in time of the attitudes and activities of the electorate.

The recent survey asked the question, "How much are you paying attention to the race in the 10th Congressional District?" The responses are alarming. In Cohasset 44 percent of those who answered the question said they had focused on the race, "Not at all, not much or will do so after the primary." Fifty-three percent indicated that they were paying attention, "A fair amount or a lot." These were the statistics at the time this piece was submitted.

Now the sampling of respondents is relatively small and other demographics are unknown. But the idea that any citizen would be oblivious to any political contest in the times in which we live is disturbing and dangerous.

How can this be? The House of Representatives is where laws are made. To have just anyone in such a position can result in undesirable regulations, fraud or a puppet figure for the Executive Branch of government.

Most disconcerting is that there are those who will pay attention only after the primary has taken place. This stance contributes to the perpetual complaint heard prior to every general election that there is no one for whom to vote, people don't like either candidate and it would be nice to vote for someone rather than choose the lesser of two evils.

There is no doubt that just as it is the right of citizens to vote, it is also the prerogative of anyone not to vote. However, in the times in which we live it is unfathomable to think that anyone could be distant enough from reality to have such an attitude.

Every election is important. From the local school committee to the President of the United States, all those running for office deserve the attention and interest of constituents. Candidates should feel obligated to seek support and ask the electorate for votes. But as citizens of the town, state and nation all those of age have a responsibility to be informed and involved also. In many parts of the world oppressed people yearn for such an opportunity. They see voting as a symbol of freedom and enlightenment and would treasure it if ever fortunate to be presented with such a duty.

The race for the tenth Congressional District seat in the United States House of Representatives is a fascinating and competitive one. Four Republican candidates and two Democrat candidates are competing for the chance to represent their respective parties in the fall election culminating in November. There are distinct choices in both parties and though Republicans agree with each other as do Democrats on many matters, differences exist among those in their respective parties. Topics such as right to life, abolishing the Electoral College, solutions to illegal immigration, tax cuts and the deficit, education and cronyism are all factors discussed when candidates gather. All directly or indirectly affect every citizen of this nation.

As Americans we face unprecedented uncertainty in our future. There have been other times of tribulation in the United States from its very beginnings to today. Presently so much is so worrisome and ominous; it is difficult to proceed through the day without a concern about the state of our nation, our safety and our future.

The midterm elections of 2010 may well be seen by history as a turning point for our country. The United States can continue on the course it currently follows, which is slowly stripping citizens of freedoms, weakening defenses and destroying individual rights and opportunities. It can instead halt many of the sweeping policies implemented in the recent past and propose and activate reasonable alternatives that build upon the American dream for all people rather than smother it.

The choice is clear. The enthusiasm of supporters and dedication of candidates are there. The opportunity exists. The time is now. What is absent is the interest and participation of a portion of the electorate that leaves the decisions to others and forgets the obligation we all hold as Americans to be part of the process. Our nation and our forefathers deserve more. May anyone who feels voting is a waste of time, all politicians are alike and one person cannot cause change reconsider their stance and become interested and engaged in this election and those that hopefully will follow. Now more than ever, it is imperative that this be understood.

Health insurance coverage for autism diagnosis, treatment

YOUR REP
GARRETT BRADLEY

This law mandates coverage for early diagnosis and treatment, which will allow for a better medical result for the child.

Autism is the most common serious medical condition among children, more common than cancer, juvenile diabetes and pediatric AIDS combined. It is so common in fact that one in 110 children are now diagnosed as being on the autistic spectrum. This session, I co-sponsored legislation to require health insurers to cover the diagnosis and treatment of autism. During the last week of the session, it was passed by the House and Senate. The Governor signed the bill into law on August 3rd at Fenway Park surrounded by autistic children and their families. This law is a victory for thousands of families across the state who have struggled with the financial strain associated with providing care for their autistic children. This law mandates coverage for early diagnosis and treatment, which will allow for a better medical result for the child. This will also save the taxpayers millions of dollars over time, as less state sponsored services are needed.

Cost estimates indicate that over the course of a person's life, care related to autism will cost approximately $3.2 million. This cumulative cost has been a financial burden, not just on families, but also on the taxpayers of the Commonwealth. Under this law, more children will receive adequate early treatment and they will enter school better able to learn and grow. This will allow school districts to educate fewer children in "out of district placements" which are far more expensive.

Over the last decade, at least 22 states have enacted some type of autism mandate. Based on data from these states it is estimated that the cost increase will be 83 cents per person per month. Mindful of the cost concerns, the legislation allows for an "opt out" for insurers who show that their costs increased by more than 1 percent. Our data indicates that we will see less than a one-half-a-percent increase.

As I have said before, the government cannot be all things to all people. But on occasion government should support those members of our community who are doing all that they can to support their families on their own. This law helps these families continue to provide proper services for their children. I was proud to have a hand in its passage and watch the Governor sign it.

As always, I appreciate your input on issues that are before the Legislature. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me or visit my website, www.garrettbradley.com. In addition to my State House office, my district office at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham, 88 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., will be staffed every Wednesday and Friday. If you need to set up an appointment or have any questions please call my State House office at 617-722-2520 Monday through Friday, or my district office on Wednesdays and Fridays 781-749-3331.

Perry: A plan to curb illegal immigration

Last week, a federal judge struck down key provisions of an Arizona law aimed at curbing illegal immigration. That decision is the latest example of why we need to take bold action on illegal immigration, and why we need to allow states to act if the federal government fails to do so.

We, as a nation of laws and government, should not adopt policies that encourage illegal immigration. Congress has failed to enact any meaningful legislation, while tens of millions of illegal immigrants remain in the United States. Because immigration is indeed a complex problem, we need a comprehensive plan.

I oppose amnesty. Instead, I am proposing four basic policies our nation could enact to achieve real illegal immigration reform: erecting a physical border fence, preventing illegal immigrants from accessing public benefits, penalizing employers who hire illegal immigrants, and swiftly deporting illegal immigrants who commit a crime.

Together, these policies would address the pressing need to improve the security of our borders and would help encourage those who wish to become citizens of our country to do so legally.

Jeff Perry is a Republican candidate for Congress in the 10th Congressional District.

Juniors should have their own tee box

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

True story.

I was trying to sneak in a quick nine holes before work at South Shore Country Club in Hingham at daybreak a week ago.

A women pulls up next to me; the mother pours four youngsters out of her van, each no taller than a 2-iron. They all have full bags of clubs that weigh more than they do. They lug their clubs, first to the pro shop and after she pays their green fees, she abandons them, gets it her van and drives off.

The youngsters go down to the first hole and tee off.

Myself, I know better. I go to the 10th hole and play the back nine. But I stop for a moment and watch the four kiddos.

One hits it in the water; another pushes his tee shot into the trees that line the ninth hole. One kid hits it over the water, but doesn't make the fairway and the fourth boy pops it up.

About a dozen shots later, they aren't half way to this docile par-4 hole.

It's going to be a long day and you can bet these kids will be bored to death with the game because this struggle which should take them about five hours and hold up everybody else playing golf on this sunny summer morning.

Certainly, the kids will be uncomfortable.

What's wrong with this picture?

Everything.

First, kids belong on a golf course. They are the future of the game. But you don't put a 16-year-old behind the wheel of a 'Vette for the first time and point him to the Southeast Expressway at rush hour? The same is true with golf.

Second, if a public course is going to let pre-teenagers out on their golf course, they have to set up the course so they can play a rewarding round.

What that means is put special kids' tees out on each hole, about 200 to 100 yards away from each green.

You don't let 10-year-old Little Leaguers play on a 90-foot baseball diamond.

They have their own fields. It should be the same for kids. Give them their own set of tees further up on the fairway. When they learn how to play, sure, then move them back.

Third, why do they need a full set of clubs? Get them a driver (better yet, a 3-wood instead a driver), a fairway wood (a 5-wood or a 7-wood, but not both), and the only irons they need are a wedge, a 9-iron, a 7-iron, a 5-iron and a putter. That is only seven clubs. They don't need more.

The whole scene just wasn't right.

Shame on the mother. She should not have sent them to a course of that caliber. She should have taken them to a place like Rockland Golf Course, which is one of the top junior courses in the nation and has a teaching program that is second to none.

C'mon now, if you are going to bring youngsters into the game, do it right.

For girls only

Speaking of junior golf, the wonderful Sarah Whitney, who was one of the top juniors to come out of the South Shore and now a starter for The College of William and Mary, began giving back to the game that means so much to her by initiating a South Shore Girls Invitational Tournament.

With the support of the Hingham Sports Partnership, which has generously donated to the event every year, it has become one of the most successful tournaments in the regional.

It will be played this year on Aug. 19 at South Shore Country Club.

"I hope to get a lot of girls to compete in the event," said Whitney. "It's a great opportunity to get girls involved in the game of golf and this tournament has become one of the largest girls golf tournaments on the South Shore."

There is an 18-hole division for seniors from ages 14 to 18; and a junior division for girls 11 to 13. They will play nine holes. And there is even a 9-hole tournament for girls 10 and under. It's called the cricket division.

The senior division tees it up at 8 a.m. and the junior and cricket division tee times begin at 9 a.m.

Entry fee is $40 for the senior division and $25 for the junior and cricket division.

For more information, call South Shore Country Club.

We have a winner!

Congratulations to Mary Mulcahy who won the Women's Club Championship at Hatherly Country Club in North Scituate over the weekend. Mulcahy's 36-hole aggregated was 153.

It's been a good year for the Scituate High junior-to-be. She won the State High School girls' championship last spring at the Woodland Golf Club in Newton and she also walked away with that title by five strokes.

The women at Hatherly shouldn't be upset losing to a young girl. This fall she'll tee it up with the boys' team at the high school because there is no girls' golf team at the school.

Maura Brown captured the Senior Division title with a 168 over two rounds. Sue Beldotti was the Senior-Senior Division winner with a 221 and Lee Slattery was the Centennial Gordon Cup champion with a 144 net.

KNOW THE PRO

Greg Dennehy

Back Nine Golf Club

What's in your bag?

I don't play much golf these days because of arthritis, but my favorite set was a persimmon MacGregor woods and Hogan iron, 2 through sand wedge. I used a Titleist balata ball.

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights):

I shot 64 twice when I was an amateur at Plymouth Country Club, which was my home course. It was the course record for many years until James Driscoll shot 63 in the Hornblower Memorial to set a new course record.

If you could have a dream foursome, who would be in it?

When I was the head pro at Poquoy Brook in the early 1960s, I played a lot with Ted Williams, who had a summer baseball camp in town. He always wanted to hit in further than me and got so made because he couldn't. Dom DiMaggio was just beginning to play then and it was a lot of fun and Charlie Manuel, who is a manager, will play with us.

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you where, and how the game attracted you):

My uncle, Ray Dennehy, was a long time head professional at The Kittansett Club in Marion. When I was 12 in 1952, told me to go to Plymouth Country Club and caddie. I'd get $1.25 for nine holes and $2.15 for 18 holes.

What is your favorite golf course (and why?) Besides your current club:

My favorite golf course was my first, Plymouth Country Club. It's such a great test of golf. There are no weak holes. You have to use every club in the bag and have to strike the ball well. I think my favorite holes there are 11 and 12. They are two tough back-to-back par-4s.

What's the best golf tip you ever received?

To have a good grip. My uncle Ray taught me that. When first starting playing I had a strong right hand grip, a hooker's grip and my uncle made me change. He'd watch me on the range and if I changed it, he'd whack me on my hand with his club.

What makes your home golf course so special?

Back Nine has made great strides in the last three years. It's a great test of golf from the blue tees and the greens are some of the nicest you will play anywhere in the region.

Golf can be a lot of fun at D.W. Field

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

When you think of Brockton, you think of trouble.

I lived there for a quarter century and there are sections you simply avoid.

Course of the Week

Drugs, murder, prostitution, it's a shame.

However, there are some nice areas in what was once a thriving shoe manufacturing city that are overlooked.

And one of them is D.W. Field Golf Course.

It is one of the finest inner-city municipality-owned courses you will find.

It was built in the 1920s by the underrated golf architect design team of Wayne Stiles and John van Kleek.

As the story goes, they were building the prestigious Thorny Lea Golf Club a few miles away and since they were in the area, they built this course, thanks to the magnificence of David Waldo Field, who donated more than 700 acres for a golf course and adjoining recreational area to the city.

They called it the Crown Jewel of Brockton and the golf course has withstood the test of time.

And when you are out on the back holes, you might think you are in Wellesley or Weston. You might see a deer prance across a fairway or a herd of wild turkeys waddling away into the brush.

There are so many great holes here, but there are some that even a beginner can par. It is a good mixture for a municipal course.

Every hole shouldn't demand drives the length of John Daly off the tee and irons the precision of a Tiger Woods, or the short game of Phil Mickelson to par.

Average Public Golfers call it a great round if they can finish the round without losing a ball and make a few pars. Any birdie demands a celebration.

It is a place where a golfer trying to break 100 will be tested and a golfer who can break 80 has a chance to shoot par.

Don't get me wrong, there are a few demanding holes at D.W. Field that will challenge the best.

For instance, the 13th hole belongs on any championship course.

It is only 355 yards from the back tees and all uphill. Trees guard the left and right side of the fairway and if your drive favors the right side, the pitch of the fairway could direct a good shot into the tree line.

The green is fronted by a huge drop off. Approach shots that come up short will carry away from the green into a terrible lie. If it is to the right, there is a giant old tree just waiting to aggravate you.

And if you hit the green with your approach shot, your work is just beginning.

It has two tiers and it has caused plenty of tears for golfers who had dreams of birdies only to walk off with a three-putt bogey or worse.

Another favorite is the par-3 fifth hole. Only because if you hit it too far, you could wind up on Oak Street, a busy thoroughfare.

However most of the par-4s are in the 300-350 range, accommodating for the average golfer.

In all, the course measures just under 6,000 yards from the tips and plays to a par 70. The slope is a manageable 120 and the course rating is 68.4.

It is also a place that won't set back a mortgage payment for a greens fee and a cart, either.

What it is, is a lot of fun for a few hours.

What else do you want from a golf course?

A look at fifth green, one of the toughest par - 3's in the region.

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

Cleaning up after your dog

While a single dog may not be the source of significant pollutant, the combined impact of many dogs can be considerable and contribute to poor water quality and human health problems.

Man's "best friend" resides in many of Cohasset's 2,600 households – 700 dogs are licensed by Town Hall. As we coexist with our four-legged friends, it is incumbent upon residents to act responsibly and pick up after their dogs.

Pet waste is repulsive and can cause health risks in humans when left on beaches; it contains bacteria and parasites which can cause human gastro-intestinal infections, particularly those resulting in fever, cramping, fatigue, headache, vomiting, diarrhea, and weight loss. Of specific concern to beachgoers is a parasitic infection, Toxocriasis, which can cause rash, fever, and coughing in children exposed to this parasite in sand.

While a single dog may not be the source of significant pollutant, the combined impact of many dogs can be considerable and contribute to poor water quality and human health problems. Rain events can potentiate the pollutant problem as waste left untreated on the ground passes through storm sewers or washes directly into the ocean. Animal waste that finds its final resting place in water decomposes, using up oxygen. During summer months, low dissolved oxygen levels can harm fish and other aquatic life. Bacteria in pet waste can be a cause of water test results that require closure of beaches and shellfish beds.

No one wants to step in dog waste and neither do we want our children to play in it. Cohasset has a "pooper scooper" regulation that requires pet owners to clean up after their pets and dispose of waste in an appropriate manner or risk a fine should the regulation be violated. Following are helpful suggestions that will assist pet owners in protecting the environment: (1) always carry plastic bags to pick up pet waste ("poop bags" are available on posts at the beach entrances from the parking lot) and other Town venues, (2) dispose of sealed bagged pet waste in a trash can, (3) obey absolute seasonal bans at Sandy Beach – dogs are not permitted on the beach from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. from Memorial Day to Labor Day.

Responsible pet owners can have a positive impact upon the environment and keep Sandy Beach safe and healthy for beachgoers. Together town residents can achieve this goal.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 16, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A previous misunderstanding continues to taint the atmosphere to some extent in the early part of the week. But cooler heads prevail, and the situation eases by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) While the artistic aspect of the Divine Bovine is well-served this week, that practical side is also getting the sort of recognition that could lead to a new and well-deserved opportunity.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) With home-related matters taking on more importance this week, now could be the time to make some long-deferred purchases. But shop carefully for the best quality at the best price.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations. While that family problem might still rankle, it should be easing thanks to your efforts to calm the waters. Also, a workplace situation seems to be moving in your favor.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat's energy levels should be rather high these days, and you might do well to tackle any tasks that still need doing. This will clear the way for those upcoming projects.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone's criticism might not be as negative as you perceive. Actually, it could be helpful. Discuss the matter with your critic, and you both could learn something valuable.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business matter could cause some friction among your colleagues. But once again, that logical mind of yours comes to the rescue. And the sooner it does, the better!

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) There might still be some heated temper flare-ups out there. But your sensible self should advise you to stay out of these situations until things cool down and calm is restored.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Changing your mind could be the right thing to do if you can't resolve your doubts. You might want to discuss the matter with someone whose advice you trust.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Sea Goat's merrier side dominates this week, and this means that, despite your usual busy schedule, you'll be able to squeeze in parties and all sorts of fabulous fun times.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An educational opportunity could lead to something other than what you had planned. But keep an open mind, and before you decide to turn it down, check it out.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The Piscean wit and wisdom helps you work through a situation that might have been accidentally or even deliberately obscured. What you unravel could prove to be very revealing.

(c) 2010 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Loyalty is important to you. You demand it, but you also give it generously and lovingly.

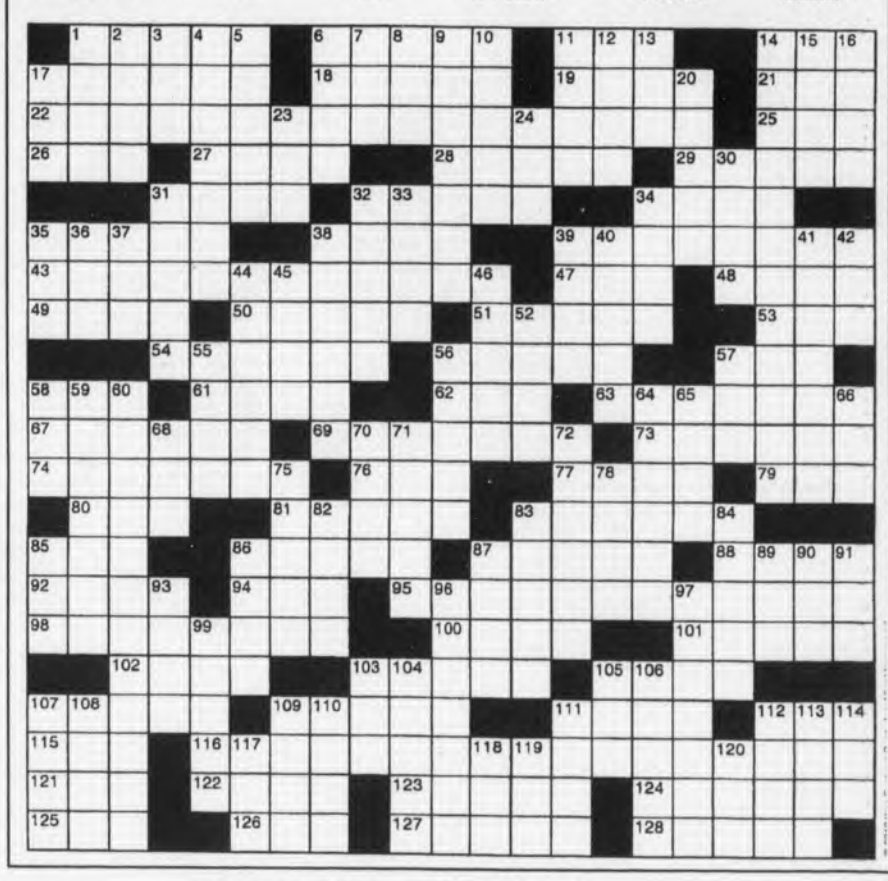
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Hoo Boy



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Mad Max sure to produce some fun

The Company Theatre presents 'The Mel Brooks Musical The Producers'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

From left, Dave Daly of Hingham as Max Bialystock, John King of Weymouth as Roger DeBris and Steve Shannon of Brockton as Leo Bloom perform in "The Producers" at The Company Theatre.

They sometimes come a little earlier than their nickname implies, but most Broadway musicals still have the "eleven o'clock number" – think "Rose's Turn" in "Gypsy," "What I Did for Love" from "A Chorus Line," or "Memory," which won Broadway's original Grizabella, Betty Buckley, her Tony in "Cats." Coming near the end of the second act, the numbers usually signal a turning point for the central character. In "The Mel Brooks' Musical The Producers," currently on-stage at The Company Theatre, "Betrayed" is both epiphany and comic tour de force for shady Broadway producer Max Bialystock, being played in Norwell by Dave Daly.

"It's a mad scene for Max which is rare for musical theater. It's great fun for me, and I hope it is for the audience, too. There is so much movement, because you're physically switching from one character to another, that you have to really make sure you bring the voice along with you," explained Daly last week by telephone of his character's prison cell recounting of the entire show, including intermission. "It's mentally and physically challenging, and wonderful, all at the same time."

The same might be said of the musical, based on the 1968 film which starred Zero Mostel as Bialystock and Gene Wilder as nebbish accountant Leo Bloom, and earned Mel Brooks the Academy Award for Best Screenplay. The Broadway production, with Nathan Lane and Matthew Broderick, won a record-breaking 12 Tony awards in 2001 and was made into a 2005 feature film. The story of two producers who develop a scheme to oversell interest in what they're sure will be a Broadway flop, the musical is vintage Mel Brooks complete with inside jokes about show business and humorous riffs on everything from homosexuals ("Keep It Gay") to Nazis ("Der Guten Tag Hop-Clop" and "Springtime for Hitler").

"It's Mel Brooks, so it is definitely a fun, outlandish world. Some of it might be offensive, if it weren't all being done with a sly wink to the audience. It's a story about show business and it is written with a heightened vaudevillian sensibility, because Brooks' comedy writing was so influenced by that era."

Given that the musical is set in 1959, Brooks might very well have created Bialystock as an amalgam of the people he met early in his career.

"Max is a scoundrel for sure, but he's also someone who's had a hard life. He's cheated and clawed his way to everything he has ever gotten in life. What he finds along the way, however, is something with Leo that he's probably never had before—which is a real friendship. Their relationship, indeed the affection they have for one another, is so important to this show because it allows the audience to care about these characters. They're not just schemers, but they also have real humanity."

Daly, a legislative staff analyst at the Massachusetts State House since 1997, moved from Methuen to Hingham four years ago with his wife, Sara, who is a teacher and librarian at Hingham's South Elementary School. The couple – who have a 2-year-old daughter, Annie, and a 7-month-old son, Liam – are both part-time actors. Sara was seen most recently in Bay Players' June production of "Our Town" at the Zone Theatre in Marshfield. With two young children, however, the pair won't be sharing a stage anytime soon.

"It is fun to do theater on the side, especially when the material is this good. I view this show as a ride I am taking alongside a whole ensemble of wacky characters. Steve Shannon from Brockton is excellent as Leo, and John King of Weymouth does a great Judy Garland-esque number as flamboyant director Roger DeBris. And we have a terrific Ula, too, in Adrienne Paquin from Hull. Steve and I are lucky enough to get to sit back and watch while Adrienne does 'If You Got It, Flaunt It,' which is a very funny number. This whole experience is about just jumping on and going. You have no time for mental preparation, you just have enough time for costume changes, before you're on to the next thing."

Once he hangs up his "Producers" hat, Daly will be back on diaper duty.

"After this, it will be my wife's turn again. And I'll be very happy to stay home and babysit."

"The Mel Brooks Musical The Producers" will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, through Aug. 22. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 718-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

Water tank access questions not easy

Selectmen want more options explored for Bear Hill

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"It looks like there are other alternatives and I haven't heard the argument that it can't be done another way."
— Selectman Ted Carr

It's back to the drawing board for the Water Commission and its plans to access the Bear Hill water tank.

A packed room of residents of the Bear Hill area aired their concerns over safety — and came with an idea of their own.

At Monday night's Selectmen meeting, the Water Commission was seeking permission to use a town-owned piece of property off of Reservoir Road as the new access point for the water tank.

The impetus for the request is two wireless companies are interested in putting antennas on the water tank. One contract is signed with AT&T and another contract with Verizon is in negotiation. However, the construction vehicles for the project may not be able to negotiate the current access road off Pleasant Street.

Through the course of the almost two-hour discussion it seemed there were more questions than answers and at the end of the night the Selectmen felt all the options for access had yet to be vetted.

"It looks like there are other alternatives and I haven't heard the argument that it can't be done another way," Selectmen vice chair Ted Carr said.

The sharp turn at the top of a hill on Reservoir Road is where the Water Commission proposed to move the access road. The neighbors all raised concerns of safety, especially for the children from kindergarten age on up use the area constantly.

"There are tons of kids all year long, all day long that use that (path)," said Elsa Miller of 60 Reservoir Road, the residence directly across the proposed access road. The area of the proposed access road is used as a cut through path for kids to walk to Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

A resident, Tom Toomey of 161 Pond St., brought forth what he believed could be a viable access alternative. He proposed creating an access way from the left hand side of the Middle High School (where the middle school is located), up behind the back practice field and to the tank.

"If the access is on Reservoir Road a kid is going to get hurt," Toomey said, adding his proposal was safer for the kids.

Immediately Water Commission chair Chris Seebeck brought up the steep grade in that area — a grade that could present a construction obstacle. Seebeck also questioned the safety of having large construction vehicles going in and out of the school parking lot.

Treat's Pond project rejected

Selectmen don't support Army Corps saltmarsh restoration

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Treat's Pond Army Corps of Engineers project proposal has reached the end of its life. A majority of the Selectmen voted to reject the saltmarsh restoration proposal on Monday night.

The vote is the conclusion of a more than three-year discussion where hours of conversation have transpired. The controversial project would have created a connection between the Atlantic Avenue pond and Cohasset Harbor, with the goal to create a healthy saltmarsh.

Although the 4-to-1 vote rejected the Army Corps project, residents on both sides of the issue agree there are still unresolved flooding and stormwater issues in the area.

The Army Corps of Engineer's aquatic habitat restoration project at Treat's Pond has been on the Selectmen's plate since it was presented to the board and a crowded room in June 2007. The project, since its start, has been intertwined with the flooding issues of the area, but resolving the recurring flood issues was not the stated primary objective of the project.

The Selectmen were at a crossroads for the project as the Army Corps had set a Sept. 1 deadline for an answer of support. The project would still have had to get an affirmative vote and an appropriation from Town Meeting.

At the meeting, the proponents of the project, primarily Atlantic Avenue residents, requested the project proposal be placed before Town Meeting.

"It's been a long arduous process and I hope something could be done," said Amory Houghton, 91 Atlantic Ave., the residence hardest hit by the flooding.

Summer studies

Students get hands-on science at CSCR

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If you see groups of teenagers lingering around coastal waters or wetlands this summer don't be alarmed. They are up to some good.

The teenagers are part of the Cohasset Center of Student Coastal Research (CSCR), a non-profit education group based on Cohasset Harbor that is studying the local waterways. More than 10 different projects are being researched this summer with dozens of kids involved.

There are kids helping the Board of Health test the water to ensure it is safe for swimming. Some are looking at the flow into and out of the harbor. Some are digging deep into saltmarsh mud to identify what's living in there. Some are doing regular monitoring and sampling of the inner Little Harbor and Jacob's Meadow.

At about 9a.m. on Tuesday morning, teenagers sauntered into and out of the CSCR building at the end of Parker Avenue, looking to meet up with their group and head out into the field. Several groups were scheduled to meet and pay site visits.

The Mariner joined a group heading out to Jacob's Meadow, the saltmarsh behind the American Legion Hall that is fed by Cohasset Harbor through tide gates.

CSCR has been charged, through a grant given by the state's Coastal Zone Management (CZM), to monitor Jacob's Meadow (and Little Harbor).

The project, dubbed the Jacob's Meadow Wetlands Monitoring Project, is in its third year. The group started its monitoring right after school ended to collect data and the information gathered will help to determine just how healthy the meadow is based on the types of vegetation, diversity of aquatic life and salinity levels. Having yearly data could also alert officials to any changes, negative or positive happenings in the marsh.

For the past three summers Joy Higgins, a science teacher, has led students in this project. In the past three years she has noticed visible changes in Jacob's Meadow, such as the creeks widening.

"The freshwater is starting to breakdown the marsh," Higgins said.

On Tuesday, the group, there are four to-be-freshman students, heads out with fish traps and equipment to check salinity.

They start at the "reference site," which is located in the water off the Cohasset Harbor Inn where the Jacob's Meadow tide gates empty into the harbor. A trap is thrown from the seawall and left to be picked up and analyzed tomorrow.

This summer, Higgins said, they have been catching a lot of eels. Last year,

Home Instead SENIOR CARE

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

NOTHING LIKE A GOOD MEAL

Good eating habits and proper nutrition are key ingredients for healthy aging. Healthy eating at any age raises energy levels, boosts the immune system, and protects the body against illnesses such as hypertension (high blood pressure), diabetes, and osteoporosis. A healthy diet for seniors will provide high levels of nutrition and an appropriate number of calories in small quantities of food that can be easily digested. A home health care worker can integrate and oversee the dietary requirements of those confined at home. People of an advanced stage of illness require special nutritional attention, and many seniors are at risk of malnutrition. Key factors contributing to seniors' poor nutritional health include illness, loneliness, decreased mobility, and depression.

Clearly a good diet is vital to seniors' continued health and happiness. But it's hard enough to make sure you put a balanced diet on your own table, much less your parent's. Let us help. Our compassionate and caring aides can not only take care of the meal planning – with special attention to your parent's particular tastes and needs – but we can also help with shopping, cooking, and even feeding, if necessary. In addition, we can take other everyday tasks off your shoulders, including bathing, grooming, dressing and medication reminders. Community meeting on Turkey Hill turbine

The Trustees of Reservations will hold a public meeting regarding their proposal to construct a wind turbine on Turkey Hill in Cohasset. The Trustees are exploring the feasibility of placing a 1.8 MW turbine on their property in Cohasset, near the Hingham town line.

The meeting will be held in the Town Hall Auditorium at 41 Highland Ave. at 7pm on Thursday, Aug. 19th. This is the first in a series of meetings The Trustees intend to provide information on their project and answer questions from the community about the goals of the project and the specifics of the proposal.

The Trustees intend to provide information on their project and answer questions from the community about the goals of the project and the specifics of the proposal.

According to Stephen Sloan, the Greater Boston Regional Director for The Trustees, "One of the reasons we like the proposed site is that it is very remote. Nonetheless, we recognize that this project may be of interest to residents who live nearest to the proposed site and want to ensure that we provide an opportunity for people to ask questions at this early stage in the project development."

This proposal is one measure in a broad set of changes The Trustees are undertaking in order to reduce their carbon footprint and encourage others to do the same. Some of the other key strategies The Trustees are adopting include conducting energy audits of its buildings, weatherizing structures, switching to cleaner burning fuels, installing solar hot water and photovoltaic arrays, reducing travel through the use of video conferencing, reducing the acreage of lawns it mows, and installing rain barrels and underground cisterns for water re-use.

The Trustees are welcoming residents of both Hingham and Cohasset, who might be interested in learning more about the project to attend the meeting. The project will be permitted in Cohasset, since this is where the turbine would be located.

Danniel Mendelsohn of Applied Science Associates, a consultant who is working on the project's feasibility study will present some of the early findings, including the result of noise studies, renderings of the turbine from several perspectives, and environmental impacts associated with the Turkey Hill site.

Three Ds of mosquito protection

The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project – that includes Cohasset — urges people to follow the 3 D's of Protection from Mosquitoes!

Drain: Many mosquito problems in your yard and neighborhood are likely to come from water-filled containers that you, the resident, can help eliminate. All mosquitoes require water in which to breed. Be sure to drain any standing water around your house.

Dress: Wear light colored, loose fitting clothing. Some mosquito species are attracted to dark clothing and some can bite through tight-fitting clothes. When practical, wear long sleeves and pants.

Defend: Choose a mosquito repellant that has been registered by the Environmental Protection Agency. Registered products have been reviewed, approved, and pose minimal risk for human safety. Wash repellant-treated skin after coming indoors.

Visit www.plymouthmosquito.org to find detailed information and links designed to provide you with the best and most current information on repellants. You can also call 781-585-5450.

Police Beat

Underage party host charged under Social Host Law

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 19-year-old Cohasset woman is facing the charge of providing alcohol to someone under-aged after police responded to a complaint about a loud house party at 1:27 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 2) on Gammons Road.

Upon arrival, police said about six-to-eight boys ran away.

Being summonsed to court are two 19-year-old females (the party host and a guest). The party host is also being charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and disturbing the peace. A 19-year-old guest, also of Cohasset, is being charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Police said a neighbor called about the party. The host's parents were away but the father was contacted and came home from the North Shore to get things in order. Police said he was not aware of the party.

Police observed a beer "pong" table set up (for drinking games) and said red Solo cups with alcohol were strewn about the property.

Email

A concerned resident, who reported receiving a strange foreign email last week, was concerned it was a scam. Police agreed and told the walk-in to delete the email. Police stress that no one should respond to an email by providing his or her date of birth or Social Security number.

Welfare check

An elderly woman seen walking along Beechwood Street at 6:10 a.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 3) was transported to the hospital to be checked out. Police said she was not dressed appropriately for the conditions (she was wearing a coat) and was confused. She is not from Cohasset and provided an address in Cambridge. A concerned caller notified police about the woman reporting that she looked dazed and was crossing back and forth across the road.

Child support

Cohasset police assisted deputies from the Plymouth Family and Probate Court last Wednesday (Aug. 4) with the arrest of a 49-year-old Cohasset man for non-payment of child support. He was arrested without incident, police said.

Dog jumped out

An officer assisted a 49-year-old Cohasset woman in a 2007 Honda Pilot get her dog back into the vehicle after it jumped out the back window oat 7:47 a.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 4) on Cedar Street.

MV mishap

A 54-year-old Scituate woman operating a 2003 Dodge Caravan became distracted briefly when she was pulling out and hit a 2005 Ford truck operated by a 53-year-old Scituate man parked at the Gulf Station at Route 3A and Beechwood Street.

Neither vehicle was towed and there were no injuries, police said.

Coca-Cola spill

Police and a State Trooper, who was in the vicinity, helped a motorist clean up about four cases of Coca-Cola that fell out of her car when the hatchback opened, police said. The mishap occurred at 2:17 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 4) at the intersection of Route 3A and Pond Street. MassHighway picked up the damaged cans. The cleanup took about 15 minutes.

Baby raccoon

A Jerusalem Road resident called police at 8:15 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 5) about "some kind of animal" in the trash can in her garage. Police arrived and released the baby raccoon that had become trapped inside the barrel.

Larceny of money

At 1:57 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 7), a 49-year-old Forest Avenue woman reported she returned from a week's vacation with her family to discover that $7,000 was missing from a shoebox in her home. Police said there were no signs of forced entry. The matter is under investigation.

Missing change

At 6:49 a.m. on Friday (Aug. 6), a Hull Street resident reported that someone had stolen a bunch of change, believed to be about $10, from inside her house. Police said there was no forced entry and there are no suspects at this time.

Traffic summonses

• At 4:46 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 6) police stopped at 45-year-old Marshfield man in a blue Ford pickup for running the red light at Route 3A and Beechwood Street. A registry check revealed the man's license had expired on his birthday in July. He is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and failure to stop at a stoplight. His pickup was towed.

• At 1:55 a.m. on Saturday (Aug. 7), police stopped a 22-year-old Cohasset man, operating a 1998 Toyota sedan, after observing him cross over the double yellow line as he turned onto Summer Street from South Main Street, police said. A computer check showed his license had been suspended for failure to pay motor vehicle citations. He is being summonsed on the charges of operating after license suspension and failure to drive in marked lanes. His car was towed.

• At 9:46 a.m. on Saturday (Aug. 7), a 59-year-old Cohasset man in a 1993 Jeep Grand Cherokee drove by an officer at Route 3A and Beechwood. The officer recognized the driver and knew his license was suspended. He was pulled over near Shaw's and is being summonsed for operating after license suspension and operating with a suspended registration. His Jeep was towed.

Racial slurs

A newspaper deliveryman reported to police at 3:11 a.m. on Saturday (Aug. 7) that a group of boys yelled racial slurs and were telling him to die in the Norman Todd Road and Beechwood Street area while he was making deliveries. Police were unable to locate the teens but stayed with the newspaperman while he finished that section of his route.

Dog sprayed

A walk-in to the police station dropped off a dog that had been sprayed by a skunk at 3:29 a.m. on Saturday (Aug. 7). The dog had been found walking around, police said. The dog was released from the station due to public health concerns. Police stress that people should not bring dogs to the station, as there is no facility there for the animals. In this case, matters were made worse by the dog's odor. Rather than bring a dog to the station, a good Samaritan should just call the police and let them know a dog is on the loose.

The animal control officer checked on this particular dog later and it had made its way back to its North Main Street home, police said.

Harassing calls

A clerk at Tedeschi's reported receiving harassing phone calls to an officer on foot patrol in the village at 5:24 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 7). The number was on caller ID and police went to the residence where they determined, with the help of the boy's mother, that a 15-year-old was responsible. The boy was not home but the mother brought him to the station the next morning where police talked to him and told him to "knock it off," police said.

Fight

A 58-year-old Cohasset man was arrested and charged with assault and battery following a fight with his brother on Saturday (Aug. 7). Police responded after a caller reported a fight in progress at 9:42 p.m.

Overheated

A 9-1-1 caller reported a dog at Wadleigh Park appeared to have been hit by a car because it was immobile and vomiting. The call came in at 2:54 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 8). As it turned out the owners from Hull were out looking for their dog that was overheated. They planned to take it to the veterinarian, police said.

Selectmen want more options explored for Bear Hill

"I'm not convinced that would be a safer access point," Seebeck said.

The use of the access road was described in detail. The cell antenna construction would take about eight weeks per carrier. Once the antennas and other equipment is in place visits to the site would dwindle to once a month for each wireless carrier. The water department would still need to make its daily trips to the water tank. A propane truck would have to make deliveries (a generator runs on propane) occasionally.

The Bear Hill neighbors kept coming back to safety, something they said was hard to come by at that point on Reservoir Road.

"There isn't any way you can ever ensure safety (with the access road off Reservoir Road)," said Keith Conforti of 88 Pleasant St., who supported the access behind the middle high school.

If an access road were to be built behind the middle high school the School Committee would need to sign off on it.

This isn't the first time the Water Commission has sought a change in the access road. In 2008, they sought to abandon the long-held easement on the 100 Pleasant Lane property. The Town Meeting article was withdrawn after neighbors opposed. Last fall, the Water Commission came before the Selectmen to discuss moving the access point off Pleasant Street, where new homes were being constructed, to Reservoir Road.

In between the two discussions the Pleasant Lane easement was altered. It was moved within the property at 100 Pleasant St. and decreased in size from 30 feet to 12 feet. The easement is about 10 feet from one of the newly constructed houses.

COURTESY PHOTO

This illustration provided by AT&T in their application shows the potential look of the water tank with the cell antennas. The question of how to access the Bear Hill water tank with the construction vehicles necessary for installation remains unanswered.

The proximity to the house and a subsequent 90-degree angle turn in the new easement caused the AT&T contractor to question whether the large construction trucks could make it to the tank.

A representative from AT&T at the meeting Monday night said he was not sure if the project, physically, could be done with the existing easement.

However, regardless of the cell antenna project, the water department likely needs another access point because of large trucks needed to clean the tank and other once in a decade maintenance issues.

Some residents questioned the process and the legality.

Mike Ronzoni of 50 Reservoir Road was concerned that the Water Commission was able to bind the town to a contract with the cell companies that had nothing to do with the delivery of water. Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said she shared in that concern, and was confirming the water commission has the appropriate authority.

Quigley also questioned whether the easement was lessened to such a degree as to inhibit its use.

Later in the meeting, Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt said another alternative could be to bring the access road across town-owned land around the back of Milliken Field.

"We need a well thought out series of alternatives and an articulated plan," Carr said. The Water Commission will investigate the route behind the high school back playing field and the route next to Milliken Field in the coming weeks.

Quigley said a public forum might be necessary down the line to ensure all potentially impacted residents are included in the process.

The issue will be revisited sometime in September.

"The issue is that this project is desirable for the town, neighborhood and community as a whole. But, its impact on the neighborhood and easement makes it problematic," said Quigley.

Timeline

- July 2008: Request for Proposals (RFP) is issued seeking wireless carries interested in placing cell antennas on the Bear Hill water tank.
- Nov. 2008: The Water Commission withdraws its Town Meeting article that requested an abandonment of the easement at 100 Pleasant St. where the water department has historically accessed the water tank.
- May 2009: An easement relocation plan comes before the Water Commission for 100 Pleasant St.
- July 2009: The Water Commission signs an easement agreement that moves and reduces the 100 Pleasant St. easement from 30 feet to 12 feet.
- Sept. 2009: The Water Commission seeks permission from the Board of Selectmen to move the easement from Pleasant Street to a town-owned swath of land off Reservoir Road. Concerns, especially of safety, from neighbors convince the Selectmen the proposal needs further vetting.
- Dec. 2009: The Water Commission inks contract with AT&T.
- June 2010: The moved easement at 100 Pleasant St. is recorded at the Registry of Deeds.

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

POSITIVE START

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone this week? I am hoping that the lack of news is due to the wonderful summer days that everyone is enjoying and that in the next few weeks, some of the adventures, photos and stories of Summer will come this way so we can share with the community. Send it all in to me, along with your celebration and event news as well and we can put it in print.

One of the items that I wanted to include this week is to make sure to get ready for back-to-school in a positive and as-little-stress-as possible manner. Many parents have already been talking about teacher selection and notification, why it has not arrived, etc. for the elementary schools and a lot of time, this stress and frustration spreads to our children. The positive side to this wait is probably a number of reasons and the educators and staff members work hard to create classes and teachers to best suit the needs of the students. I know, being a parent of three myself, how easy it was when my kids were in elementary school to think I knew which teacher my child would get, the disappointment on both mine and my child's face when the initial news came that it was not that teacher, etc.

I learned however that no matter the choice, our children do fine. When a bit of fine-tuning is done or concerns are addressed, no matter the reason, the teachers are so wonderful in discussing these with the parents. Sometimes in life, we don't always get what we think we "need" or "have to have" however, the reason that this happens a lot of times ends up being for the best. Celebrate the news of teacher choice with your children, support the schools in the choices they have made and throughout the year, be the best advocate you can for your child when needed.

Enjoy the rest of the summer with lots of time spent creating memories for all and school will be here before we know it and a positive start to that year is the best gift we can give to our children.

Diamond ring travels from Cohasset to Hollywood

Bachelorette has 'King's connection'

By Mary Jane Hanron
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Pappas may have been unlucky in love during her two on-air romances followed closely by millions. But now she believes the third time is the charm and has found the person with the key to her heart.

A very special gift created at King Jewelers, right here in Cohasset has journeyed 3,000 miles across the United States and arrived in its new home, Hollywood, California. King's, played a significant role in the purchase of a diamond engagement ring that will be seen on countless red carpets, at charitable events and network entertainment television programs.

What is this symbolic and sentimental gift you ask? Who will be its new owner and why did the purchaser select something from so far away?

A stunning engagement ring was presented by Stephen Stagliano to DeAnna Pappas, known to America from her appearance on the ABC reality show, The Bachelor and her starring role in its sister program, The Bachelorette, the following season.

Pappas may have been unlucky in love during her two on-air romances followed closely by millions. But now she believes the third time is the charm and has found the person with the key to her heart.

Stagliano, a California teacher, knew that once he had made the most important decision: whom he was going to marry, the next big choice of where to buy the engagement ring was an easy one. King Jewelers, the East Coast, family-owned business was one of which Pappas spoke frequently and fondly.

Prior to her celebrity status, Pappas, a Georgia native, had become friends with Melissa King McNamara of Norwell. The two women met while McNamara had resided and worked in Georgia. Pappas was a colleague and soon became a treasured friend.

As a contestant on The Bachelor and with the starring role in The Bachelorette the following television season, Pappas was unsuccessful finding lasting love. Little did she know another discovery, a true and lasting romance awaited her in the near future.

McNamara, returned to New England and joined the family business, the first of a fourth generation of Kings to do so. Growing up in neighboring Scituate and presently living in Norwell, McNamara was a natural fit, knowing many clients from the region by name and face. In her previous work in real estate and bartending, though out of state, she had formed acquaintances with many people who, from hundreds and thousands of miles away, had adopted King's as their family jeweler.

The diamond ring by King Jewelers that Pappas' fiancé would slip on her finger is strikingly elegant and tasteful.

Pappas developed affection for King Jewelers from hearing about it from McNamara. Playfully modeling Melissa's jewelry and eventually visiting the shop, she appreciated seeing this establishment in person after imagining it from McNamara's tales and descriptions. During one of her visits, a special event was held at the store. Pappas was thrilled to attend, enjoyed the festive atmosphere and the collections of gemstones, fine jewelry and giftware.

Despite her recent fame and rise to a household name, Pappas remained an easygoing and appreciative guest taking pleasure in the ordinary, extraordinary, rare or familiar found in the store as she was grounded in a strong set of values and traditions. Her presence was a surprise to many guests at the private party as they showed their interest and excitement meeting a TV personality so often in the entertainment news.

McNamara was prepared when she was contacted by Stagliano about purchasing an engagement ring for Pappas. Recalling conversations throughout the years and pieces Pappas had admired while browsing at the store, she knew she could help this soon groom-to-be with the perfect piece to melt Pappas' heart and symbolize the commitment and devotion the couple shared.

McNamara assisted Stagliano by designing the ring, having it made and completing all the details to make Stagliano's shopping experience a smooth and easy one despite the geographical distance between them.

When the completed piece was in McNamara's hands fresh from the jeweler's bench, she took steps to complete the transaction. McNamara's aunt and graduate gemologist, Vicki King, prepared an evaluation letter for insurance purposes and the gift began its journey to California. The diamond ring, Stagliano would slip on Pappas' finger, was strikingly elegant and tasteful. The cushion-cut center stone was surrounded by smaller full-cut round diamonds that framed the larger one and continued down the shank of the ring. It was stunning yet classic and came alive with brilliance as light danced upon the many facets of the stones.

Since the success of Stephen's purchase for Pappas, his twin brother, Michael —who was a contestant on The Bachelorette that featured Pappas — has become engaged to Holly Durst. He also contacted McNamara for a sparkling bauble with which to propose. In the true King tradition, McNamara was thrilled to oblige. Holly also now wears a gorgeous engagement ring from King's.

McNamara noted that despite the economic downturn, King's remains a busy and lively place. "People still buy gifts for special occasions, even when the business climate is unfavorable. That is when our reputation and longevity are so valuable," she said. "Clients may select an item in a more modest price range than usual but they return to us and that is what matters."

She believes the time her family has spent establishing loyalty and a comfortable shopping environment encourages people to visit King's for major purchases, like engagement rings, even in challenging fiscal times.

King's is busy with plans for Pappas' engagement party, which will be held at the store Friday evening, Aug. 27th from 5-8p.m. The public is welcome to attend and extend their good wishes to the couple. In addition to the celebratory atmosphere, bridal jewelry, attendance gifts, wedding bands and a myriad of baubles and treats will be on display and available for purchase.

Pappas continues to work occasionally in the entertainment industry and remains a popular personality followed by many viewers who found her charm and warmth captivating while appearing on the ABC series. It is unlikely she will disappear from the world of TV, internet, magazines and special appearances anytime soon. When she is seen in and around Hollywood, something lovely and exceptional from King Jewelers will adorn the ring finger of her left hand.

"I am thrilled we were able to be part of DeAnna's engagement," said McNamara. "It is wonderful to know she has finally found love and has a beautiful diamond ring so all the world will know of her happiness!"

Houghton, a former Congressman from New York, was influential in getting the initial earmark for the project.

The project's opponents, a group that has followed the issue from its start, called for the project to be put to rest once and for all and focus be placed on resolving the flooding issues.

"The real gold is flood control and there are other ways of dealing with it…This project benefits the few at the expense of the many," said Chris Evans, 36 Sohier St.

A few years old estimates brought the project cost to $2.1 million, and the Army Corps estimated costs to have risen 10 to 15 percent over the past few years. Non-federal sources are required to pay for 35 percent of the total project cost, or about $845,000.

"…this thing needs a silver stake through its heart. Let's make a decision, guys."
— Selectmen Chairman Karen Quigley

Without a project commitment, the town is not liable for any of the preliminary engineering costs associated with the project.

Differing viewpoints

While four out of the five selectmen ultimately rejected the Treat's Pond project they all came at the issue with different perspectives. Selectmen vice chair Ted Carr voted against the rejection of the project, and proposed a motion, which received no backing, to support the project and seek Town Meeting approval.

Selectman Leland Jenkins, Paul Carlson and Ted Carr said they may or may not support the project, but would like to see it move forward to a Town Meeting vote.

However, Carlson said he did not feel it was fair to the voters to consider the project without knowing all the information. He suggested a motion, which was defeated with only Carr and Carlson in favor, to seek a scien-

TREATS POND TIMELINE

2007

2008

March: Letters to the editor pour in and discussions at Selectmen meetings drag on as controversy heats up on the Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project is on the warrant for Annual Town Meeting. Town Meeting supports a "resolution" to continue exploring the Army Corps plan and other stormwater solutions.

April: Board of Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr promises residents an open and transparent process when it came to the town's involvement with the Army Corps' proposed Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project or other alternatives for the ailing wetland.

June: The town's easement issue first comes into focus when the Sandy Cove property owners and the town could not come to a consensus on what rights were granted in a 1964 easement given to the town by Elizabeth Bigelow. The Board of Selectmen tries to find an amicable solution with Sandy Cove residents. Also this month, a well-attended workshop is held to discuss the problems and potential solutions to the flooding near Treat's Pond and Atlantic Avenue in relation to the stormwater master plan.

September: Treat's Pond makes another appearance on the Selectmen's agenda as the board grapples with how to best (and legally) access the drainage pipe on Sandy Cove beach.

October: The Selectmen place three articles outlining various options for Treat's Pond on the Special Town Meeting warrant. They are later removed from the warrant so the Selectmen can gather more information.

January: The Board of Selectmen was split — two and two — on one of the two Army Corps project options on the Treats Pond outfall and, without a preferred route, they could not get majority vote on supporting the project.

March: Town Meeting votes to give the Board of Selectmen the authority to accept an easement agreement from the six families whose property the easement to the Treat's Pond drainage pipe would cross.

April: The Board of Selectmen revisits the Treat's Pond drainage pipe/Sandy Cove easement issue with local residents. The issue once again goes unresolved.

September: Selectmen inch closer to an agreement with property owners over access the Treat's Pond drainage outfall at Sandy Cove, but still no easement or license is signed.

October: Selectmen ink a license agreement with a group of Sandy Cove residents so they can legally access the end of the Treat's Pond drainage pipe to clear it out to ensure flow and diminish severe flooding situations in the area.

February: The Board of Selectmen receives a letter from the Army Corps of Engineers asking for a final answer from the town on the Treat's Pond wetland restoration project. An answer is requested by April 15.

- April: The Board of Selectmen vote two to two on a vote to support a study of the expected effects on the harbor, if an interchange is established between Treat's Pond and the harbor, as is proposed by the Army Corps. A week later the Selectmen vote to send a letter to the Army Corps requesting more time to consider the project. They also ask for information about additional study or a peer review of the project. The Army Corps extends the deadline for an message of support for the project until Sept. 1, 2010. They also send an e-mail indicating the Army Corps would not pay for further study and a peer review was reserved for larger projects.
- June: The Stormwater Advisory Committee recommends to the Selectmen that further study is warranted for a stormwater outlet at Sandy Cove.
- August: The Board of Selectmen vote 4 to 1 to reject the Army Corps project. A letter is sent to the Army Corps informing them of the vote.

Quarterly Real Estate Activity Report

The total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter period from April 2010 through June 2010 stood at $1.5 billion. This represents a 54 percent increase from the comparable period last year.

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the quarter ending June 30.

The Registry's electronic recording program continued to expand with the quarter seeing 990 documents recorded for 66 different accounts. The total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter period from April 2010 through June 2010 stood at $1.5 billion. This represents a 54 percent increase from the comparable period last year. The total number of 4,106 deeds recorded during the period also increased, though by the smaller margin of 13 percent. This increase includes the closings that occurred in the quarter in response to the first time homebuyer tax credit that was scheduled to expire on June 30. The average sale price of deeds over $1,000, both residential and commercial properties, increased to $559,619, an increase of 19 percent over the same quarter in 2009. This increase is probably a reflection of the transfer of some larger commercial properties and may not necessarily be an indication that residential prices increased over the 2009 April through June quarter. Foreclosure deeds continue to come into the Registry and were up 96 percent over last year to a total of 241.

The slower mortgage refinance market translated to a decline in mortgage recording activity by 38 percent on a year-to-year basis with 7,922 new mortgages being recorded in the quarter. Total mortgage value for the quarter stood at just over $5.3 billion. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity. Total document recordings for the quarter had to measure against particularly strong 2009 mortgage refinancing recordings, but the total did recover some in June so that the quarter as a whole showed total document recordings declining by just 22 percent.

The Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. Hundreds of thousands of Registry land records back to 1793 are already available for online viewing. The online index has grown to include records back to 1920 while the Register continues to expand indexing capacity to include earlier records. The Registry of Deeds can be contacted via telephone at 781-461-6101, or on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Selectmen don't support Army Corps saltmarsh restoration

tific study on what effect the project may have on the harbor.

"I feel uncomfortable going to Town Meeting without a study (on the harbor impacts)," Carlson said, who suggested other funding sources outside the town could be sought.

Selectman Fred Koed said he would not support anything, including this Treat's Pond project, that adds more freshwater to the harbor.

"I don't think I need a study. I know freshwater kills lobsters and I'm opposed to anything that jeopardizes that industry. I think lobstering is vital to Cohasset," Koed said. He pushed for more exploration into options to improve the drainage pipe on Sandy Cove.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley was on the same wavelength.

"Every time (the selectmen) face a vote on Treat's Pond something is proposed to push it further down the road," Quigley said. "I have nothing against the democratic process, but at some point we have to show some leadership."

Later, Quigley said, "this thing needs a silver stake through its heart. Let's make a decision, guys."

Jenkins said he did not support the project, but did believe it should go before a Town Meeting vote.

"I don't think five people should make a decision on this," Jenkins said.

After about 20 minutes of discussion between the Selectmen, Quigley made a motion to reject the Army Corps project proposal. The vote was four in favor, one against (Carr). Town Manager Bill Griffin was directed to write a letter to the Army Corps conveying the selectmen's vote.

Reaction

Outside of Town Hall both camps for the Treat's Pond project were sure about one thing: the issue of flooding at Treat's Pond is still out there and still needs to be dealt with.

Former Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who lives on Atlantic Avenue in the Treat's Pond neighborhood, said this is only the start.

"(The Selectmen's vote) is a multi-million dollar mistake. The town still had to solve the problem," Dormitzer said, adding the cost to fix the problem may now be all on the town. "The town can't ignore it."

Peter Whittemore of Elm Court agreed the flooding needs to be addressed, but felt now the Army Corps project is not clouding the issue.

"The real work to save the real conservation value of the area can happen now. We've eliminated the obstacle," Whittemore said.

The Selectmen did not indicate where the Treat's Pond issue goes from here. Selectman Koed said he would like to see the town fully examine the current Treat's Pond drainage outlet at Sandy Cove. The DPW intends to inspect the drainage pipe with a video camera sometime in September.

BRIEFLY

Policies being updated

The Town of Cohasset is in the process revamping some of its policies. Town Manager Bill Griffin is undertaking the project and asked for the Board of Selectmen's input on Monday night.

"We're looking at what policies we have and what policies we don't have," Griffin said. "We want to get up to date."

In specific, the town is looking to update, or create, policies on investment, fraud, harassment, equal opportunity and workplace violence.

"I wanted to get them into your hands and make sure we are working on these," Griffin told the board.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley suggested the policies be run by members of the Capital Budget Committee and the Advisory Committee for input.

Griffin said one of the reasons for the policy update is MIAA, the state's insurance association, suggests the town has them in place for its own protections. The implemented policies could translate to some savings on the town's insurance premiums.

Cohasset Day back again Sept. 12

Classic Car Concours to return with 25-40 cars

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The planning for the third annual Cohasset Day is well underway. All of the tried and true elements of the day designed to bring out the best Cohasset has to offer will be back this year, event organizers say.

The event will be held on Sunday, Sept. 12 in the village and on the common from 1 to 5:30p.m.

"We expect it to be as good, maybe a touch better, than the second Cohasset Day," said Peter Brown of the Economic Development Committee.

Brown was before the Board of Selectmen this Monday night to update the town leaders on the plans for the day. One of the centerpieces of the event is the Classic Car Concours, which features local vintage cars. This year, Brown aims to expand the number of classic cars and move the event from the village gas station to the north side of Cohasset Common.

"We hoping to bring in a different classic car club," Brown said. As a result, he expected between 25 and 40 cars to participate.

The Classic Car Concours is a two-part event. First the cars gather at a private home on Jerusalem Road. There is a lawn party, lunch and the official judging takes place. At 2p.m. the cars assemble and parade four miles along the coast and through the village. From 2:45 to 4:30p.m. judging will be in the hands of the people. People's Choice awards will be given for best in show, hottest car and kid's favorite.

"It's going to be a fabulous show. It's about bring a high quality even to Cohasset," Brown said.

The Classic Car Concours is just one of the activities of Cohasset Day. The afternoon is punctuated with family- and kid-friendly events.

A bike parade, a fashion show, old fashioned kids' and family games will all take place in and around the common. Non-profits will set up information booths.

From 4 to 6p.m. local restaurants and food purveyors will set up tables along Main St. for "Fine Food Galore." Everyone will have samples of their best dishes. Tickets are required for this portion of the event and will be sold at local shops.

Music from local bands, including The Rusty Skippers, Aldous Collins and Jackson Weatherbee, will provide entertainment.

Cohasset Day is an initiative of the Economic Development Committee in partnership with the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

The event would not be possible without the support of sponsors; no town funding is used for the event. Last year, Brown said 40 individuals and businesses contributed to the event.

Any profit is donated to local charities chosen by the Cohasset Day committee. Last year, $6000 was shared between the Cohasset Food Pantry, Cohasset Elder Affairs and the American Legion.

The past two years were great successes with over 2,000 residents and out-of-towners enjoying the downtown area.

"It's a way of promoting our beautiful little town," Brown said.

The rain date for the event is the following Sunday, Sept. 19. If interested in becoming a sponsor, contact Peter Brown at pbrown@campanelli.com.

A full schedule of the day's activities will be included in upcoming Mariner articles. For now, mark your calendar for a day of celebration that supports our local businesses and has already become a new September tradition in Cohasset.

Everyday is Cohasset Day in 02025, however, Sunday September 12th is the 3rd Annual OFFICIAL Cohasset Day—a time to celebrate our beautiful town with a day of fun, shopping, great food, music and dancing in the streets. Cohasset Day is designed to bring families to the town common for some old fashioned fun while local businesses sell their wares and local restaurants participate in the "Fine Foods Galore" — a sampling of goodies from more than 20 area restaurants.

The expressions on these boys' faces say it all! They are having a blast at Cohasset Day. Stay tuned to the Mariner for more updates before Sept. 12.

Shouldn't your bank be a credit union?

You've probably heard. Maybe you've seen it in the news. More than ever before, consumers are leaving the Big Banks and moving their accounts to safer, more consumer-friendly community institutions like Crescent Credit Union. With the recent scandals and sub-prime mortgage debacle, it's no wonder more and more Americans are looking for a better place to bank.

And now, when the mega-banks should be going out of their way to do good by their customers, they're raising credit card rates, creating new fees, and tightening lending restrictions.

At Crescent, we feel there's a better way to bank. Visit Joanne Defeo and her staff at 85 Pond Street, Route 228 in Norwell, or call 781-871-4202 and find out why your bank should be Crescent Credit Union!

Getting back in gear

While news never takes a hiatus — the quantity of news slows down somewhat over the summer months.

That should not be surprising given that town boards don't meet as often, schools are out, and lots of residents go away for a week or two. Other townspeople just like to kick back and relax and not think about "issues" or having to take the kids to dance lessons or hockey practice.

But with the start of school in a few weeks, that's all about to change.

The town budget season looms on the horizon, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts meet, houses of worship resume their regular schedules, youth sports get into full swing along with myriad other activities for Cohasseters of all ages.

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news from Town Hall.

But if you're on the delivery end of the news — in other words you want your club announcement or letter-to-the-editor in the paper — there are some simple "rules to follow."

We accept letters, news items and happenings by email, which is one of the most efficient ways to send your news. However, we receive dozens of emails everyday, so it's not a bad idea to follow your email up with a telephone call, just to make sure your message arrived safely and wasn't inadvertently deleted. Or better yet, just ask us to hit the reply button — so you'll get the message that we received your email on your computer. Attachments should be saved as word documents; photographs should be sent as jpeg attachments.

We still accept news by fax and the old-fashioned way, through the US mail, or dropped off here at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square, above the Upper Crust.

News items should be as concise as possible and written in a narrative form. In other words, please write your news items in a "mini-story format" using complete sentences. Try not to send us flyers, which have to be completely reworded.

Here's the scoop on how to get your news in the Mariner:

Email: Editor, Mary Ford at: mford@cnc.com

Phone: 781-741-2933

FAX: 781-741-2931

Email: Staff reporter, Nancy White at: nwhite@cnc.com

Phone: 781-741-2935

You can stop by our office in person: at the Cohasset Mariner office (in the Hingham Journal Building), 73 South St., Hingham Square, above the Upper Crust. (We are right around the corner from Talbots).

Mail: The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043

Sports news email: to Will Wassersug at: wwassers@cnc.com

Phone: 781-837-4577

Try to have your news to the Mariner by noon Wednesday for that week's issue, however, earlier is always better. If letters emailed we can stretch that deadline a few hours.

We have forms available for wedding and engagement announcements with complete instructions at the Mariner office.

We welcome news tips and story ideas anytime.

Call Mary Ford, editor, at 781-741-2933; or staff reporter Nancy White, at 781-741-2935.

We couldn't do our job without help from the community. So let us hear from you!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Some are violating Aquarion's water restrictions

TO THE EDITOR:

(Editor's note: Aquarion serves Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset).

I run a similar route around town about five days a week. Most of my runs take place early in the morning, and for the past month I have noticed dozens of households violating the mandatory water restrictions. At first I gave the homeowners the benefit of the doubt. Yet as the weeks wore on I came to my senses and realized that unless these people have been out of town for the past month they must be well aware of the ban. Unfortunately, more often than not these houses have sprinkler systems that tend to water the road, sidewalk, and driveway rather than their own lawns. One house on my route seems inclined to give their SUV a car wash every morning because their sprinkler system points directly at the passenger-side doors.

Coincidentally, I am currently taking an Environmental Ethics course this summer as part of my college studies and I brought the issue up during a discussion a few weeks ago. After about 30 minutes of discussion, not one of my 16 classmates or my professor, who has about 20 years of philosophy background, could find a moral argument in favor of violating mandatory water restrictions. We concluded that those violating the restrictions must not understand that water is not an inexhaustible resource and that maintaining our community's drinking water supply outweighs the cosmetic need for a green lawn. We also concluded that a way people reason with breaking the restrictions is that they believe a green lawn is a status symbol, such as that if you have a green lawn you are "better off" than those with a brown lawn.

I hope that people utilize the hotline provided by Aquarion Water Company and report households and businesses that violate the mandatory water restrictions. We would all hate to get to the point where we are choosing between water to drink or water to put out fires. And for those (Aquarion customers) who break the restrictions a simple clarification may be needed — your green lawn is anything but "green" during the month of August.

Historical marker recalls old roundhouse

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush Items — From time to time there are still a few Greenbush Railroad items that are news worthy. One of these is the recent addition of an historic marker located in the Town Parking Lot adjacent to the Greenbush signal bungalow. For those of you who are relatively new to Town, you may not realize that this railroad is ancient history for Cohasset. The railroad was originally constructed in 1845 and had its initial run from Boston to Cohasset in 1849. Cohasset was the end of the line when the railroad from Boston was first built. The railroad was used by the wealthy "summer people" to deliver them and their retinues to town so they could summer along our oceanfront. Wagons from a livery stable at the corner of Depot Court and Ripley Road, where Liberty Park now stands, would deliver them from the train platform to their summer "cottages."

After a few years of railroad operation, a proper railroad facility was constructed on the land that is now the Town Parking Lot. This facility consisted of a four bay roundhouse in which the locomotives and rolling stock could be maintained. Each roundhouse bay had a brick-lined pit placed between the tracks from which maintenance work could be done underneath the train equipment. There was also a turntable that was used to turn locomotives around as well as to position the train equipment properly in front of each roundhouse door so the equipment could be driven into that bay for maintenance. Completing the installation was a raised water tower for refilling the water storage tanks of the steam locomotives. In later years, the railroad was extended further south to Scituate and across the North River to Marshfield, but initially this was the end of the line.

Before construction for the rejuvenated Greenbush Commuter Rail Line was actually started, the Massachusetts Historical Commission asked that the MBTA do an archeological dig to see what evidence, if any, still existed of the old train facility. In 2004 the entire foundation of the turntable was located as well as the maintenance trenches of the roundhouse. The supporting foundation of the water tank was also found. A detailed report, yet to be received by the Town, was to be prepared by the archeologists.

An additional requirement of this archeological work was to create an historic marker to be located in the vicinity of the roundhouse to commemorate its historic functions along with detailed information regarding the remnants that still lie buried beneath the Town Parking Lot. Last week this historic marker was installed in the small grass area at the side of the green signal bungalow near the Pleasant Street rail crossing.

If you happen to be near the Town Parking Lot walk over and take a look at the marker. It shows photos of the turntable and roundhouse during the excavation as well as historic photos and a map of the site. It is really cool to think that this parking lot was once a hustling bustling railroad facility.

Effective July 23rd, the MBTA has instituted an additional way to pay for parking in the Greenbush Commuter Rail Parking Lot. If you have ever tried to stuff four soggy dollar bills into a parking lot receptacle slot on a rainy day, have we got news for you! There is a new electronic payment system, supplied by an outside vendor and is called "Parkmobile." It allows commuters to pay via their cell phones, even after they are on the train. Additional information is available at the web site: http://us.parkmobile.com

To use the new mobile payment system, customers have to register once with their license plate, credit card and mobile phone numbers. Then, every time they park, they use their phones to send two more pieces of information: the lot number and the space number in which they parked. According to the MBTA, Parkmobile is free for customers and the MBTA is adsorbing the vendor costs and it will not be passed on to customers. Welcome to the 21st century!

released for paving by the Little Harbor Project. In the meantime, we will be paving Sohier Street from Fair Oaks to North Main Street during the month of August. Also, a small section of Pond St. from the High School to Route 3A and Beechwood St. from Norman Todd to Route 3A will be paved. It is critical that this work be done before schools return from vacation. This paving will be paid for by the State under our Chapter 90 annual allocation from the Commonwealth. The DPW has a program to use these funds, as they become available, to support the ongoing maintenance of our roads and sidewalks. We will keep you posted on any further paving operations as soon as roads are released.

HEALTH NOTES

Vitamin D, calcium and sunshine

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Anodyne: An ameliorative drug or medicine. Adjective: Not likely to provoke dissent or offense; uncontentious or inoffensive, often deliberately so.

Perfect, crisp clear days are traps for seductive sun skin damage. It's time to begin to be careful and take appropriate precautions. But wait! Sunlight provides vitamin D. Actually, vitamin D is not a vitamin but a hormone. It is unique in that it is made in the skin as a result of exposure to sunlight. Photosynthesis of vitamin D has been occurring on earth for more than 750 million years. Some of the earliest life forms that were exposed to sunlight for their energy requirement were also photosynthesizing vitamin D. Both children and adults have in the past depended on adequate sun exposure to satisfy their vitamin D requirement. At the turn of the last century upwards of 80 percent of children in the industrialized, polluted cities of northern Europe and northeastern United States suffered from the devastating consequences of vitamin D deficiency: rickets. The skin has a large capacity to make vitamin D. Exposure of a person in a bathing suit to a minimal erythemal dose of sunlight, which is typically no more than 15-20 minutes on Cape Cod in June or July at noon time, is the equivalent to taking 20,000 IU of vitamin D orally. In the absence of any sun exposure 1,000 IU of vitamin D a day is necessary to maintain healthy levels of 25-hydroxy vitamin D in the circulation. An analysis of much data has demonstrated that neither children nor adults are receiving an adequate amount of vitamin D from their diet or from supplements. Therefore, sunlight is an anodyne.

Higher intakes of calcium and vitamin D have been promoted in recent years as a way to prevent bone loss with aging.

In the winter, it's impossible to produce vitamin D from the sun north of Atlanta because the sun never gets high enough in the sky for its ultraviolet B rays to penetrate the atmosphere. The government's dietary recommendations are 200 IUs a day up to age 50, 400 IUs to age 70, and 600 IUs over 70. But many experts believe that these recommendations are far too low to maintain healthful vitamin D levels. They advocate for supplementation in the winter of about 2,000 IUs per day and a dose of daily sunshine in the summer.

In some places, knowing the expected UV rating for the day has become as important as knowing the day's forecast. It's not just rain and wind that people worry about when it comes to summer weather. Skin damage and skin cancer, and the hole in the ozone layer are also concerns, especially for outdoor workers. For years, health professionals have been admonishing people to cover up, wear sunscreen, and seek shade on sunny days. But is the sun really that bad?

In a study to examine the relationship between diet and brain lesions, Dr. Martha E. Payne of Duke University, observed that elderly people who reported higher calcium and vitamin D intake were more likely to have greater volumes of brain lesions: regions of damage, that can increase risk of cognitive impairment. "Our finding of a relationship between brain lesions and consumption of both calcium and vitamin D raises the question about a possible down side to high intakes of these nutrients." Higher intakes of calcium and vitamin D have been promoted in recent years as a way to prevent bone loss with aging. "We are concerned that some of this extra calcium may end up in the blood vessel walls rather than the bone; a particular problem for individuals with renal disease since calcium excretion may be impaired." The research team assessed calcium, vitamin D intakes and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) brain scans in 232 elderly men and women. All subjects displayed some brain lesions of varying sizes but those reporting the highest intakes of calcium and vitamin D were significantly more likely to have higher total volume of brain lesions as measured across several MRI scans. Of both calcium and vitamin D, only vitamin D remained significantly positively associated with brain lesion volume.

So, as usual in the health business, we're not quite certain what we should be doing. We do know that burn and blister is bad. Also, that multivitamins are relatively cheap. So, when you're tan enough, go inside and take a multivitamin; hopefully you've covered all the bases.

Estuary geology really rocks

WEIR RIVER ESTUARY

JUDETH VAN HAMM

Last Saturday I had the privilege of joining a Rock Tour of the Weir River Estuary led by geologist Declan DePaor of Hull. The rocks in the vicinity of the Weir River Estuary reveal the fascinating geological history of our region.

We started our tour in the parking lot of DiNero's Restaurant in West Corner. We were surrounded by rock faces made of Dedham granite. Granite is an igneous, or fire, rock made from molten magma that cooled inside a volcano over a long period so that crystals formed. Dedham granite is about 610 million years old. Looking in from the street, the center of the rock wall had a column of dark rock about a yard or meter wide. It is an intrusion of volcanic rock that was making its way to the surface. It cooled much more quickly, so crystals are not readily visible.

Declan's wife, Carol Simpson, a college administrator and geologist specializing in fractures, pointed out the difference between the large blocks of granite to the right of the volcanic column, which were big enough to be used in buildings, and the broken surface of the granite to the left of the volcanic column, where the blocks were no more than a foot in height or width. Carol said that the closer the granite is to a fault, the more likely it is to fracture. In this case, the granite on the left is closer to Straits Pond which lies over the Ponkapoag fault.

The Ponkapoag fault and another that runs through Arlington create the rift valley known as the Boston Basin, which forms Boston Harbor.

The Boston Basin rift valley occurs within the Avalon Terrane. Terranes are large blocks of the earth's crust separated from each other by major faults. The Avalon Terrane encompasses eastern Massachusetts from Cape Ann to New Bedford. It originated as a volcanic island chain near the South Pole at the edge of the super-continent Gondwana.

Looking in from the street, the center of the rock wall had a column of dark rock about a yard or meter wide.

Continuing on our tour, we stopped at Black Rock Beach across from the end of Straits Pond at the foot of Forest Avenue. We walked on the beach around Green Hill in Hull to large outcroppings of Roxbury puddingstone, a conglomerate found above the granite in the Boston Basin. The puddingstone, which looks like lots of smaller stones cemented together as at the bottom of a riverbed, may have formed around 600 million years ago when some geologists surmise that the earth was like a giant snowball.

The blue sedimentary stones that are so familiar on our beaches come from sediment that also settled on the bottom of Boston Basin. Interestingly, if you walk Duxbury Beach, you will not find the blue sedimentary rocks.

Gondwana eventually migrated northward. When Laurentia, which is the heart of North America, docked into Gondwana, they became the super-continent Pangaea. As Pangaea began to break up 200 million years ago, our Avalon Terrane and three other Massachusetts terranes separated from what is now northwest Africa and connected to the Laurentian terranes.

While at Black Rock Beach we walked to the Cohasset end of the beach, looking for dikes. Dikes form in rocks when molten rock fills cracks. Dikes range from small lines of quartz in pebbles to the large Jurassic dike that cuts across Black Rock Beach parallel to Jerusalem Road. This dike dates from the breakup of Pangaea.

Our last stop was at Gunrock Beach on Atlantic Avenue in Hull. The igneous rocks here are made of lava pillows formed by lava bubbling up in water. The lava pillows' small holes are gas vesicles. The edges of one of the larger holes is lined with quartz, similar to a geode, which is a rock cavity filled in with crystals. These lava pillows can also be seen at the foot of Atlantic Hill at the end of Nantasket Beach. At the edge of Beachfire Restaurant's outdoor terrace, the Atlantic Hill rock face is volcanic tuff made of layers of volcanic ash that settled in water.

While at Gunrock, we looked out toward the rest of the Hull peninsula, which consists of a string of drumlins, hills made of glacial till formed by the last glacier 14,000 years ago, connected by tombolos or tying sandbars. The bayside of the peninsula dates from about 4,000 years ago, while Nantasket Beach was formed about 1,000 years ago. For part of its length, Nantasket Avenue runs along the top of a sandbar about 2,500 years old.

Declan remarked at the end of tour, "The volcanic formations in Hull are rare. If there were no houses here, this would be a national park."

Cohasset High math teacher and CSCR project leader Laura Giuliano points out a seedling (clam) to sophomore Greg Berube, 15, and senior William Choi, 17, while recording the number of benthic invertebrates found swimming in Musquashicut Pond.

Cohasset High to-be-freshman Sofia Deligiannidis and Cailey Hart, both 14, walk through the phragmites in Jacob's Meadow on their way to the sample site. On Tuesday the CSCR students were collecting water samples for salinity and placing fish traps.

they were fortunate to catch some flounder, a positive sign, but this year there have been no flounder as of yet.

"Normally we don't see that, so it was promising, but we've caught none this summer," Higgins said. Last year, the group found less fish than in 2008, but the cool, wet weather could have played a role. When the data collection has concluded this year, they will look at that data closely.

A second fish trap was thrown in the channel on the other side of the tide gates, at the entrance to Jacob's Meadow.

Next, the student head to Sankey Road where they don yellow waterproof boots and trudge their way onto the marsh. There are creeks separating the marsh and the footing isn't easy either. But, none of the students seem to mind.

"You can't have good science without getting a little dirty," Torin Sweeney, CSCR and Cohasset High teacher, tells the students.

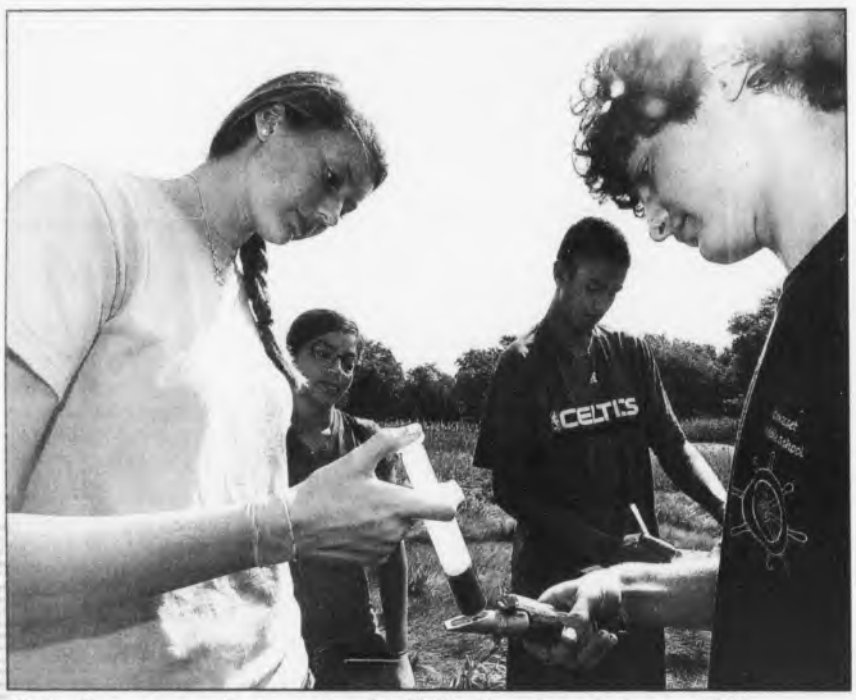
At the marsh the salinity is tested and recorded at three different study sites. The students use a refractometer to get a salinity reading. Two students do the reading to ensure accuracy.

"(Being involved in CSCR) is getting us geared toward high school," said Jack Stanganelli, 14.

The approach at CSCR is to give kids the tools, knowledge and direction, but allow them to experience science and discovery on their own. At the end of the summer students are asked to continue working on data analysis and report writing throughout the fall and early winter. The reports are to be completed in time for the Second Annual State of the Harbor Forum, which will be held in the late winter/early spring.

With Cohasset's water resource being one of its more valuable and constant discussion at the town level about stormwater, flooding, and the health of the town's water resources, the information gathered by the students is a service to the community as well.

"There is a constant effort to strike a balance between creating better, healthier marshes, keeping things in their natural state while respecting the rights of homeowners," said Jack Buckley, Cohasset High social studies teacher and CSCR president. "Having real scientific data helps in these discussions."



Freshman Jack Stanganelli, 14, reaches up to collect the line for the fish trap from teacher Torin Sweeney before casting it into Cohasset Harbor on Tuesday morning.

Junior Kayla Orner, 16, finds a crab in the mud collected at Musquashicut Pond in Scituate on Tuesday morning. The project she is working on examines the life that lives in the mud of local saltmarshes.

(Below) Joy Higgins sets out a trap in the main channel that runs through Jacob's Meadow. Twenty-four hours later the students return and record the length, weight, and species of fish collected in the traps.

Cailey Hart puts a sample of water from Jacob's Meadow onto a refractometer held by Alexandros Deligiannidis, 14, who will use it to measure the salinity of the salt marsh.

(Below) Jessie Fitts, 19, who graduated from Cohasset High in 2009, records the salinity levels from Musquashicut Pond into their database at the CSCR Summer Institute. She has been at the institute for the past 6 years and is thinking about majoring in Biology at Williams College.

Generous citizenry often victimized

VETERANS

JOE MCELROY

You cannot imagine how much a phony sitting in a wheelchair and wearing a military cap can collect in one day at a retail site.

Americans are a giving, generous citizenry. There are more than 20,000 not for profit and charities registered with the Massachusetts State Attorney General's Office. Donating to charities that direct your contributions to veterans and others in need of help should be encouraged.

Unfortunately, there are many unscrupulous individuals and groups that eagerly take advantage of our generosity. The favorite methods of fundraisers include telemarketing (often hiring a fundraising corporation), mailings and on-site solicitations at busy retail locations. Many charities use professional fundraisers since the charities themselves lack the equipment and manpower to run a phone campaign. In most instances, telemarketers, charge at least 70 percent for their services and after other expenses those in need may receive 5 to 25 percent of each dollar you donate.

You cannot imagine how much a phony sitting in a wheelchair and wearing a military cap can collect in one day at a retail site. Many municipalities have bylaws requiring solicitors to pre-register with the local police department (especially if they propose to go "door to door or situate themselves at a retail site). If the soliciting individual or group is legally registered with the state AG; the police will normally grant their application.

If the solicitor purports to be a veterans' advocate, tell him you want to check with your local Veterans' Services Officer before donating (for Cohasset, you can call or email Joe McElroy: 781-383-0505 or cohjoe@aol.com). For other solicitors, you may go to the police or go to the state AG. There are also Internet sites that evaluate national charities.

Your best precaution is to: donate to posts, chapters, corporations and individuals who you know personally represent their charities. Some organizations piggyback on the name of a respected charity by adopting a very similar name.

Disclose

If you receive a telemarketer call; the professional solicitor is required to disclose the name, address and telephone number of the charitable organization on whose behalf the solicitation is being made. The name of the charity must be exactly stated (not one word different than what is in the Articles of Organization approved by the state AG). Many professional solicitors convey the impression that they are a member of the actual charity and you will notice that their phone call cannot be easily traced because on caller ID it will indicate private caller. Be sure to ask the caller to identify the charity's account number with the state AG and ask them for the last fiscal year that the state AG approved a fiscal report on the charities operations. Specifically, ask for the total revenues for that fiscal year and the total grants to the beneficiaries specified by the "Purposes" stated in the Articles of Organization as approved by the state AG. Please note the following extract of a recent news release from the state AG's Office on this subject:

"Before making a donation, we encourage people to do a little homework on the charity they are considering donating to, to ensure that their money is going to reputable charities that can best help those in need."

All charities and fundraisers operating in Massachusetts are required by law to register with the Attorney General's Office. While registration with the Attorney General's Office does not indicate that the office approves or endorses the organization, it does provide the public with valuable information regarding how long the organization has been in existence, its financial condition and its track record of complying with state registration and filing requirements.

To best assure that your donation will be used for its intended purpose, the Attorney General's Office offers the following suggestions:

• Check to see if the charity is registered and filing with the Attorney General's Non-Profit Organizations/Public Charities Division. Registration and filing information can be obtained online at:

www.mass.gov/ago/charitiesreports or by calling the division at 617-727-2200, ext. 2101.

• Know your charity. Take the time to verify the address, phone number, contact information, and review the website and written material, when possible. Consider a charity's history, purpose, track record, and reputation, and never give to a charity you know nothing about.

• Examine your options. Do not feel compelled to give to the first charity you come across.

• Be wary of appeals that are long on emotion. The hard luck tale is a favorite ploy of a phony operator. A legitimate charity will tell you how it's using your money.

• Ask lots of questions. Ask who employs the telephone solicitor, if your contribution is tax deductible.

• Beware of professional fundraisers who try to make their solicitations sound like they are coming directly from the charity itself or volunteers.

• Do not pay by cash. Pay by check, and make it out to the charity (use its full name; don't use initials), not the fundraiser. Never give your credit card number to a fundraiser over the telephone. If the fundraiser directly approaches you, ask to see identification. It is best to mail your check directly to the charity.

• If you are contributing over the Internet, make sure that the website you are visiting belongs to a legitimate, established and registered charity, and that the website and the charity match. See if other legitimate websites will link to that website. You should make sure that the website you visit is operated by the charity you want to donate to. Also, you should make sure the site is secure and will offer protection for your credit card number.

Individuals with inquiries or complaints about charitable solicitations should call the Attorney General's Non-Profit Organizations/Public Charities Division at 617-727-2200, ext. 2101 or write to: Office of the Attorney General, Non-Profit Organizations/Public Charities Division, One Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108.

Status

The fundraising organization must disclose its professional fundraiser status. It may not misrepresent that the solicitation is being made by a member of the charitable organization or impersonate a member of a charitable organization, either explicitly or implicitly. The fundraiser must not misrepresent the percentage of funds raised that will be used for charitable purposes. If asked, a fundraiser must accurately disclose the percentage of funds that will go to the charity. Telling a potential donor that all proceeds go to the charity is deceptive unless 100 percent of the money raised will go to the charity. Misrepresenting that donated funds will be used locally when in fact they will not be is also prohibited. When a solicitor tells a potential donor that the call is being made from a local address, the donor will usually assume that the money raised will be used locally. This is why it is important to disclose the name, address and phone number of the charitable organization on whose behalf the money is being raised. Misrepresenting that certain organizations endorse the fundraising campaign, or will receive funds from the campaign is improper.

The two categories of charitable organizations exempted by statute from registering and filing with the state AG are: religious organizations; and the Red Cross and certain veterans' organizations listed in MG.L. c. 12. 8E (a small number of well known national veterans' groups chartered by Congress). Fraternal groups, such as police and fire associations/unions, are generally not considered public charities and thus do not have to register and file annually with the AG, with the following important exception: if a fundraising appeal by a police or fire group states that a charitable purpose (for example: scholarship fund, or assistance to the police or fire department) will benefit in any way by the donations, then the group must register and file. Prior to soliciting contributions in Massachusetts, or having such contributions solicited on its behalf, a charitable organization must obtain a valid Certificate of Solicitation from the Non-Profit Organizations/Public Charities Division of the Attorney General's Office.

Your Veterans' Agent is Joe McElroy and he may be contacted at 781-383-0505 or by email: cohjoe@aol.com.

Reading and giving back

Library concludes summer reading program

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"It's amazing how it all came together. I've been setting the stage all year to encourage the children to do something for someone else."
— Sharon Moody, children's librarian

Somewhere in the world a family will have a better life thanks to Cohasset children.

As the culmination of the summer reading program at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library a donation has been made to Heifer International, a global non-profit that provides livestock to some of the poorest places in the world.

Every summer the Cohasset Library, along with libraries across the state, conduct a themed summer reading program. The goal is to keep kids reading throughout the summer. The students are asked to make a habit of reading each and every day.

At the Cohasset Library, under the direction of children's librarian Sharon Moody, elementary students finishing kindergarten through fifth grade are encouraged to sign up at the library or online, then keep track of the titles and number of minutes they read each day.

This summer the reading program had another goal. If the kids reached their reading goals, the Friends of the Cohasset Library would make a donation to Heifer International on behalf of the children. The donation would buy a heifer for a family in need.

The more than 300 registered participants in the program met their goals at the conclusion of the program earlier this month.

The summer reading program was the climax of a yearlong effort by Moody to integrate global awareness and sense of volunteerism into the library's children's programs.

The Cohasset Read Together book was "Mountains Beyond Mountains" about one doctor's quest to bring health care to a remote and poverty-stricken part of Haiti. Moody found books to complement the themes in the book.

Then, Moody launched a book drive campaign to send books to a school in Tanzania where a Cohasset native is teaching.

"It's amazing how it all came together," Moody said. "I've been setting the stage all year to encourage the children to do something for someone else."

This year's summer reading theme was "Go Green" and while there are typically small prizes for students who reach their reading goal, Moody opted to forgo the incentive prize this year. The decision followed on a trend she has noticed in the past few years.

"The children didn't need the incentive to read. They were getting beyond that and that was a goal of mine. They realized reading is just a good habit," Moody said.

While the children who frequent the library may not need more "stuff," Moody wanted to impress upon the children that there were people in the world that do.

Moody chose books to help illustrate the meaning of volunteerism and giving back in a global way. She found books ("Give a Goat" and "Beatrice's Goat") that told true stories about families that benefited from a gift from Heifer International. She found a book, "Jimmy and Ryan" about a six-year-old Canadian boy who raised enough money to build a well for a village in Africa.

"In this day in age children are so exposed to everything on the news and it really affects them," Moody said, naming January's earthquake in Haiti as an example. By having a way to give back could help them realize ways they can help and make a difference.

"With the reading program they know they are doing something good for themselves, and in turn, doing something good for someone else," Moody said.

Not a walk in the park

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said she has noticed an increase of beer cans and bottles in the area around Aaron River Reservoir (Wompatuck State Park) where she walks her dogs. The litter, especially the glass bottles, creates a potential hazard for children, adults and dogs walking in the area.

She asked for residents to adhere to a carry-in, carry-out policy.

Quigley also said there have been campfires in the area, which could potentially be dangerous given the drought conditions in the region.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia concurred from the audience.

"Thank you for mentioning it," Silvia said.

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

Donations provide only means of support

Maintenance issues at Sandy Beach have been cause for a good portion of our expenses for the past couple of years. The bathhouse has been completely refurbished. It has a new roof, new electrical panel, new bathroom sinks, fixtures, and hand dryers. It has been painted inside and out (outside thanks to the talents of our high school artists, Caitlin Mavilia and Hugh Gideon-Murphy). Even the floor has been redone with the Sandy Beach logo as an added touch. We have several new signs. There are six new trash barrels with covers. Next year we hope to add six more. We are very happy with the results, as we hope our beachgoers are. Many of you have complimented us on these updates and we appreciate your comments.

Our largest expense will be this season as we are connecting to the sewer. This is something we have anticipated with mixed feelings. We recognize how much we need this and we will be relieved that we no longer need to rely on a very old septic system that has been treated with kid gloves for many years. At the same time, the added expense will be felt, as it involves yearlong bills although it will only be used for the summer season.

We ask you to remember these "modern conveniences" when you next send your donation to Sandy Beach. Please know how grateful we are for your continued support. We repeat this message so often and yet many people still do not realize that the annual fee for the "Beach Sticker" goes directly to the Town of Cohasset.

Sandy Beach operates completely on your donations. The Town provides trash pick-up and maintains the parking lot. We pay for the beach clean-up, the lifeguards, the beach maintenance workers, and the many additional expenses occurring over the summer.

The Sandy Beach Board hopes you enjoy the rest of this incredible summer. How fortunate we all are to be able to just head for the beach and enjoy its refreshing breezes and cool water on these hot, hot summer days.

The beauty that surrounds us is such a gift.

Our largest expense will be this season as we are connecting to the sewer. This is something we have anticipated with mixed feelings.

'On the Job' program to resume with writing workshop

"On the Job," a support program for individuals looking for their next job, will resume its weekly meetings for job seekers at New North Church with a workshop on writing skills led by Margaret Cadieux, business communication lecturer at UMass-Boston.

Cadieux will lead a workshop on "Writing for Job Seekers" in the parish house wing of New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham, from 8:30 to 10 a.m., on Monday, Aug. 23.

The workshop is designed to help participants sharpen their writing skills, use proper email etiquette and consider how to distinguish themselves in their cover letters.

Participants are encouraged to bring samples of cover letters they have been using.

Cadieux has been teaching business communications and English as a Second Language at UMass-Boston for the past 10 years. Prior to that she owned and operated her own retail business and also worked in a variety of positions in market research and management consulting.

Participants are encouraged to bring samples of cover letters they have been using.

The program is free and open to everyone looking to find his or her next position. "On the Job" meets from 8:30 to 10 a.m., every Monday, in the parlor at New North Church in downtown Hingham and is open to anyone looking to network and improve their job search skills.

The program is led by Wetzel, Marie Harris, Shirley Rydell and the Rev. Bill Turpie, pastor of New North Church.

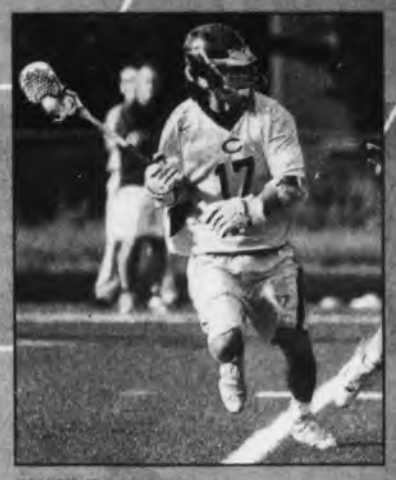
CNC SUPER TEAM



•••Lacrosse•••

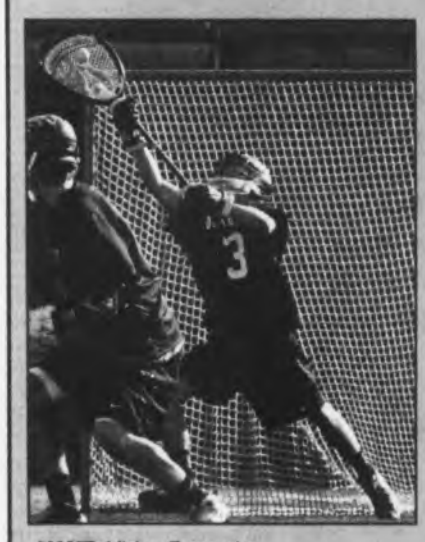
NAME: Christian Barrett
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Abington
STATS: Teammate Sean Lawton said it best: "I would have to say Christian Barrett is the best player on our team, he's capable of being one of our biggest threats on offense and also going down on defense and shutting down the other team's best player

NAME: Alex Kinnealey
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS: Everything starts with the draw, and Kinnealey was one of the premiere players on the draw all season, winning almost all of them to help set up Cohasset's scorers and playmakers. He also helped the defense immensely by keeping the ball out of opponents' sticks from the start.

NAME: Thomas Flibotte
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS:: Flibotte notched a hat trick in the Skippers' championship victory over Norwell, which was just another day at the office for this dazzling star. Flibotte had an array of offensive weapons and his notch for finishing was a big reason for Cohasset's big numbers. During the season he won a trick-shot contest during a Blazers game.

NAME: Jack Murphy
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS: Murphy, who is also one of the top all-time wrestlers in Cohasset school history, turned in a spectacular season as the last line of defense on a team that only allowed opponents to score in double digits three times all season. Murphy was also known for helping the offense, bringing the ball upfield on occasion and with precision passing from the net.

NAME: Jake Quinn
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Quinn, who also plays football and was a big contributor to Hingham's hockey state title, was a scorer and solid defender in the midfield for the Harbormen. He had four goals and an assist in a playoff victory over Catholic Memorial and scored the tying goal, one of his three in the game, with 33 seconds left in regulation in a 10-9 win over Reading in the Div. 2 semifinal.



NAME: Andrew Sypek
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Sypek was a force on defense and was the top defender on one of the best defensive teams in the state.

NAME: John Fitzgerald
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Fitzgerald only played one season for Hingham High School, but he certainly made the most of it, winning All-American honors while leading Hingham to an appearance in the Div. 2 East championship game. He scored twice in the double-overtime loss, including a spectacular game-tying goal with 3:09 left to play in regulation.

NAME: Pat Johnston
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Norwell
STATS: The Clippers couldn't have gone deep into the postseason without their stellar defense, and that last line of defense created havoc. Johnston, a South Shore League all-star, averaged nearly 17 saves a game, making a total of 290 on the season. His .700 save percentage also was one of the best in the region in all divisions. He's headed to Virginia Military Institute where he hopes to take his game to another level.

NAME: Mickey Zaverucha
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: The Bucknell-bound Zaverucha proved for a second year in a row that he's one of the best goalies in Division 1, posting a 22-2 record his final season as a Dragon. His specialty – picking off point-blank range shots with killer instincts.

NAME: John Ricciardi
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: Seniors lead by example both on and off the field. And Ricciardi's actions on the field made the senior tri-captain one of the top midfielders in the area. The Patriot League all-star's knack of finding an opening and rifling off shots froze goalies in their tracks.

NAME: Bryan Barry
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: When the Green Dragons needed a player in the clutch, they could turn to Barry, a lethal midfielder who seemingly scored at will. One of the top scorers on the team and in the conference, Barry was also named to the Patriot League all-star team. Barry was one of the many reasons the Dragons reached the Division 1 finals for the seventh year in a row.

NAME: Tom Dwyer
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Norwell
STATS: Dwyer put up staggering numbers this year as a midfielder for the Division 3 South Sectional finalists. He led the team in assists with 38 and with total points (61). The South Shore League all-star kept the opposition off-balance, not knowing whether Dwyer would make a move on goal or dish it off to one of his teammates. This unpredictability was a huge reason the Clippers blew past several opponents.

NAME: Trevor Scott
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Weymouth
STATS: Scott has been instrumental in helping Weymouth stay competitive in this new culture by becoming the standard for dedication to the sport. Since making the varsity as a freshman in 2007, Trevor has been a leader on the team, both on the field and off. Trevor's dedication has paid off as he was elected captain by his teammates two years in a row. Recruited by many top college programs, he will play next year at division three powerhouse Western New England College.

NAME: Zack LaFavre
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Weymouth
STATS: From the moment Zack LaFavre first stepped on the lacrosse field as a freshman he impressed all of the Weymouth High School coaches with his work ethic, "his very high lacrosse IQ" and his considerable talent. He became an immediate starter at attack for the varsity."

Cohasset's Anders Goetz is on the roster for the Cohasset/Scituate baseball team that will be playing in the Win Bates Tournament in Braintree this weekend.

Cohasset team entered in Bates Tourney

There are a couple of new wrinkles in the second annual Win Bates Tournament, which will be held this weekend at Braintree High School.

The tournament began last year for players 18 and younger and was named after the ubiquitous Win Bates, a long time sports reporter in the area and the No. 1 fan of the Wamps, his alma mater.

The opening ceremonies are at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday morning.

It will be something very special with some interesting surprising according to one of the organizers, Tim Fox.

"For the first time it will be a double elimination tournament," said Fox. We will have two games going on simultaneously, one on the varsity field and the other on the junior varsity field."

The first set of games begins at 11 a.m. with Cohasset taking on Milton on the junior varsity field and Quincy facing host Braintree on the varsity field.

There will be games on Saturday at 2 p.m. on both fields and the tournament will resume on Sunday at 11 a.m.

If one team remains unbeaten at that point, the championship game will be held at 2 p.m. on Sunday.

If necessary, there will be a final game to determine the champion on Sunday at 5 p.m.

EEE comes into play for sports

Games, practices may have to be rescheduled

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

As fall high school and youth sports seasons get set to begin in a couple weeks, a season of another sort has already started, and it's causing headaches for a number of towns.

Eastern equine encephalitis season, which typically starts in late summer, first appeared in July this year when a horse in Middleboro became infected with the mosquito-borne disease. Shortly thereafter, pools of mosquitoes in local towns began testing positive for EEE, forcing some towns to restrict outdoor activities from dusk until dawn. Now, those restrictions are starting to have a trickle down effect and forcing high school athletic directors and coaches as well as youth sports leagues to alter their schedules.

Duxbury High School's athletic teams will not play any night games until the first frost, according to athletic directors whose teams face Duxbury. This not only affects Duxbury sports, it has an impact on Duxbury's opponents from other towns. In its league alone, Duxbury plays teams from Hanover, Rockland, Randolph, Pembroke, Hingham, Quincy, Marshfield, Kingston, Hanson, Middleboro, Scituate, Plymouth, Bridgewater, Raynham, Whitman, New Bedford, and several others.

Plymouth County Mosquito Control Superintendent Anthony Texeira said Monday that official results of how effective the aerial spraying won't be known until later this week, however, he believes the spraying helped lower the number of mosquitoes considerably.

A number of teams at Pembroke High School play Duxbury; both teams are in the Patriot League. Pembroke Athletic Director Bill Fallon said that, aside from having to reschedule times of games against Duxbury, his school hasn't been affected.

"As of now, everything's a go, unless something comes down from the board of health," Fallon said about his teams practicing and playing at night in Pembroke. "Four or five years ago, we were in a similar situation. We had to complete all activities prior to dusk."

Pembroke athletes hope their town is spared of any bans. This is the first year a number of teams can play night games on campus.

"We do have lights (now), and we have some night games scheduled," Fallon said, and he noted that each team has bug spray in their medical kits for the student athletes to use.

Other towns that have been asked not to participate in outdoor activities at night include Carver and Kingston. Silver Lake High School in Kingston plays in the Patriot League against similar opponents as Pembroke High School, however Carver High School plays in the South Shore League, so any rescheduling would affect schools in Abington, Cohasset, Norwell, Hull, East Bridgewater, Harwich, and Mashpee.

Even though EEE hasn't shown up yet in towns such as Weymouth, Rockland, and Braintree, it doesn't mean those teams are safe either. In 2006, one of the worst years on record for the rate of EEE infection, those towns were forced to reschedule its games or to play earlier in the day. This year, a number of towns that haven't been affected have taken a proactive approach, continuously testing mosquito pools.

In its latest update (Aug. 4), the Massachusetts Department of Public Health listed positive test results of "mammal-biting" mosquitoes have been found in Duxbury, Plympton, Hanson, Cohasset's Caitlin De'Angelis had a solid season with the Grandslammers USTA team this summer.

Grandslammers ousted in playoffs

Newburyport ends local team's season

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Grandslammers USTA team based out of Scituate (Scituate High School) and featuring players from Cohasset, Hingham, and Scituate, finished their inaugural season with a loss to Newburyport at the Cedarville Tennis Club in Haverhill on Aug 7.

The team finished the regular season 4-0 to win their league title and advanced to the District Tournament where they faced Newburyport, which went on to win the District title.

"We played pretty well," said Grandslammer coach John Nestel, who coaches at Thayer Academy, where he also coaches team member Mike McGinty of Scituate. "We had two matches that went into tiebreakers.

Hingham's Holly Johnson teamed with Yasmin Owen to win their match in a tiebreaker in the third set, while Cohasset's Caitlin De'Angelis also went into a tiebreaker before taking the loss.

"I've been coaching Caitlin for a year-and-a-half," Nestel said. "She's improved tremendously. She's been playing since she was eight years old and she's looking for a college scholarship. Last season she played doubles for Cohasset. She's looking to play singles next year and she's planning to play some USTA tournaments."

Nestel has enjoyed having De'Angelis.

"She's a great kid and a good student of the game," he said. "She's done well and has a lot of potential."

The Founders' Cup is a deserving honor

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

They will be playing the club championship at South Shore Country Club in Hingham this weekend and next weekend. It is two weekends of rigorous match play.

But they are playing for more than that.

They will be playing for points.

Founders' Cup points.

What the heck is that?

It is a newly organized championship at the club.

The golfer with the most points accumulated during the season is determined as this year's Player of the Year.

Sort of like the PGA Tour's FedEx Cup for hackers.

I like to think of it as the Sandbaggers Cup . . . just joking.

But if at any club in America, calling in the Founders' Cup is so appropriate, it is at South Shore.

Why?

Well, 25 years ago South Shore Country Club nearly went out of existence.

No, it wasn't because of a poor economy. In fact, it was because the economy was so good.

The golf course was sold to developers who wanted to turn the 185 acres into housing lots.

Where golfers saw lush fairways framed by ancient trees that climaxed with elevated as well as treacherous greens, developers saw million dollar homes.

That was the 1980s and real estate, as well as the stock market, was exploding.

It was also the middle of the golf boom.

It's ironic. If the economy is good, golf courses are in danger of becoming housing developments and if the economy is bad, they could go out of business because there is no business. That's the crazy world we live in.

Fortunately, it didn't happen.

A handful of people in town stood up and protested the sale.

They petitioned the town to take over the golf course by eminent domain.

It didn't happen overnight.

There were committees and plenty of individuals who put their hearts and souls into the project of acquiring the land and going through the process of reclaiming it as a golf course.

Who were these people? I could name a few, but I would be fearful of leaving off so many who contributed.

The members of the South Shore Country Club Men's Association realized this last fall.

Since the hiring of Jay McGrail as the superintendent a few years ago, the club has blossomed into its former magnificence.

They realized that all that has happened at South Shore is nothing more than a miracle and they came to a realization that they have to show their gratitude to those who made it happened.

At first, they talked about honoring one individual who spearheaded the move. But just as quickly, they realized it was the effort of many, which it why they decided to call it the Founders' Cup.

And while there will be only one winner of the Founders' Cup next week when the point leader is determined, everyone who tees it up at South Shore should be considered a winner, just to have this wonderful, public course available.

Repeat, repeat

A round of applause for Steve Tasho of Easton and Matt Parziale, won their second straight Brockton City Fourball.

The pair was a last-minute entry into the tournament and rode to a three-shot victory with a 14-under par (61-69-68-198) following the final round at Thorny Lea Golf Club.

Tied for second were the teams of Bill Jones and Tommy Lucas, Kevin Carrozza and Rich McGovern, Joe and Jason Cook and Tom Gadles and Dan McCabe.

"It was nice to come back and defend," Tasho told reporters afterward. "Matt is doing his thing and I'm doing mine. I didn't know if I was going to play, but it was nice to come in and win again."

For many years Tasho won this title with his brother-in-law Bruce Chalas.

Parziale won't be around for long to enjoy the glory. He was off to the Rhode Island Open the following week (he finished nine shots off the lead) and then on to Mississippi to resume play on the Hooters Tour.

In the field division D.W Field's Steve Doherty and George Figuerido came from behind on the final day at Thorny Lea to post an even-par 70 and capture the division by three strokes (68-70-70-208).

"This victory was 30 years in the making," said the 58-year-old Doherty, a Brockton resident who is assistant chief of adult probation at Brockton District Court. "I've played this tournament every year, have always been in the hunt, but couldn't get over the hump until today."

Dennis Almeida and Gary Cronin took second place in the field division (66-71-74-211).

Course record

Michael Welch of Quincy did not win the Rhode Island Open at Quidnessett Country Club in North Kingstown, R.I., last week, but he did something amazing. He set a course record. A day earlier, Joe Cone carded a 65 and tied the lowest competitive round in the 50-year history of the course, set at the 1979 Open by Joe Carr. But Welch strung together an 8-under 64 in the final round to finish in third place behind Elliott and Cone. Welch, who was second in the Hooters Tour Victoria Texas Open, one shot behind winner Ryan Henry, is fourth on the Hooters Tour's money list . . . If Geoff Sisk is going to make the transition from the PGA Nationwide Tour to the PGA Tour, he needs a couple of high finishes. He's 75th on the list right now, but all it takes is a hot streak to turn it around. Sisk picked up a third at Chiquita Classic at TPC River's Bend in Cincinnati last month with rounds of 69, 65, 66, 66 making 24 birdies and only two bogies along the way. If anything, a solid finish helps the confidence heading into the PGA Tour Qualifying School, which begins in a few weeks.

Crosswinds

What is in your bag?
I have a Taylor Made driver and 3-wood, 3- and 4- Taylor Made hybrids. I carried 5 through pitching wedge Taylor Made Tour Burner irons, a Taylor Made wedge and a Ping Anser putter I've had for years.

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights).
My best round wasn't my best score, but it was under pressure in terrible conditions. I was playing in the final round of the Ouimet Memorial Tournament at Woodland in the pouring rain. I had a one-stroke lead over (two-time State Amateur champion) Steve Tasho and I shot a 74 to win the championship. In the first round I had a 73 at The Country Club in Brookline and I shot a 68 at Charles River in the second round, but this was my best.

If you could be in a dream foursome, who would be in it?
I'd love to be in a foursome with Gary Player, Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino.

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you were, and how the game attracted you).
I moved to Brockton when I was 10 and we lived near Thorny Lea. I started caddying there for something to do. Vinnie del Zoppo was one of the professionals and he was very good to me. He gave me plenty of free lessons. I used to caddie for (another two-time State Amateur champion) John Tosca Jr. and his father and learned a lot watching them. That hooked me on the game for life.

What is your favorite golf course (and why?) besides your current club?
I played a few great courses in Ireland, but my favorite courses around here . . . I'd go with Plymouth Country Club over Thorny Lea. It's a par 69 and it looks short, but it isn't. It's a great test of golf.

What's the best golf tip you ever received?
I would say on takeaway, don't let the club head inside your hands or behind your hands.

What makes your home golf course special?
Crosswinds is a great layout. It's really a public course with private club conditions and we have everything you would want, a great driving range, putting and chipping area. And it's in great condition. And what's important to most golfers, the price is right. It's a bargain.

Widow's Walk GC is unique

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Course of the Week

I will not forget my first round at Widow's Walk Golf Course in Scituate.

It was Opening Day and it was something special. I got paired with a flaming liberal who was mad at me for the entire 18 holes.

First, he was furious because it didn't bother me that Bill Parcells called often-injured wide receiver Terry Glenn, "she."

Second, he couldn't believe I didn't agree with him that wife-beating Red Sox Wil Codero should have been banned from baseball.

It wasn't fun.

But I did have more fun with another one of our playing partners, Larry Moulter.

He ran the old FleetCenter and he also ran out of golf balls.

He lost 20-something balls trying to negotiate the wetlands, bridges and brush that made Widow's Walk the toughest course I've ever played.

Nevertheless, it was fun.

It wasn't really that goofy golf.

Simply, it wasn't fair to judge a course the day it opens.

It's like judging a beauty contest for newborns.

Widow's Walk Golf Course

They need time to mature and Widow's Walk has matured magnificently.

It has been softened and you can actually play 18 holes without losing a single ball.

Designed by the nationally known Ohio-based architect, Dr. Michael Hurdzan, Widow's Walk was built on 100 acres of an abandoned sand and gravel quarry that was long devoid of vegetation and wildlife.

The quarry was used to build the runways at Logan Airport.

Hurdzan tried to do something special, making America's first "environmental demonstration course," Widow's Walk opened to much fanfare and national acclaim 13 years ago.

The media fell in love with it. Golf Digest named it one of the "Best New Golf Courses in America" in 1998 and put in on the list of top courses to play.

Today, it is a much better golf course and a lot fairer than when it opened.

Areas have been cleared out.

However, it remains a unique course.

It is still target golf. It's not a grip-in-and-rip-it playground.

Pick a target and aim for it.

I usually tried to hit the fairway, 150 or 100 yards from the green to give myself a good approach shot.

It doesn't demand John Daly length off the tee, but it does require that you hit the ball straight.

You probably won't post your best score ever here because of the number of hazards you face.

But it is a great place for a match, where you are not concerned with beating the golf course, but trying to beat your opponent.

There are great match play holes. There are short par-4s you will try to drive and par-5s you'll want to birdie.

All of the par-3s are the sort of tee shots you hit and hold your breath until the ball stops.

Scituate deserves five stars to making the needed improvements to this course instead of simply using it as a source of income for the town.

Middleboro, Carver, and Freetown. Positive test results in bird-biting mosquitoes were found in Halifax, Lakeville, Mattapoisett, Middleboro, Rochester, Duxbury, Plympton, Fairhaven, Hanson, New Bedford, Carver, Freetown, Raynham, and Kingston. Two horses have died from EEE infection this year, the first in Middleboro earlier this summer and most recently, one in Warren.

The last human case of the disease in Massachusetts came in 2008. Between 2004 and 2006, six people died and seven others became infected, including former Old Rochester Regional (Mattapoisett) football star Derek Ashworth. He played for the Middleboro Cobras, a semi-pro football team, and said he believes that he contracted EEE after one of his games with the Cobras.

Some towns have yet to face a ban, including Marshfield, according to Marshfield Head Football Coach and Athletic Director Lou Silva.

"In past years we've been asked to be careful and to get off the fields earlier," Silva said. "We're usually done around 4:30/5 o'clock."

Aerial spraying took place late last week up through Sunday, and the towns sprayed with a pesticide to kill mosquitoes included Lakeville, Bridgewater, Carver, Halifax, Pembroke, Duxbury, Kingston, Plympton, Middleborough, Rochester, Raynham, and Acushnet. The plan also calls for the planes to cover parts of East Bridgewater, Hanson, Mattapoisett, New Bedford, Marion, Fairhaven, Dartmouth, Freetown, Berkley, Taunton, Easton, Norton, West Bridgewater, Plymouth, and Wareham.

Governor Deval Patrick said last week at a news conference in Lakeville, "The levels of [EEE] are higher than we've seen in decades. It's a major public health concern. The spraying will only decrease the risk of the virus; it will not eliminate it. This is an important step in our fight against mosquito-borne illness, but it's not the only one."

Plymouth County Mosquito Control Superintendent Anthony Texeira said Monday that official results of how effective the aerial spraying won't be known until later this week, however, he believes the spraying helped lower the number of mosquitoes considerably.

"It looks like it's going to be very effective," he said. "It looks like a good reduction in the range we wanted."

Even though the spraying looks like it eliminated a significant amount of mosquitoes, Texeira cautioned that the threat of EEE is still there.

"It does reduce the risk, but it doesn't eliminate the risk. We need to be careful that people don't get a false sense of security," Texeira said. "Dusk to dawn is when they're most active, but it's cloudy and wet during the day, mosquitoes are flying.'

Texeira said the main reason EEE surfaced earlier than normal was due to the extremely wet spring and the record-high temperatures this summer. The recent relatively dry stretch of weather has helped, Texeira said.

"Right now, we're lucky with the lack of rain," he said. "We're trying to stop the amplification of the virus. We might have to wait until the first frost, which is usually around Oct. 15 or later."

Texeira also said there's a threat of West Nile Virus, particularly after the disease was recently found in Halifax. But, Texeira pointed out the Halifax case involved a bird-biting mosquito, not one that would affect humans if they were bit.

"Will was just overmatched," Nestel said. "But it was a good experience for him. He's also improved tremendously. He's one of the better players on his high school team. He's a smart kid, a very coachable student. He'll do well."

Nestel said he was pleased with the way the first season worked out.

"It was a pretty good season for a first time around," Nestel said. "I'd like to keep it going. The kids had a great time."

Covering the arts has been a pleasure

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

For the past two years, I have had the opportunity to write the Cohasset schools arts column for the Cohasset Mariner. In my capacity as your intrepid arts reporter, I have attended nearly every art show, concert, performance, and arts-related event put on within the Cohasset school system. I have enjoyed attending, and writing about these events, getting to know the arts faculty through interviews and profiles and seeing the arts up close at every grade level.

I have written columns on all kinds of exhibits of visual arts. I have seen some of the most creative works of art at Eat Your Art, from models of board games to busts sculpted from cake. I have attended several spring art shows, which showcase students' visual arts development over each school year. These exhibitions have always been particularly impressive. The Osgood May Arts Night, for example, has always been very creative. The 2009 theme "Art in Books," tied together not only art and literature, but dance, music, and other forms of performing art. Deer Hill School's Favorites Night, which has been running for 18 years, has given the Cohasset community a look at the kinds of projects the students are doing and the artistic skills they have learned along the way. The Cohasset High School Fine Arts Night shows more mature student artwork. All of the pieces, particularly the displays of some of the seniors' portfolios, sum up the progress that students have made through the visual arts instruction programs from the Osgood School to the time of graduation.

While writing my column, I have attended an equally wide variety of performing arts events. I have attended holiday concerts featuring students of all ages, which never fail to leave me, and the rest of the audience, in the holiday spirit. I have seen and written about a number of plays. The Deer Hill students have produced two consecutive musicals – Aladdin and Mulan – both of which were incredibly well-received by the audiences. The Cohasset High School students have competed in the Massachusetts Theater Guild Competition for the past two years — in 2009, they put on the touching story of romance, hardship, and sisterhood Crimes of the Heart, and in 2010, the students performed Check Please, a hilarious comedy about speed dating. Both plays ranked well in the competition. One of the highlights in the performing arts department was the unforgettable musical West Side Story.

I have also attended band and chorus concerts at every level of the schools, from the Deer Hill Band and choruses to the High School band and chorus performances. I have seen literally several hundred students in musical performances over the last two years. I have particularly enjoyed the annual Jazz Night and have never ceased to be amazed at the creative repertoire.

However, in my opinion, the event that best encapsulates the spirit of the arts in Cohasset has always been All School Band Day. There is something particularly inspiring about seeing all of the student musicians in the Town coming together for one concert. The concert features musicians of all ages, from fourth grade students who have picked up their instruments for the first time less than six months earlier to accomplished high school seniors, who will hopefully continue to involve themselves in the arts in their future education and beyond. In all, nearly 400 students – by any measure the largest single activity within the school system – are assembled across the length of the High School gymnasium.

The best feature of the All School Band program is that, during the day before the concert, all of the students got together to rehearse, go to clinics to improve their skills, and the older students have the opportunity to tutor the younger ones. It is the coming together as a community that makes all school band day such a standout event. The final component of the All School Band that makes it shine is the audience that comes to the concert to show their support. The crowd is not merely composed of parents; it includes friends, siblings, teachers, faculty, staff, members of the School Committee, and staff from the Cohasset Mariner. Even before I began writing for the Mariner, there were always pictures a brief story about All School Band Day. This shows how dedicated the town of Cohasset is to the arts and, particularly in these difficult economic times, that counts now more than ever.

Cohasset has always been dedicated to the arts, as seen from the strong support shown by the community to the school arts programs. However, once again the budget cuts are being discussed. In these difficult times, tough choices must be made. However, let us not deprive the students of the opportunity to become fully involved in the arts. I hope that my successor may have just as much to see and to write about as I have had for the past two years.

I sincerely hope that the residents of Cohasset will continue to show as much support of the arts as they have during the past two years when I have been recording it. As long as support is given, these students will continue to amaze audiences with their musical talents, artistic abilities, and showmanship.

It has been a pleasure to observe and report these displays of talent and their warm receptions from the Town. I would like to thank my Cohasset band teachers, Steve Biagini and Stephanie Moriarty, for their work with me, as I pack my trumpet in my gear to take to Fordham University this fall. I would also like to thank Mary Ford, my editor, for the opportunity to invent — and then to write — this column. Finally, and most of all, thank you for reading, and your continued support of the arts. Good night and good luck.

Kathryn Hillman is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy and will be studying art history at Fordham University this year.

Local carver keeps art alive

The Hingham Historical Society Annex will be home to a decoy-carving workshop taught by Bob Mosher on Aug. 14 and 21. The workshops are offered through a grant funded by the National Endowment for the Arts awarded to the Ward Museum of Wildfowl Art at Salisbury University in Maryland to support the project, "Carving Out Future Decoy Carvers." This project seeks to preserve, promote and present the decoy carving traditions of the United States. Bob is the only Massachusetts carver among the 16 master decoy carvers chosen throughout the US to teach students from their communities.

The project culminates each fall in the Chesapeake Wildfowl Expo on the grounds of the Ward Museum next to Schumaker Pond in Salisbury, Md. The Expo is an opportunity for carvers and collectors to meet, exhibit their decoys and compete for ribbons and prizes. The decoys completed in the carving workshops will be entered into The Chesapeake Challenge held on Oct. 8 and 9.

The public is welcome to view the carvers at work from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Hingham Historical Society Annex is located behind Old Ordinary at 21 Lincoln St., Hingham. Parking is available at the site and on-street. Bob will have some of his own work on display along with antique decoys from the Hingham area. Hingham was a major center of decoy carving at the turn of the 20th century. Decoys by Hingham carvers Joe Lincoln, Elisha Burr and Russ Burr are highly collectible and command exorbitant prices at auction.

Bob is a frequent winner at the Ward World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition in Ocean City, Md., last year placing first in the Contemporary Antique category. He has also won Best of Show ribbons at the New England Woodcarving and Wildlife Art Expo in Connecticut. Bob's work has appeared in the major decoy auctions, and he was one of three contemporary carvers to display his work at the Duxbury Art Complex Museum. Last winter Bob was chosen to give the decoy carving demonstration at the Massachusetts Audubon Visual Art Center during their prestigious A. Elmer Crowell Exhibition.

Not only a carver, Bob is also an avid collector of New England decoys. He lectures on the "Art of Traditional Decoy Carving" and "The History of Decoys." His considerable expertise comes from a boyhood spent duck hunting over decoys by some of Hingham's finest carvers, and years of research on the history of decoy carving and hunting. Bob has judged at The New England Woodcarving and Wildlife Art Exposition and the Ward World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition.

Donate blood on Aug. 16

The summer months are typically a time when blood donations tend to drop 10 to 15 percent due to travel, planned activities, and the absence of high school and college blood drives. This makes maintaining the blood supply even more challenging.

The American Red Cross and the Derby Street Shoppes are partnering to help ensure that blood is available for patients in need this August. Donate blood on Monday, Aug. 16 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at The Derby Street Shoppes, 98 Derby St., Suite 413, next to Coldwater Creek and save up to three lives. Donate blood during the month of August and receive a coupon for a box of six chocolate covered strawberries from Edible Arrangements.

Make an appointment by visiting www.redcrossbood.org or calling1-800-Red Cross.

To prepare for your blood donation: bring a photo ID and a list of medications you are taking; Be well hydrated – drink extra water the day before and day of donation and have something to eat before donating.

Tips for attending August 17 College Fair at Regis College

By Wanda E. Suriel
REGIS COLLEGE

Are you ready to take a ride into the college search process? On Tuesday, Aug. 17 from 6 to 8 p.m., Regis College, WickedLocal.com and GateHouse Media New England are sponsoring a College Fair at Regis College, 235 Wellesley St., Weston.

At the College Fair, admissions representatives from colleges and universities across New England, as well as financial aid and college prep organizations, will be on hand to answer questions and offer information. Visit www.wickedlocal.com/collegefair for list of exhibitors at the College Fair.

Now, if you have never navigated a college fair, be prepare to connect, engage in conversation and walk away with more information than you ever imagined. Attending a college fair is your opportunity to interview a college or university and do a preliminary evaluation of an institution's fit for you.

The objective of a college fair is to allow students and parents the opportunity to gain additional information. It is encouraged for students and families to come prepared. Here are a few tips:

- Have a plan of action! Research colleges and universities you are interested in connecting with before arriving.

CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

Stop by Regis College, above, from 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 17, to meet college representatives from schools across New England.

Visit them during the fair to ask your specific questions. Be sure to save time for schools you may have never heard of. There are many different types of institutions, so it may be most beneficial to be open-minded. Some examples are what type of campus, large or small; what type of institution, public or private; geographic location, in state or out of state? The opportunities are endless. Find out what's your best fit.

- Think about the five most important factors for you. It's OK to think outside the box. It's not always about GPA and SATs, but searching for qualities that are associated with your interests.
- Parents, let your son or daughter be in the driver's seat. Recommendations are highly encouraged, but let them begin to take ownership of their destination. Your son or daughter may want to walk around and talk to college representative on their own.
- Be calm. College representatives are very personable and are more than willing to help you as you navigate this college search process.
- Prepare and save time: Make labels with your demographic information which you can adhere to any institution's inquiry card. Labels should include: first and last name, address, city, state, zip, telephone number, e-mail address, gender, date of birth, current high school or college you attend, year of high school graduation, academic and or athletic interest(s). Be sure to create a professional e-mail address which would encompass a combination of your first and last name i.e. J.Smith@gmail.com; Jsmith11@aol.com.
- Don't forget to bring a pen and paper or a notebook with you so you can take notes on the different colleges. You don't want them to all blur together at the end of the evening. Consider bringing a bag for all of the materials you will be collecting in case the fair does not provide one.
- Make sure you wear comfortable shoes and clothing. You will be walking, standing and talking.

At the end of the college fair, think collectively about the information you have gathered. Follow up with schools that meet your interests or, if you have more questions, e-mail the representative you met at the college fair.

If possible, connect with a student at the institution, discuss your interested colleges and universities with your parents and secondary school counselor, arrange a campus visit, and attend an open house or information session. Keep in mind a college fair is just one of the many ways to conduct your college search. Enjoy the ride!

Financial aid do's and don'ts

By Dee J. Ludwick
REGIS COLLEGE

The process of applying for financial aid has often been compared to the dreaded process of filing your income tax return.

The U.S. Department of Education created a Free Application for Federal Student Aid that parents and students use to apply for federal, state and college aid. This one form can be used by dependent students, independent students, graduate students and part-time students. The FAFSA is available online www.fafsa.gov.

It has several sections to complete and a multitude of questions to answer and can be signed electronically with a Personal Identity Number. After the FAFSA is submitted to the Central Processing Center a Student Aid Report (SAR) Acknowledgement will be sent to the applicant. The SAR has a comment section, lists the schools that received the information and calculates the Estimated Family Contribution. The EFC is the amount that the FAFSA has determined a family can pay or finance for a year of education.

The following is a list of helpful hints for families and students:

Do's

- Do read college application materials to know deadline dates, and if the college requires a financial aid institutional form or CSS Profile form.
- Do apply on time.
- Do apply online and sign with PIN, both student and parent.
- Do use estimated tax return information to meet deadline.
- Do check for accuracy.
- Do read the comment section on the Student Aid Report (SAR) Acknowledgement.
- Do use the Federal Student Aid help online or call 800-433-3243.
- Do call your college's financial aid office if you have questions.

Don'ts

- Don't pay to process your FAFSA; www.fafsa.gov is a free service.
- Don't wait until you have filed your taxes; use estimated amounts on FAFSA.
- Don't forget to sign the FAFSA before it is submitted.
- Don't give your PIN number to anyone; protect it like your Social Security number.
- Don't forget to apply for outside scholarships in your community or online.
- Don't trust that a friend or relative has the correct financial aid answers. Call your high school guidance office, college financial aid office or the Federal Student Aid Information Center.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 23, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A relaxed mood early in the week could give way to high-temperature disputes. The Aries Lamb should resist being pulled into heated quarrels that could really singe your wool.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Satisfy that practical obligation first, then you can feel free to indulge in your creative endeavors. Also, check for hidden or overlooked areas where repairs might be long overdue.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Home is still the Twins' major focus this week. But outside matters begin to take on added importance, especially those involving possible career moves. Stay alert for signs of change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A travel plan might need to undergo some considerable adjustment because of unexpected changes. Keep an open mind and let the facts guide you on how you want to handle this.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Playing cat and mouse with a matter you don't really want to tackle wastes time, energy and, most important, an opportunity. Ask someone with experience to help you get started.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A shift in policy might not please you, but before you put up a "No Go" wall of resistance, examine the circumstances. You might be quite pleasantly surprised by what you find.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Yesterday's critiques about your methods might have already evolved into today's praise for your achievements. Good for you. Now go on and continue to build on your credibility.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An occasional temperamental flare-up might occur as you continue to help get things back to normal. Stay with it. You should soon get some idea of where to take things next.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A negative reaction to what you believe was a well-deserved request might mean that you need to reconsider your position and make changes accordingly.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) There's always room for someone new at the Sea Goat's table. And the someone new this week could bring a message you've been waiting a long time to hear.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A pile-on of personal matters this week might seem too overwhelming to deal with. But handling them on a one-by-one basis could have you out from under it by the weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A friend might need your good advice regarding a matter. Be supportive. But unless you can be absolutely sure you have all the facts, be careful about any suggestions you might be asked to offer.

BORN THIS WEEK: Few things make you happier than bringing people together and helping to forge new friendships.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Hingham Vintage Base Ball Club Fall Classic

Hingham Vintage Base Ball Club's annual Fall Classic will take place on Sept. 11. Being the ninth anniversary of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, the theme for the game will be how baseball has played a role in helping the nation through difficult times. The game will be played to help both the Hingham Police Department and Hingham Fire Department.

Military veterans are being sought to tell their stories of both listening to and playing baseball abroad, especially during World War II, as well as to participate in the game's opening ceremonies.

For more information email Gary Nisbet at dotgallery@comcast.net or call 781-740-4111.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Dr. Luke George Tedeschi

Dr. Luke George Tedeschi

SCITUATE – Dr. Luke George Tedeschi, of Scituate, Ma., a forensic scientist and former chief pathologist at MetroWest Medical Center in Framingham, spent a career travelling the country and the world solving puzzling murder cases, fighting third world oppression and was also a key figure in the Boston area medical community where he was a Clinical Professor of Pathology at Boston University School of Medicine.

Dr. Tedeschi, age 75, died peacefully at Linden Ponds in Hingham on August 5 due to complications following a heroic 18-year battle with Parkinson's Disease.

Much of his professional life was spent using his medical knowledge to solve criminal and human rights violations. As a member of the watchdog group Amnesty International, Dr. Tedeschi used his medical expertise to help those less fortunate and often travelled to international conferences to show how scientific evidence can be used to indict those responsible for human rights violations.

As part of a scientific delegation invited to Argentina in 1984, Dr. Tedeschi assisted the Argentine government with its investigation into the human remains of those victims who "disappeared" as a result of political repression in Argentina following 1976-83 military coup that resulted in the deaths of up to 25,000 people during that country's "dirty war."

"What happens is we become so complacent with it (human rights abuse) that it becomes a part of our daily lives," said Dr. Tedeschi after his trip to Argentina resulted in nine generals going on trial for torturing, kidnapping and killing thousands. "What does the average person do about it? Absolutely nothing...It bothers me so you try to do what little you can to see if you can make any kind of impact on it."

Following his retirement in 1994, Dr. Tedeschi served as a volunteer for Pathologists Oversees in Kenya helping a small group of Catholic mission hospitals.

Born in Modena, Italy on November 1, 1934, Dr. Tedeschi moved to the United States when he was 4 years old and eventually settled in Framingham, Ma., where he enjoyed a 30 year career at Framingham Union Hospital, now known as MetroWest Medical Center.

After graduating from the Salisbury School in 1952, Dr. Tedeschi received his B.S. in Economics from the Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania in 1956 and his medical degree from Jefferson Medical College in 1960.

Dr. Tedeschi served as a Lieutenant in the United States Navy, serving as a Pathologist at Camp Pendleton, Ca., from 1962-1964. Following his stint in the navy, Dr. Tedeschi returned to Framingham to work alongside his father, Dr. Cesare Tedeschi, who at that time was the Chief of Pathology at Framingham Union Hospital. When his father retired in 1970, Luke took over as the Chief of Pathology at Framingham Union Hospital, a position he held until his retirement in 1994 at the age of 59. Dr. Tedeschi also was elected to the Framingham Board of Health, where he served for 15 years.

After a seven year stint serving as the Associate Medical Examiner for Middlesex Country, Dr. Tedeschi was appointed by then Governor Michael Dukakis to become the Chief Medical Examiner of Middlesex County in 1977, a position he held for 10 years solving crimes using forensic evidence in the MetroWest region.

During his career, Dr. Tedeschi published nearly 100 medical articles on forensic science and along with his father and Dr. William Eckart published what became known as the definitive three-volume book in forensic medicine called: "Forensic Medicine - A Study in Trauma and Environmental Hazards."

At his retirement party, Dr. Joel Rankin, a colleague at the time, commented: "Luke is an outstanding individual. I think his fortes are his interactions with people. He is an absolutely suburb teacher. Students enjoyed his lectures. He's a fantastic pathologist and very much understands the clinicians. I have always loved his interaction with his kids, he gave them free rein with limits - and with love."

Outside of medicine, Dr. Tedeschi was a avid tennis player and on most days if he wasn't at the hospital he could be found at the Sudbury River Tennis Club in Framingham, where he won numerous club championships. Dr. Tedeschi was often ranked within the top 10 of his age group in the New England tennis circuits.

Following his retirement, Dr. Tedeschi moved to Cohasset and later to Scituate to be closer to his sons and eight grandchildren who had all settled on the South Shore. Dr. Tedeschi also became an avid artist during retirement enjoying his true passion: painting the many beautiful sceneries he came across near his home and during his many travels. He was also quick to put a put a brush and pad in front of his grandchildren during family visits encouraging them to take up the hobby.

He leaves his loving wife Elaine of 32 years, brother John and wife Anne of Wisconsin as well as his three sons Mark and wife Laurie of Hingham, Paul and his wife Jill of Cohasset, Peter and his wife Sarah of Cohasset, and a step-son Adam Jonath of Hawaii. He also leaves eight grandchildren, Luke, Brittney, Trevor, Justin, Brendan, Cameron, Jackson and Drea.

A celebration of life was held on August 11 at 11 AM at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. An open reception to follow at the Hatherly Country Club on Hatherly Road in Scituate immediately following. In lieu of flowers, donations in Luke's memory may be made to the JETT Foundation, which is fighting to find a cure for muscular dystrophy and neuromuscular diseases. The Jett Foundation, 42 Elm St, Kingston, MA 02364.

Many happy returns

Tony Bennett prepares for another Music Circus show

By: R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Now marking his 60th anniversary as a recording artist, Tony Bennett has amassed more than enough laurels to rest comfortably, charting at least four million-selling records every decade since the 1950s — all on Columbia Records, now Sony — and earning 15 Grammy Awards including, not surprisingly, one for Lifetime Achievement. But on the telephone last week with Town Commons — the day after celebrating his 84th birthday at home in Manhattan with third wife, Susan Crow — to talk about his long career, which on Saturday will include a return to the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, it was clear that Bennett has no plans to slow down anytime soon.

Town Commons: How did you celebrate your birthday?

Tony Bennett: I was at home with my wife. We had a quiet dinner and then the telephone started ringing. Friends and family from all over called to wish me "Happy Birthday." I was surprised to hear from so many people, but it was very nice.

TC: While an executive at Columbia, legendary record producer Mitch Miller, who passed away on July 31 at age 99, was very influential in your early career. Miller is often criticized for having his biggest artists record novelty songs. What are your memories of him?

TB: Mitch Miller established me as a recording artist first with "Because of You" and then with many hits that followed, like "Rags to Riches" and "I Wanna Be Around." In the 1950s, almost every song we did together sold in the millions. Mitch had a tough job, because Frank Sinatra quit Columbia and went to Capitol Records after he and Mitch disagreed over what songs Sinatra should record. With Sinatra gone, Mitch very much wanted me to stay at Columbia and be his Italian male singer of standards. I was a jazz singer, though, and Mitch didn't like jazz. Mitch liked only Errol Garner and no other jazz artists. He didn't like Count Basie or Duke Ellington or any of them. Personally, I liked Mitch and I respected his education. He graduated from the Eastman School of Music. He was really a classical oboist before anything else. At Columbia, he just wanted to make money. He knew I hated novelty songs, so he gave me songs like "Blue Velvet." I was selling a lot of records, so I was allowed to do what I wanted. And, away from music, Mitch and I always got along very well.

Tony Bennett returns to the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, Saturday, Aug. 14.

TC: Frank Sinatra called you "the best singer in the business." Who inspired you and who are you listening to these days?

TB: Sinatra was 10 years older than me and he was always very good to me. I had, and have, a great deal of respect for him. I consider myself an entertainer, inspired by people like Louis Armstrong and Mildred Bailey who are two of my favorites. I like musicians who have integrity and who won't sing a cheap song. When I listen to music, it's usually Bill Evans, Miles Davis, Dizzie Gillespie or classical music. I also love Nat King Cole. I don't mind listening to my own stuff either, especially when it's with people like Nelson Riddle, Johnny Mandel, Stan Getz, and Bobby Hackett. They're some of the best musicians you could ever want to work with.

TC: You're not only an acclaimed singer, but also a highly respected artist with paintings on display in the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History and National Portrait Gallery. Would you ever choose between painting and singing?

TB: I could never make that choice, because I have to sing and I have to paint. I like impressionistic art and impressionistic music. I have a very strong passion for both.

TC: To what do you attribute your longevity?

TB: When you keep studying and learning, you don't get old. It's important, too, that you're still serous about what you're doing. I was lucky that when I came home from World War II, I was able to study at the American Theater Wing under the GI Bill. It was at the Theater Wing that I learned bel canto. It has been an excellent discipline that has kept my voice in good shape all these years. The audience is my teacher, too, because they tell me what they like and what they want to hear. My greatest enjoyment is going out and entertaining. I'm also anti-demographic—the whole family comes to my shows. The way I see it, I'm stealing money when I get paid for a concert. I've never worked a day in my life — I love what I do that much.

All Harrington as Miranda, Michael Fisher as Prospero, in "The Tempest".

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Director Julie Taymor's gender-switching new film version of "The Tempest," starring Academy Award winner Helen Mirren ("The Queen") as Prospera, doesn't arrive in theaters until December. If you can't wait until then, and don't mind packing your own popcorn or perhaps even a picnic supper, then you might want to head to the Myles Standish Monument State Reservation this weekend when Gurnet Theatre Project will present a more traditional take on "The Tempest."

With a nod to Boston's Shakespeare on the Common, Duxbury-based producer Brian C. Fahey has chosen the decidedly less urban oasis of the historic State Reservation for Gurnet's sixth annual summer of free outdoor theatre, which runs through Sunday.

The majestic Duxbury setting, 200 feet above sea level and with views of Duxbury Beach, Plymouth Harbor, and the Blue Hills to the northwest, provides the perfect backdrop for Shakespeare's story of the banished sorcerer Prospero and the storm he uses to force his enemies to the shores of his island exile. As fans of the Bard know, the island is a kind of middle world where society is turned upside down and the future placed in the hands of two young lovers.

Director Michael Duncan Smith has assembled a 12-person company which includes local actors Andrew Adler and Alexander Munoz of Marshfield, and Brockton's Kenny Stevens Fuentes, for "The Tempest," which – whether a man or woman plays the lead – offers something interesting for audiences of all ages.

Gurnet Theatre Project will present free outdoor performances of "The Tempest" at the Myles Standish Monument State Reservation, Crescent Street, Duxbury, Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 5:30 p.m. No reservations are required. For more information, visit gurnettheatre.com.

A Facebook post has cost a member of the Cohasset Public School administration her job.

Earlier this week, several parents discovered the Facebook profile of Dr. June Talvitie-Siple, program supervisor for the science and mathematics department, and found several of what they viewed as inappropriate comments.

The public profile was brought to the attention of Superintendent Denise Walsh and the School Committee via e-mail on Monday afternoon.

"I didn't think it was a public Facebook page."

Using common sense on Facebook: page 11.

According to School Committee members, by Tuesday afternoon, Walsh, who is on vacation and out of the country, requested and received Siple's resignation.

The sequence of events has caused a firestorm of media coverage drawing several of the television stations to town on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Siple's public Facebook page, available to anyone searching for her name, had two posts, in particular, that drew attention.

Mandatory water ban starts Monday

Handheld only outdoor watering

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Due to the lack of significant rainfall, the Water Commission is taking the water ban to the next step.

Effective on Monday (Aug. 23), Cohasset Water users are restricted to handheld outdoor watering for the foreseeable future.

The Water Commission took this next step at their meeting Tuesday night. It is the first time in recent history that Cohasset Water has called for a mandatory water ban. Since the end of July, a voluntary water ban, which asked water users to conserve and limit outdoor water use, was instituted.

Violators will be given a warning, a $50 fine for the first offense and a $100 fine for the second and subsequent offenses.

This mandatory water ban will be enforced and fines will be given to violators, the Water Commission said.

According to the water department's permit water bans are required if the reservoir (water supply) is too low or if the precipitation has been significantly below the norm.

In this case, the decision to go to the next rung on the water ban ladder was driven by the lack of precipitation. Rainfall for the past three months has been below 65 percent of the normal rainfall for the area. However, the level of the reservoir is nearly at the point where action would need to taken.

"We are not far away from doing it because of the reservoir," Water Commission chair Chris Seebeck said. The Aaron River Reservoir, which feeds Lily Pond, has about 330 days of water left. It is about 61 percent of total capacity.

It is estimated, based on similar drought circumstances in 2007, that is will take until January for the reservoir to be back to full capacity.

Lagrotteria siblings face off in 100-yard dash

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Who is the fastest Lagrotteria on two feet?

On Wednesday, August 11 the world found out. But, what may be more important is the brothers and sisters, who readily admit their competitive nature with each other, found out.

At precisely 6p.m. 8 of the 11 Lagrotteria siblings, all of whom grew up in Cohasset, gathered at Cohasset Common. The intent was to crown the fastest Lagrotteria. The 11 Lagrotteria children now range in age from 36 to 53. They are the children of Dorothy and the late Jim Lagrotteria.

Amid smack talking and teasing the racecourse was set: a 100-yard dash on the asphalt next to the Common. Brother-in-law Sport Sease acted as the official timer.

"It was a very simple set-up," Barbara Lagrotteria said.

Though it may have seemed a simple race, the emotions tied into the results were high.

The idea for a race was born out of a specific rivalry between a brother and sister, Greg and Barbara.

"Legend has it that my brother Greg has been calling himself the 'fastest Lag on two feet,'" said sister Ann Marie Lagrotteria of Quincy.

Barbara in the last few weeks called Greg out on that contention.

"(My brother) Greg has long proclaimed being the fastest Lagrotteria. And he had no right to declare it. He never raced against all of us," Barbara said.

A one-on-one race between Barbara and Greg was held recently – and Barbara lost. That loss prompted Barbara to call on all her brothers and sisters in the area for a race to determine the "fastest" in the family once and for all.

"I beat her badly, and then next thing I knew there was a race scheduled," Greg said of the race. He maintains that until the race he was the fastest Lagrotteria.

"To suggest we are a competitive family is a huge understatement," Greg said.

The Lagrotterias came to the competition with different levels of running and athletic ability. Some came decked out in athletic gear; others were dressed more for the post-race dinner at Ava Cucina.

One sister showed up in the dress, another in a silk blouse and white dress shorts. But, they all had one thing in common – sneakers.

"There were no excuses, everyone knew it was happening and everyone had sneakers," Barbara said.

When the gun went off the eight Lagrotterias sprinted for the finish line with all they had.

The youngest of the 11, Carlo, 36, beat out seven of his brothers and sisters to claim the title "Fastest Lag on Two Feet."

POLICE BEAT

Norwell woman refuses to take traffic ticket from officer

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 65-year-old Norwell woman, who was driving a 2010 BMW X5 SUV and was in a hurry to make her Pilates class, refused to accept a traffic ticket from a Cohasset police officer in the Town Parking Lot on Friday (Aug. 13).

A 54-year-old Hanover woman in an Acura reported to police at 10:30 a.m. that morning that after she turned from Doane Street onto Beechwood Street, the BMW came up behind her and began tailgating her. The Hanover woman told police she was traveling the speed limit when the BMW passed her on the wrong side of the road, pulled back into the lane and sped off. She provided police with the plate number of the BMW and the direction of travel.

A police officer saw the BMW pull into the Town Parking Lot at a high rate of speed. The officer spoke to the Norwell woman and issued her a $100 citation for passing in a no passing lane. (Police issued the ticket because the caller was willing to go on the record.)

At this point, the Norwell woman refused to accept the ticket in hand, so the officer put it under her windshield. She claimed the Acura was driving too slowly, "baiting" her to pass, police said. The Norwell woman also became angry and threatened to sue the Cohasset police.

OUI/arrest

A 24-year-old Quincy man, who told police he had been at a party in Hull, is facing drunken driving charges following a traffic stop at 1:24 a.m. on Sunday (Aug. 15) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near the train station.

An officer was on patrol near the MBTA station when a 1999 Honda Accord that was headed north, stopped at the traffic light on 3A in front of the station and then went through the light while it was still red.

The officer pulled the Honda over and detected an odor of alcoholic beverage. The Quincy man failed field sobriety tests and was placed under arrest for operating under the influence of alcohol; negligent operation and failure to stop at a traffic light.

Cooler stolen

On Monday (Aug. 9), a 48-year-old Cohasset man reported that someone had gone onto his 19-foot Boston Whaler that was docked behind Atlantica off Border Street and stole an Igloo cooler with about 35 cans of Bud Lite inside. The incident is under investigation.

Stop sign

Police pulled over a 1996 Ford Bronco after receiving a report from a cell caller that the vehicle went through the stop sign at Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue. The caller, who also reported seeing something like a CD being tossed out the window, provided the direction of travel and police stopped the Bronco on North Main Street by the ball fields. The 18-year-old Cohasset driver denied he had run the stop sign or that they had tossed something out the window. There were a total of three occupants in the SUV, police said. The call came in at 6:22 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 9).

Minor with alcohol

Police charged a 19-year-old Cohasset teen with being a minor in possession of alcohol after receiving a call from a concerned parent that he had had a verbal argument with his son who was trying to bring alcohol into the home with a friend. The call came in at 10:19 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 15). The son fled on foot before police arrived, but police were able to arrest the son's friend, who had a plastic jug with rum in his possession.

Unlicensed

A 59-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop at 12:52 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 10) on Beach Street. Police said an officer, who knew the motorist was unlicensed, stopped the Audi A-6 sedan. The car was towed.

Kayak missing

A 43-year-old Jerusalem Road resident called police at 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 11) to report that her yellow Malibu kayak valued at about $800 was missing. Also gone were two paddles and two juvenile life jackets, police said. The Cohasset woman believes the kayak was taken either Aug. 10 or Aug. 11.

Police said this is the third kayak taken in recent weeks. Previous incidents were on Norfolk Road and Beechwood Street. Police urge residents to keep their kayaks out of sight from the street.

Suspicious person

Police advised a Lamberts Lane resident to call back if the man described as being in his 40s, well dressed, operating an old dark-colored Toyota with no front plate, returned. The caller, who reported the incident at 4:25 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 13), said the man knocked on the door, showed a badge and asked about her neighbor. Police have not had any other reports of similar incidents.

Pants stolen

At 7:27 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 14) a 38-year-old Cohasset woman reported that her $90 lululemon yoga pants that are black with a pink stripe were taken from the Cohasset Swim Center earlier that day.

Loud group

A group of youths parked at the end of Doane Street near Wompatuck State Park checked out after police received a complaint at 3:21 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 15) that they were very loud and were cussing.

The 1999 Volvo was pulled over on Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road. The young people told police they did not realize they were being loud and disruptive. They were spoken to and sent on their way, police said.

Sunset view

A concerned caller reported at 8:08 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 15) seeing a vehicle with out of state plates parked at the top of Crocker Lane. Police followed up and found a group that had gone up the hill to see the sunset and Boston skyline. The manager of the business at the top of Crocker Lane was notified and was OK with them staying for a short time. One member of the group was from Cohasset.

Animal bite

A 56-year-old Cohasset woman went to the police station at 12:40 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 13) to report that another dog at the reservoir had attacked her dog. Her dog then bit the ear off the dog that attacked it.

Bear Hill access options being explored

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The search for a new access point for the Bear Hill tank is largely because is two wireless companies are interested in putting antennas on the water tank.

The Water Commission is looking at the Bear Hill water tank easement issue on multiple fronts.

At the August 9 meeting before the Board of Selectmen other options for the easement were brought forward by residents. Two alternative routes to access the tank – temporary or permanent – were discussed.

"We need to go through the exercise of (exploring) the options and mitigating the concerns raised," Chris Seebeck, water commission chairman said at the Tuesday meeting of the Water Commission.

The search for a new access point for the Bear Hill tank is largely because is two wireless companies are interested in putting antennas on the water tank. The construction vehicles for the project may not be able to negotiate the current access road over private property on Pleasant Street.

The two alternatives included creating an access behind the high school rear practice field and across town-owned land around the back of Milliken Field.

The first option would use the middle-high school parking lot as part of the access way and would need approval from the School Committee. The Water Commission was hoping to get on the agenda for the next School Committee meeting Sept. 1.

"I don't want to go back in front of (the neighborhood) without making a yeoman's effort to pursue other avenues," Seebeck said.

A closer look at the potential route showed a steep grade, which could be costly to build a road on. Steve May, , water department construction manager, sought out a rough estimate for gravel road which came back at about $19,000.

Because of the grade, and if the road was to be the permanent access to the water tank, Tom Keeffe, consulting engineer from Tutela, recommended paving at least a portion of the road. The paving would trigger stormwater and drainage issues, Keeffe said.

The other option discussed at the Selectmen's meeting is to build access on Milliken Field, near the tennis courts. The new access point would tie into the latter half of the current dirt access road. The construction estimate was $18,000. Seebeck said this would likely be a construction-only access.

While exploring these new options, the Water Commission is also seeking more information on their original access proposal to put an access road off Reservoir Road. The construction estimate for that road is $4,500.

The Water Commission authorized a traffic study (estimated at $1000) to look at the amount of vehicular traffic and possibly pedestrian traffic on Reservoir Road.

Steve May, water department construction manager, reminded the commission that the path off Reservoir Road was once used for about two years during the construction of the water tank.

"We would only be restoring something that was always there," May said.

Sewer odor drives couple from home

Smell is consequence of Little Harbor tie-in process

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In recent weeks a Beach Street couple has had to sleep in other places on several occasions because the smell was so strong and they worried for their health.

A complaint of sewer odors on Beach Street — one of the areas in the Little Harbor sewer project — arrived in the Sewer Commission office in mid-June.

In spite of some measures being taken in an attempt to resolve the sewage odors, as of last Friday the smell still permeated the area – and one house in particular.

In recent weeks a Beach Street couple has had to sleep in other places on several occasions because the smell was so strong and they worried for their health.

"Our home is your sanctuary; you should feel safe there," the homeowner said outside her home on Friday. The homeowners asked not to be named for privacy.

Last Friday morning, the Sewer Commission held a meeting solely devoted to resolving the odor issue on Beach Street. They met near a manhole on Beach Street with the Little Harbor project engineers, plumbers and residents.

It was the first time the Sewer Commission had discussed the issue in detail.

E-mails from the homeowners had been ratcheting up over the past few weeks as the odors got progressively worse — and no solution had come forward.

The first complaint about a sewage odor on Beach Street came in mid-June by another Beach Street resident. About a month later, on July 21, the Sewer Commission office at Town Hall got the first complaint from the house that has received the brunt of the odor problems over the last few weeks.

At the meeting on Friday, Sewer Commission Chairman John Beck said the engineers have been spent time trying to figure out the real cause of the odor, but there had been no resolution.

"There isn't any excuse for taking as long as it did. I have apologized profusely several times to the homeowners. Our intent is that these kind of issues get addresses promptly," Beck said. "It's not a simple cause…we're addressing it as quickly and prudently as we can."

In an e-mail sent by Beck on August 4 after receiving a lengthy e-mail from the Beach Street homeowner describing the odor and its disruption to her family's daily life, he instructed Dan Coughlin, the principal Little Harbor engineer, to "fix the damned problem!"

"This has gone on too long and has absolutely wreaked havoc with (the Beach Street homeowner's) ability to live in their house. This is a serious matter and it's our fault," Beck said at the meeting on Friday. "We want to come up with an intelligent way to solve the problem as we can and whatever it costs it costs."

The odor is coming largely from a manhole on Beach Street about 100 yards from the Common and a vent pipe located on the side of the street about 15 feet from the manhole. The true cause of the odor, as discussed at Friday's meeting, is the stagnant wastewater under the street due to the lack of flow in the section of the sewer system.

Out of the 94 eventual sewer system tie-ins in this area, less than 20 have made their connection.

"To achieve sufficient flushing or the lack of delay in the system we need more connections," said Dan Coughlin, Little Harbor sewer project consulting engineer. Yet, that is not happening in the near future. Only three more connections are slated in this area for the fall.

In the original proposal Coughlin Engineering sought to have a more structured phase-in of sewer connections. Residents would have been required to hook into the system in small groups starting with homes closest to the established sewer system. Yet, the phase-in process was changed in response to some residents' desire to hook up immediately and others to hook up later.

The lack of flow creates a long residence time for the wastewater in the system and creates an environment where foul-smelling bacteria can grow, Coughlin said. When the water reached the point underneath the manhole, when it goes from a closed pipe to open topped pipe the gases that have been built up are released.

The manhole is where the pressurized sewer system of Little Harbor meets the gravity system of the central sewer district.

To alleviate the odor issues inside the home on most affected on Beach Street a temporary fix has been made. Last week (August 12) the Board of Health allowed the Beach Street residents to install a "temporary running trap" to mitigate the odor inside the home. The measure is temporary until more connections are made to the sewer main.

The Sewer Commission plans to pay the cost and installation of the running trap, which should stop the odors from getting into the house.

In an hour and a half meeting the Sewer Commission addressed the greater problem of the odor emanating from the manhole to begin with.

In the end, the Sewer Commission voted unanimously to undergo a flushing exercise for the pipe to rid it of any of the odor-causing water in the system. The sewer pipe from Whitehead Road to Atlantic Avenue to Beach Street would be flushed with fresh water.

To prevent sewage odors from escaping the system Coughlin proposed using a chemical to suppress the odor during the flushing, which he expected to take 2-1/2 hours. But, it may not mask all the odors, and a targeted Connect-CTY message was to be sent out to alert residents of the potential for odors.

Reached on Wednesday, Sewer Commission chair John Beck said the flushing was expected to take place on Thursday or Friday after the Mariner went to press.

The Sewer Commission said they were willing to spend up to $10,000 on the flushing project, but Coughlin indicated the cost would be closer to $5,000.

It's unclear at this time if the flushing process will need to be repeated in the coming months.

"We're going to see how this one goes and play it by ear," Beck said Wednesday.

Retired CHS French teacher dies in tragic plane accident

"He died doing what he loved most. He will be sadly missed but always remembered."

A long-time French teacher at Cohasset High School died in a tragic plane crash in Maine earlier this week. George Fortin, 68, of Naples, Maine was killed along with his passenger Tony Kalinuk, 73, of Harrison, Maine.

Fortin's 1946 Taylorcraft BC-12 single-engine plane left Limington Airport around 9:10 a.m. Saturday for Maple Ridge Airport in Harrison, where he picked up Kalinuk for a scenic flight of the area, the Portland Press Herald reported. When Fortin did not return home as planned, his wife called the Limington airport. The plane had not returned.

A search ensued and on Sunday morning the plane was found by using a signal from Fortin's cell phone. The Portland Press Herald reported the plane was found nose down, about 10 feet into the woods next to a field. It appeared the plane hit a tree and went straight down.

In an interview with the Portland Press Herald, Judith Fortin said her husband has been a pilot for about 30 years and had close to 2,000 hours of flying time. She said he was a cautious pilot, who watched the weather carefully and had his plane routinely checked.

According to published reports, the cause of the crash is still unknown.

Fortin taught generations of Cohasset students the intricacies of the French and Spanish language. He worked in at the Cohasset Middle-High School from 1966 to 2000. He and his wife Judith moved to Naples about six years ago.

Fortin's daughter, Janice Shanks, posted a message on Facebook, alerting his friends of his passing.

"He died doing what he loved most. He will be sadly missed but always remembered," Shanks wrote.

The message indicated a memorial service, time and date to be determined, would be held at both the Limington Airport in Maine and then in Kingston, Mass.

Ten million Americans have osteoporosis. This is porous bone and it can lead to an increase of fractures of the spine, hip and wrist. For seniors with osteoporosis who live at home, a simple fall can be debilitating. Home healthcare aides can help prevent such an incident. They can make sure their senior clients use glasses or a hearing aid if needed. They can also instruct their senior clients to use a cane or walker if necessary. Aides can encourage seniors to wear rubber-soled, low-heeled shoes, and they can make sure that rugs are firmly attached to the floor. They can also check to see that rooms are well lit and floors are free of clutter.

If you have any questions about the many ways in which a home aide can help improve your patient's life - including fall-prevention services - then please call our office today. Honoring 'PJ' and continuing his legacy

Memorial golf tournament supports charities, organizations

By Greg Smith
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This past Friday, August 13th, more than 150 friends and family members got together to remember their dear friend Paul "PJ" Trendowicz. Last Friday marked eight years to the day that PJ passed away in a tragic swimming incident.

Each August, friends of Paul Trendowicz organize a memorial golf tournament where friends and family members of the Trendowiczs' gather to reunite and remember their deceased friend and loved one. This most recent tournament, The 4th Annual PJT Memorial Golf Tournament, saw over 100 golfers make their way down to Pembroke Country Club last Friday morning. The corresponding reception in Cohasset added another 50 people to the group. This record total of more than 150 is certainly a testament to the character of Paul Trendowicz. Always caring in nature, PJ prided himself in his ability to bring multiple groups of people together, never wishing to leave anyone out. True to form, this year's group was comprised of several of PJ's childhood friends from Cohasset and their family members, his BC High Classmates, and several friends of the Trendowicz family from all over the map.

Through his own hard work, tournament commissioner Brian Lewis has been able to grow the event each year. However, he would be the first to tell you that the tournament has found such great success because of the person who is being honored. PJ Trendowicz will always be remembered for his innate ability to bring people together and for his passion of helping others.

It is for these reasons that all monies raised from the annual PJT Memorial are donated to various local charities and organizations. Past recipients of these funds include Cohasset's Appalachia Service Project, inner city youth lacrosse camps and Toys for Tots. Last year, some of the monies raised were donated to the McClune family of Pembroke. Last Fall, Matt McClune, a classmate of Paul's from BC High, was involved in a serious car accident that rendered him paralyzed from the waist down. Funds were donated to the McClune family to help make their home in Pembroke handicap accessible. Jake Morgan, a Cohasset resident, PJT Memorial Committee member and a friend of Matt McClune carried out the construction free of charge.

Tournament Committee members including myself, Ben Kinch, Jake Morgan, Matt Winter, Alex Johnston, Tom Digan, Tim Straughan, and Commissioner Brian Lewis would like to thank all those who participated in the golf tournament, sponsored a hole, donated a silent auction item, and attended the reception for helping make this year's tournament the most successful to date.

While the golf tournament seeks to reunite people and raise money for local charities, the underlying theme of the day is clear. These friends are continuing the legacy and memory a dear friend. Paul "PJ" Trendowicz was a true man for others and he continues to bring people together today and is still helping those who are in need.

Greg Smith, who grew up in Cohasset, was a classmate of PJ's at BC High, where they graduated in 2002. He first met PJ when he moved from New Jersey in 4th grade. Greg says it is so important to him that PJ's memory lives on and that people in the Cohasset community are aware of the golf tournament tradition.

Each August, friends of Paul Trendowicz organize a memorial golf tournament where friends and family members of the Trendowiczs gather to reunite and remember PJ.

Paul "PJ" Trendowicz graduated from BC High in 2002. His many friends organize a golf tournament in his honor every summer.

" Here is what PJ said about his experience: "Every once in a while we get to do something really special. I got to do something like that this week by becoming a part of ASP2K. I learned much about myself. I learned that I do not need Cohasset to anchor me. I learned that the way I see myself should not depend on what type of jeans I wear or what CBA team I root for — or even how I dance. I learned that what's important is not what I get, but what I give."

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

THOUGHTS

Hello Cohasset. I am hoping that the weeks leading up to back to school time and the end of a warm, dry summer is packed with vacation times, beach and making memories that will last a lifetime for all. This past week was one that had a lot of emotion and loss for many families and friends, the excitement over learning the names of new teachers, and a feeling of confusion and disappointment for many as we learned how social networking can affect many, especially when personal and business comments cross the line. Life has a way of constantly changing so fast every day and again, a reminder to us all to remember what is important each day.

Enjoy the moments and create the memories, celebrate when you can and embrace those you love. Do not create or join in the "drama" but speak your mind if needed and most of all, tell those who you love your feelings as often as you can.

VFW CONTRIBUTION

Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146 of Cohasset made a contribution in the amount of $1,000 to Fisher House at the Veterans Hospital in West Roxbury. Fisher House officially opened on July 22.

The Lagrotteria siblings: Carlo, Joe, Ann Marie, Jenny, Mary, Barbara, Christine and Greg know how to still have fun together.

Ann Marie Lagrotteria holds onto her brother Greg after they both gave it everything they had in the 100-yard dash.

Carlo's finish was closely followed by his brothers Joe, then Greg, the eldest Lagrotteria.

Still while Carlo holds the temporary crown of "fastest Lagrotteria" the race did not include all the brothers. Three brothers were missing: brothers Jim and John both live out of state, and brother Tom was working

And Greg, 53, said age has to be considered as a factor in the race.

"You have to recognize that the one that beat me is 17 years younger. There is a 17-year handicap," Greg said, adding he lost the race by a fraction of a second.

"Youth does have to play a piece in it," Ann Marie said.

In true sibling rivalry fashion, Barbara offers this: "Greg lost, that's all that matters."

Barbara came in fourth, Ann Marie in fifth, Jennifer in sixth, Christine in seventh and Mary in eighth.

But, the competitiveness is all in good fun – and represents the strong bond the brothers and sisters have.

"It was a good, healthy competition with our brothers and sisters. I think everyone that night was a runner," Ann Marie said.

The sibling rivalry continues. According to her sisters, Christine Lagrotteria has thrown down the gauntlet once again and is asking for a 2-mile distance race to be held. E-mails have been flying around on when the rematch will take place.

If that's the pattern, it might never be determined who is "Fastest Lag on Two Feet" is.

"We've started a little tradition," Barbara said.

"It's all in good fun and it exemplifies the spirit of our relationship. We love spending time with each other, purposely getting under each other's skin and having fun with it," Ann Marie said. "There are so many benefits to having a family the size of our and one of them is the fun never ends."

After the race, the family, including their mother, Dorothy, had dinner at Ava Cucina on Ripley Road where the brotherly and sisterly love (and ribbing) continued.

Brother-in-law Sport Sease is the official race starter for the 100-yard dash along Cohasset Common.

Siblings Greg and Barbara Lagrotteria put up their dukes before their rematch race in the 100-yard dash with the rest of their brothers and sisters.

Cohasset Day seeks nonprofits to participate in event

Cohasset Day planning is well underway and the committee wishes to invite all Cohasset-based nonprofit enterprises to participate in this event. Selling snacks and beverages for sale during the early afternoon of the event is an opportunity for nonprofit enterprises to have a public presence, educate town's residents on their mission and provide its organization with a window for fundraising. Each participating nonprofit organization keeps 100 percent of its profits.

Last year's event was a success, with more than 2,000 people coming into the town center to celebrate Cohasset's beauty, families and fun. More than $5,000 was raised for Cohasset Food Pantry, Elder Affairs, Cohasset American Legion and the Christmas and Summer strolls.

For more information on how a nonprofit organization can participate in this year's annual Cohasset Day celebration, contact Melissa Browne at mjbrowne@comcast.net or Lydia Everett at lheverett@comcast.net.

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

This is an annual complimentary affair. Everyone looks forward to the best ever hermits freshly baked right there at the Abbey.

On July 21, Cohasset seniors, along with those from Hingham and Hull, were treated to a barbecue at Glastonbury Abbey. This is an annual complimentary affair. Everyone looks forward to the best ever hermits freshly baked right there at the Abbey.

We've had the pleasure one day this past month of a visit by a naturalist, John Root. On screen he showed the various songbirds in our area. He explained their nesting habits, what they like to eat, and differences in their behavior. We also listened to recordings of their various calls and songs. Mr. Root also presents programs about other objects of nature, such as mushrooms and more. He is also an accomplished musician. It was a pleasant way to spend a hot summer afternoon.

On the first Wednesday of the month a representative from North River Home Care led the seniors in a game of bingo. This was a first for us. I have never played bingo, and found it to be fun. Several prizes were won. It was a relaxing change from our more serious seminars.

On Aug. 11, we were treated to a complimentary Italian lunch at Sunrise House. There was a large group in attendance. It was a delight to listen to the singing of Mike Miano.

On Aug. 25, we will be serving luncheon at the Center at noon and not at Golden Living. (Please note the change.) Don't forget, if you wish to attend any of Cohasset Elder Affairs events, please call 781-383-9112 to make a reservation. Sometimes numbers are limited so call early on.

Weren't the days of the past weekend a welcome change from all that hot, humid weather? We've sure been through a lot of it this summer. I suppose in a few months the cold will be a cause for complaint. It's hard to believe that in another month we'll be close to the beginning of autumn.

Here let me put in a plug for Chair Yoga. It is great for arthritics and also for balance. The time is 1 p.m., on Tuesdays, at the Center. Not need to sign up. The charge is $3, and drop-ins are welcome. Perhaps we'll see you there.

Mandatory water ban starts Monday

As part of the water department's own conservation efforts the fountain in the Meetinghouse Pond on the Common has been turned off since the voluntary water ban went into effect.

"The good news is we have somewhat leveled off," Seebeck said, meaning the reservoir has stopped its steady downward slope.

The handheld only outdoor watering will be enforced. The Water Commission authorized sending a part-time employee out between 4 and 6a.m. a couple of times a week to look for automatic sprinklers in use. Violators will be given a warning, a $50 fine for the first offense and a $100 fine for the second and subsequent offenses.

The Water Department also will have a hotline for residents to notify other of violations, call 781-383-0057 extension 103 (this line is also used to report discolored water).

Unlike the Aquarion water ban, which is a private water company that services Hingham, Hull and 285 homes in North Cohasset, outside water is not additionally restricted by odd/even days by house number or time of day.

Aquarion Water issued an odd/even handheld only outside watering ban in July. Norwell currently has a restriction on outdoor watering, handheld only watering in the mornings and evenings. Scituate instituted an odd/even outdoor water restriction as well in recent weeks.

"It will be interesting to see how much water we save," Water Commission Glenn Pratt said.

As part of the water department's own conservation efforts the fountain in the Meetinghouse Pond on the Common has been turned off since the voluntary water ban went into effect. The turning off of the fountain conserves 7,500 gallons per day.

We Auto Know

by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman

THAT TICKING SOUND

When a clicking or ticking engine noise gradually goes away as the engine warms up, the problem is likely a noisy hydraulic lifter. A valve lifter is pushed upward by the camshaft lobe, which in turn forces the pushrod in the same direction. The pushrod rotates the rocker arm, which forces the valve downward against its spring, thereby opening the valve. In engines equipped with hydraulic lifters, oil inside the lifter acts as a cushion to gently force the pushrod upward to open the valve. If the lifter leaks oil, clearance can develop between the valve stem and the rocker arm, and a ticking noise will develop. When no adjustment is possible, replacement of the lifter(s) may be required.

If your hydraulic lifter sounds like a time bomb ticking under your hood, you need to bring your car down to ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT right away. Our ASE certified technicians will make the adjustments necessary to stop that incessant ticking or, if it's necessary, we'll replace the part with a new one. We can also provide the regularly scheduled maintenance that will catch things like a leaking lifter before it starts making a racket, which will save you time and money down the road. Give us a call today to prevent a big headache tomorrow. Call 781-925-3200 for an appointment today. Our address is 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: If a lifter needs to be replaced, always use a high-quality original equipment manufacturers (OEM) part.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

No special treatment

Twice during the past week, readers have asked the Cohasset Mariner if some people, who are involved in a police incident, get special treatment because their names either do not appear in the police log or Police Beat on page 3.

The question was: "Why were the party hosts' names in the paper but not the 23 underage partygoers?"

The reason is simple: The 23 partygoers at a underage party last month – while they had to appear in court to face the charge of being a minor in possession of liquor – were not arrested. The two party hosts were arrested and charged under the Social Host Law for providing alcohol to minors.

Police have discretion in determining whether to make an arrest. They certainly could have arrested the 23 partygoers – but it was probably impractical. Arresting and booking 23 people would completely tie up the police department for an entire night.

As a general rule, the Cohasset Mariner does not publish the names of those who are being summonsed to court because they were not arrested.

In other incidents involving teens and liquor – police could determine whether to either arrest or summons based on the circumstances of the incident itself or whether those involved had previous encounters with police.

As a general rule, the Cohasset Mariner does not publish the names of those who are being summonsed to court because they were not arrested.

For example, if a motorist is stopped for speeding and further investigation reveals that his or her license had expired on his or her recent birthday – the motorist is not arrested but summonsed to court to answer the criminal charge of unlicensed operation. We do not publish the name of the motorist.

We do not publish the names of juveniles who are arrested (those age 16 or under) because their cases are handled in juvenile court where the records are sealed.

We also do not publish the name of someone arrested in what is called a "domestic." Domestic arrests often involve violence among family members (husband – wife; father – son, for example). By publishing the names, we identify the victim(s). This is a Cohasset Mariner policy – there is no legal restriction preventing us from publishing names in a domestic arrest. If an incident escalated into a murder or if other criminal charges were involved, we would certainly cover the story and identify those charged.

Unless it is a felony arrest or is part of a wider news story – the Cohasset Mariner, as a general rule, does not publish the name of the person arrested in the Police Beat on Page 3 – although the name does appear in the police log. We cover the incident by indicating the age, charge with a brief synopsis on page 3; those who want to know the name of the person arrested can easily find this or her name in the log, which is also posted online at: www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset

The police log is a public document and is available to the public at the police station.

Whether publishing names in criminal matters may seem confusing – we can say without hesitation that the Cohasset Mariner does not give anyone "special treatment."

Unless the individual is a juvenile or involved in a domestic, if arrested – his or name will appear in the published police log.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Treat's Pond still needs help

TO THE EDITOR:

This is a letter I wrote to a friend; but on reflection, I think it should have slightly broader circulation. So, here goes.

I have been around politics for a long time, and I don't think I have ever seen quite such a dramatic usurping of power that took place in the Selectmen meeting on Monday, August 9.

In 2008 it was resolved that at the Town Meeting the Treat's Pond issue would come back to the meeting for a vote. That never happened!

I have in my hands a letter of July 7, 1993 that was sent to the Board of Selectmen indicating our concern over the coastal flooding and the lack of drainage on Sandy Cove. A group of us asked the Board of Selectmen to request the Norfolk County engineers to undertake a study. This was never done. Think of it – from 1993 to 2008 – nothing – despite all of our pleas.

For many months I have been in touch with the Corps of Engineers about our project. They seem to be the fall guy in any discussion. That's wrong! They are willing to do almost anything to help the town, but as they said: "We need to know what the town wants." I have asked; you have asked; people have asked this question but no response has been given.

So, here we sit, powerless, walled off from any decision by the town – citizens and their families who have lived around here for over 100 years. We haven't written nasty letters; we have not threatened anyone. We just asked for some help, not only for the flooding but also to help solve the contamination, which is gradually building up in Treat's Pond.

So, I ask what does a citizen have to do to ask for help over a condition in which he has no part?

I am not sure if the above is of any assistance, but I honestly think something should be done. It should not be left dangling out there. The thing that bothers me most of all is Selectmen chairman Karen Quigley said she would put a proposal up for a vote in the Selectmen meeting asking whether this issue should go to the Town Meeting or not, but that's not what happened. The fact is that four people voted to give up $1 million that had been designated to heal a problem that someday must be fixed by the town.

I hope this helps because we need help.

Paving update and some missing copper caps

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Paving, Paving, Paving — Finally, there is significant news about the upcoming paving that will be taking place around Town. This past week, the Sewer Commission released the remaining roads of the Little Harbor Project for paving. This week we will be meeting with our paving contractor, TL Edwards to begin scheduling the necessary work.

Our rough paving plan sequence will be to work on Jerusalem Road from Rust Way to the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue (This intersection is also known as Marsh's Corner.). The paving treatments will be different for different sections of the roads, depending on how severely they were disturbed by the Little Harbor Project. Some of the roads will be cold-planed and leveling course of asphalt will be laid to adjust the road contours for proper drainage. Then the structures in the road adjusted to their new required height. This will then be followed by a shoulder-to-shoulder top coat of asphalt. Where the surfaces are not excessively damaged the roads will be overlaid and top coated or just top coated. Of course in either of these last two scenarios, the structures will be adjusted before final paving. When the main roads are paved, the side roads will be top coated, as well.

Following the paving of the above section of Jerusalem Road, the section from North Main Street to the Western leg of Bow Street will be paved. The section of Jerusalem Road from the Eastern leg of Bow Street to the Jerusalem/Atlantic intersection will be postponed until a small drainage construction project on Jerusalem near the Jerusalem/Atlantic intersection is complete. (A bit more about this drainage project will be discussed later.)

The last section of the Little Harbor roads to be paved will be Atlantic Avenue from Whitehead Road to the Atlantic/Jerusalem intersection. Again, when the main roads are being paved, any remaining work on the side roads will be completed. There are several areas on these roads that are not planned to be paved. These are the causeways on Atlantic and Jerusalem and the Cunningham Bridge where no road trench work was done.

Now, let's review the story behind the construction project at Marsh's Corner. Jerusalem Lane is a steep small side road near Marsh's Corner. Water runs down from Jerusalem Lane into two catch basins that don't drain well. The drainage in Jerusalem Road will be renewed and to comply with the current DEP requirements, a centrifugal debris separator and a treatment swale will be constructed. The treatment swale will be built on the Little Harbor side of Jerusalem Road at the edge of the road. For purposes of traffic safety, the swale will be separated from the road by a wooden guardrail. The swale will sit on the Little Harbor side of the guardrail doing its thing cleaning up the drainage water before it is released to Little Harbor. The completion date of this project will determine whether this section of Jerusalem will be paved before or after Atlantic Avenue.

In addition to the Little Harbor paving project, the DPW will be paving Sohier Street from Fair Oaks Lane to North Main Street, Pond Street from the High School to Route 3A and Beechwood Street from the Western Leg of Norman Todd Road to Route 3A. We are working with TL Edwards, to hopefully get this paving done before school reopens and before the Little Harbor work begins.

The Case of the Wandering Caps — Several years ago, the harbor wall from Atlantica to the Mill River Marina was completely rebuilt. You may remember the work with its temporary dam that was erected to keep the wall work area dry from the tides. (You may also remember that during the work we had an unusually high storm tide that breeched the temporary dam and caused some sleepless nights for the contractor.) When the work was completed a beautiful stainless steel and white oak fence was erected along the wall.

However, in recent months, the custom made copper caps on the fence posts have begun disappearing. Mysteriously, a flock of the missing caps showed up at the Police Station. They have been put back and some more have disappeared again.

The DPW and others have retrieved a few of the missing caps from the surrounding harbor area. As of this writing, the mysterious disappearance has not been solved. The DPW is currently reviewing possible solutions for replacing the caps with a design that has a more secure attachment method.

HEALTH NOTES

Healthy lifestyle is not rocket science

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Studies suggest four general determinants of health including human biology, environment, lifestyle and healthcare services.

Many factors contribute to the importance of an event: Obvious, you say, but the numbers and the details about events are increasing with the amount of data technology can collect, organize and save.

Listing the factors perceived, observed and recorded or only just observed can help in determining what your response should be.

Studies suggest four general determinants of health including human biology, environment, lifestyle and healthcare services. Thus, health is maintained and improved not only through the advancement and application of health science, but also through efforts and intelligent lifestyle choices by the individual and society in general. People can improve their health via exercise, enough sleep, maintaining a healthy weight, limiting alcohol use and avoiding smoking. That turns out to be easy to say but harder to accomplish.

Other factors are water quality, lack of neighborhood natural environmental recreational space, factors that lead to lower levels of neighborhood satisfaction and higher levels of obesity; therefore, lower overall well being.

The World Health Organization states that determinants of health include the physical social and economic environment. Higher education levels are linked with a higher standard of life as well as a higher income. Those who finish higher education are more likely to get a better job and therefore are less prone to stress as compared to individuals with low education levels. The physical environment is perhaps the most important factor to be considered when classifying the health status of an individual. Factors such as clean water and air, safe houses, communities and smooth roads all contribute to good health.

Genetics are also a determinant of the health of a population. They are closely related to habits and behaviors individuals develop during their life, particularly in terms of lifestyle choices. For example, people who come from families whose members had a more active lifestyle and followed healthier diets, non-smoking and non-drinking are more likely to follow the same pattern in their life. The example set by the family as well as the relationship with friends and family can have a great impact on one's general health. Also, genetics may play a role in the manner in which people cope with stress.

Access to health care: clearly one of the major issues of modern society, probably even greater than the quality of the service. Personal health depends partially on one's observations about their health in everyday life. Information gleaned from such observations may be used to inform personal decisions and actions (e.g., "I feel tired in the morning so I am going to try sleeping on a different pillow"), as well as clinical decisions and treatment plans (e.g., a patient who notices his or her shoes are tighter than usual may be having exacerbation of left-sided heart failure).

Social Activity Personal health depends partially on the social structure of one's life. The maintenance of strong social relationships is linked to good health conditions, longevity, productivity and a positive attitude. Thus, positive social interaction appears to increase chemical activity in the brain linked to personality and intelligence traits.

Volunteering while providing a variety of social benefits, can add years of life by creating a feeling of well-being.

Hygiene: the practice of keeping the body clean to prevent infection and illness, and avoidance of contact with infectious agents including bathing, brushing and flossing teeth, washing hands especially before eating, washing food before it is eaten, cleaning food preparation utensils and surfaces before and after preparing meals, all may help prevent infection and illness.

Stress management: Prolonged psychological stress has been cited as a factor in cognitive impairment with aging, depressive illness and expression of disease. Methods to reduce stress include relaxation techniques, cognitive therapy, meditation and positive thinking. Improving relevant skills and abilities also builds confidence.

Reducing uncertainty, by increasing knowledge and experience related to stress-causing situations, has the same effect. Learning to cope with problems better, such as improving problem solving and time management skills may also reduce stressful reaction to problems.

Adults need common sense on Facebook too

COMMENTARY

DIANE K. DANIELSON

While it's popular to blame this on Facebook, it's not Facebook's fault. That individual failed to use both her privacy settings and basic common sense.

While my social media work focuses on companies, I've tried to make it a point to write and speak about how we can help our kids use Facebook safely. However, it seems I forgot to include the grownups in these forums. As most folks know, a Cohasset school administrator resigned this week for posting derogatory remarks on Facebook about her job and the town that employed her.

While it's popular to blame this on Facebook, it's not Facebook's fault. That individual failed to use both her privacy settings and basic common sense.

I wish I could say this is a unique situation, but it's not. A recent Consumer Reports study found that over half (52 percent) of social network users post risky information online. Moreover, 73 percent of adult Facebook users thought they only shared content with friends but in fact only 42percent of users had customized their privacy settings.

This last finding is important because in December 2009, Facebook revamped their Privacy Settings. If you accepted their new default settings without doing any customization, it's likely you are part of that over 30 percent of adults who are sharing your children's photos, vacation details, and status updates with not just our town, but the whole world.

The following is a brief overview on how to customize your Privacy Settings on Facebook

1. Understand that Facebook's default privacy setting is to share everything with the whole wide world. It's your responsibility to go through every single one of your settings (the link is under the Account button in the upper right hand corner) and rein it back in.
2. Change your Basic Directory information so that only your "Friends" can find you in a search.
3. Change the information that you share on Facebook to "Friends Only."
4. For professionals who might have colleagues on Facebook – use Friend Lists to limit what business colleagues and acquaintances can see. Put business colleagues or people you don't know well in a group called "restricted". Now go back to your Privacy settings and you can exclude that "restricted" list from seeing photos, comments on your wall, etc.
5. Edit your Privacy Settings for Applications and Websites as follows:
   - Game and application activity: Set as "Only Me" for the default, unless you play an interactive game with friends online.
   - Info accessible through your friends: Set this so nothing gets shared.
   - Instant personalization: Turn this off.
   - Public search: Turn this off.
6. Use the Block list to block employers, ex's, in-laws and whomever you don't ever want seeing your profile, or comments you may make on a public Page. Note that the blocked individual does not get notice of the block. All that happens is that they will not be able to find you on Facebook, nor you them.

There are other things you can do to make sure you and your kids are using Facebook appropriately including: create good passwords and change them every six months; take out your birth year, don't put your kids in your profile picture (note that this profile picture exists in the public domain and cannot be made private). Nevertheless, the best thing you can do is to remember that anything written online is never completely private.

Finally, if this week's fiasco is still not enough to get you to use your Privacy Settings, then consider this: A court in California ruled that if the general public has access to your Facebook wall or comments, then presumably those are subject to discovery in civil litigation.

NephCure Walk at Wompatuck State Park

NephCure Foundation, the only nonprofit organization committed exclusively to support research seeking a cause for two potentially devastating kidney diseases, Nephrotic Syndrome (NS) and (FSGS), improve treatment and find a cure, is sponsoring the NephCure Walk at noon, on Sunday, Oct. 17, at Wompatuck State Park, Hingham.

Last year, area families weathered a nor'easter and came out to raise more than $35,000 to fund research at Children's Hospital in Boston, Beth Israel Deaconess and Massachusetts General Hospital. Many families on the South Shore, including the Broderick family of Cohasset, have been affected by these diseases. There are no FDA approved drugs for these chronic kidney diseases and no cure.

To learn more about the NephCure Foundation or to sign up to walk or volunteer at this year's Walk, join others from 7 to 8 p.m., on Wednesday, Aug. 25, at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information about the NephCure Foundation visit online at Nephcure.org or call Kathleen Broderick at 781-383-6339.

'Mockingjay' event at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, will host a "Mockingjay" event at 8 a.m., on Tuesday, Aug. 24. "Mockingjay" is the third and final book in the bestselling "Hunger Games" trilogy.

In a future dystopian North America, where the rulers maintain control through an annual televised survival competition pitting young people against one another, Katniss Everdeen has become the symbol of the resistance. The second book, "Catching Fire" solidified this role and the novel ended with a cliffhanger. Loyal fans have been eagerly awaiting this last book. Targeted for young adults, the series is also popular with young professionals and adults. The event will include "Hunger Games" activities and raffle items. One lucky person will win a copy of "Mockingjay" with a signed bookplate from Suzanne Collins. Refreshments will be served at this free event.

What to do with Minot Light?

PAST

In August 2009, the United States General Services Administration announced the availability of Minot Light to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge. If no non-profit agency is found to take control of the light, the lighthouse would be sold at public auction.

The lighthouse giveaway is part of the National Historic Lighthouse Act of 2000, which began the process of taking historic lighthouses off of the national ledger.

According to the notice of availability, the light could be used for educational, park, recreational, cultural or historic preservation purposes. The Coast Guard would continue to maintain the foghorn and actual light, which serves as a navigational aid by flashing in a 1-4-3 pattern that can be visible within 15 miles.

PRESENT

Now, the historic lighthouse is looking to be adopted by what could likely be a private non-profit group. Last fall, at least three local groups submitted non-binding letters of interest in becoming the caretaker of the historical lighthouse: the towns of Cohasset and Scituate and the Scituate Historical Society. At a meeting in September all the parties expressed a desire for cooperation, if care of the lighthouse was assumed. They all shared concerns over the long-term maintenance cost, but felt the lighthouse was a vital landmark to preserve.

In the late fall, the parties that sent letters of interest to the General Services Administration (GSA) got an exterior tour of the lighthouse. The GSA could not confirm if other entities applied.

In a separate outing Cohasset residents gave GSA representatives a historical tour of all things Minot in Cohasset — a tour of Government Island and a look at the Minot artifacts kept by the Cohasset Historical Society.

Cohasset resident Steve Bobo has been involved with the Minot Light disposition effort since it began, but recently sought out help from fellow residents Wayne Sawchuk and Rick Swanborg.

The pair is investigating the potential uses of the structure, including allowing it to be accessed by the public.

"Is it possible to make it accessible for any future viewing or will it have to remain closed up?" Sawchuk said. Through some investigation, Sawchuk said the structure would have to undergo significant clean-up on the interior.

Sawchuk and Swanborg would be interested in hearing from residents with ideas or if interested in being involved in the future of Minot Light.

According to Paula Santangelo, spokesman for the GSA, the Coast Guard deemed an interior tour of the light unsafe at this time. The Coast Guard is working on updating the ladder and landing used to access the water-bound structure, Santangelo said. Instead, a video tour on a DVD was created to show the interior of the light and additional still photos are being shot at the request of applicants.

"We want the interested parties to have an understanding of what they will be faced with if they are the next stewards of Minot Light," Santangelo said.

FUTURE

Once the still photos are received by the parties the clock will start ticking on the application process. Interested parties have 90 days to generate and submit an application to be the next steward of Minot Light.

After the application deadline passes the submissions head to the National Park Service for review. The review process can take up to a year.

The application is fairly involved and must include a master plan detailing strategies for preservation and maintenance, use, financial sustainability and management.

If no suitable steward for the lighthouse is found, the structure could go up for a public auction.

Santangelo said Minot Light is somewhat unique because of the difficulty in accessing the structure.

"In this case we're not only looking for someone to maintain and preserve the lighthouse. The purpose of the stewardship program is whatever group takes over, whether it's a local community or a non-profit, they need to provide access to the light in some way," Santangelo said.

Given the difficulty in physically accessing the structure, Santangelo said the future steward might need to get a "little creative in how to share the light with the public."

Minot Light is accessible only by boat and a 30-foot bronze ladder. It sits on a 25-foot wide ledge of rock called Minot's Ledge.

ABOUT MINOT LIGHT

Minot Light is accessible only by boat and a 30-foot bronze ladder. It sits on a 25-foot wide ledge of rock called Minot's Ledge. According to the brief description of the lighthouse provided by the General Services Administration, the ledge is very difficult to land on in moderate or heavy sea conditions.

Minot Light has special significance to both Cohasset and Scituate — the light was built in Cohasset and its lightkeepers lived in Cohasset, but the structure itself is located in Scituate waters. Minot Light is visible from both towns' coasts. And both towns lay claim to the famous lighthouse.

It has been called the most romantic lighthouse because of its flashing light of 1-4-3 meaning "I love you" (because of the number of letters in each word).

The location of Minot Light makes is fairly unique in that is has no piece of land to call its own. Many of the lighthouses given away that have been located on coastal land or an island have found new life as bed and breakfasts, tourist attractions or dining facilities. The difficulty in accessing Minot Light leaves little possibility of that type of renaissance.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local senators on three roll calls from prior sessions during the week of July 26-31. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

TEACH FINANCIAL LITERACY IN SCHOOLS (S 2275)

Senate 39-0, approved and sent to the House a bill requiring the state's Department of Elementary and Secondary Education to help implement programs on teaching personal financial literacy in public schools, within the existing mathematics curriculum. The programs would include understanding loans, borrowing money, interest, credit card debt, online commerce, rights and responsibilities of renting or buying a home, saving and investing, and planning for retirement.

Supporters said this would give students the skills that are necessary to understand and properly handle money and finances while they are in school and after they graduate. They noted that the recent financial meltdown showed how little many consumers know about finances.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

HUMAN TRAFFICKING (S 2589)

Senate 39-0, approved and sent to the House legislation to combat human sex, slave and forced labor trafficking. The measure creates a new crime of forced sex or labor and punishes offenders with penalties of up to $2,000 and life in prison. The fines would go into a fund to help the victims.

Supporters said this long-overdue bill would crack down on loathsome people who sell human beings and educate local law enforcement on how to identify, find and help these victims. They noted it is time for the state to step up to the plate because the federal government doesn't have the resources or will to combat this problem.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

POST-PARTUM DEPRESSION (H 4859)

Senate 39-0, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick legislation that would require the state's Department of Public Health (DPH) to develop a program to promote awareness of and help destigmatize postpartum depression, a condition that can affect women following childbirth. The measure also requires DPH to compile statistics on how many women are suffering from this horrible disorder.

Another provision would create a special commission to investigate and study the best ways to prevent, detect and treat the condition and recommend legislation to promote greater public awareness of it.

The original version of the bill included a provision requiring all health care plans to cover benefits for screening for post-partum depression. This new version does not include that requirement.

Supporters said it is time to take this disease out of the shadows and to help the millions of people afflicted by it. They noted that an estimated one in eight women are afflicted with this disease.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

The governor last week signed into law the following bills:

BAN SALE OF NOVELTY CIGARETTE LIGHTERS (S 2578) - This bill bans the sale of toy-like or novelty lighters that appeal to children 10 years of age or younger. These lighters include ones that resemble cartoon characters, toys, guns, musical instruments, vehicles or animals.

STORAGE CHARGES FOR TOWED CARS (H 4171) - This legislation increases from $20 per day to $35 per day the maximum amount facilities can charge to store cars that are ordered towed by the police. Local cities and towns have the power to set the rates for their communities but are not allowed to exceed the state-mandated maximum.

HEALTH CARE CHANGES (S 2585) - This measure makes changes in the health care system. A key provision would require health insurance companies in the small group market to offer at least one reduced network plan with premiums 12 percent lower than those for a full network plan. Other provisions include allowing small businesses to band together and form associations in order to have leverage and group buying power when seeking lower premiums, establishing standardized transparency measures for provider pricing and annual public reporting and giving small businesses that participate in a wellness program an additional 5 percent state subsidy for eligible health insurance costs beginning in 2011.

MOTORCYCLE PERMITS FOR UNDER 18 (S 2344) - This proposal requires applicants under 18 to successfully complete a motorcycle basic rider course approved by the registrar of motor vehicles in order to receive a motorcycle driver's learning permit. This new requirement would be in addition to current law that requires applicants under 18 to have parental consent and pass a written test and eye exam. The measure, known as "Ryan's Bill," is named after Ryan Orcutt, a 16-year-old boy from Brockton who died in a motorcycle accident.

Teacher resigns over comments on Facebook

A recent comment from late July calls the residents of Cohasset "so arrogant and snobby." In the same comment Siple said she is "so not looking forward to another year at Cohasset Schools."

In another post, dated February 4, Siple described her current health for which she said she was taking three antibiotics: "Now I remember why I stopped teaching! Kids…they are all germ bags!"

In a phone interview Tuesday morning, Siple, 56, confirmed she did write the Facebook postings, but only intended them to be viewed by her 50 Facebook friends.

"They weren't meant for the rest of the world…most of it was a joke and my friends would have understood that," Siple said. "I didn't think it was a public Facebook page."

Sometime Tuesday morning Siple's privacy settings were altered so the public can no longer view the wall or its content.

The Mariner spoke to Siple from her Plymouth home shortly before she tendered her resignation. She indicated that there have been issues between parents and the administration.

She said there have been "lies" and "disturbing behavior" directed at the administration that has yet to be addressed. She declined to comment further, or give details, of what she was referring to during the phone interview.

"I'm not going to further the discussion by retaliating," Siple said, adding, "I'm under a lot of stress."

In subsequent interviews with the TV media, to which she has spoken freely, she has stood by her comments as she feels they are truthful and only regrets they became public. She told WCVB-Channel 5, "Cohasset has demonstrated to me and the rest of the administration as being extremely arrogant and quite snobby."

Siple has been at Cohasset Schools for about a year in the position of program supervisor for the STEM (science, technology, engineering and mathematics) department. She was the first person to fill this newly created position for the 2009-2010 school year (see sidebar).

According to her résumé, she also taught graduate courses in science and math teacher methods at University of Massachusetts Dartmouth in addition to her Cohasset job.

Siple (and the other two program supervisors) signed contracts for a one-year extension in late June. The program supervisor salary for the upcoming school year is $92,636, which includes 2.5 percent increase over last year. It is the same percentage increase as the teachers received this year.

The Mariner called the Superintendent of Schools' office on Tuesday morning to see if Walsh could be reached for comment on the situation. Through her administrative assistant Jean Callahan, Walsh relayed she is in out of the country on vacation until the end of the month and did not have details to respond to the Mariner's request for comment.

Shortly before 1p.m. on Tuesday Dr. Walsh sent an e-mail to the members of the School Committee. In it Walsh states, "After confirming the quotes I have immediately called for Dr. Siple's resignation for conduct unbecoming any professional as well as her disrespect for the community effective immediately."

An e-mail sent five minutes later confirms Dr. Siple's resignation.

School Committee and community react

School Committee members reached on Tuesday, vice chair Alfred Slanetz, Jeanne Astino and Linda Snowdale, said the comments were "inappropriate."

Astino said the situation was "pretty serious" and hoped it would be addressed right away. Her initial reaction to the comments was disbelief, "I was speechless…It's very disconcerting and very unprofessional."

Slanetz said the comments – and the fact they were in the public domain – were "surprising."

"It's not something that should have been done…it doesn't show the best judgment," Slanetz said.

School Committee member Paul Schubert said the situation was "disappointing."

"We have high expectations for our kids and those expectations are the same for our employees," Schubert said Wednesday. "We have great parents in town and I hate to see that stereotype (Siple described on Facebook) out there…it's unfortunate."

Currently, there are no policies in place for Facebook usage by school employees. Policies do exist for internet use on school computers. Snowdale said the school committee might have to work on a specific policy for Facebook.

Astino said she would be suggesting the policy subcommittee begin work on a policy on professional conduct.

As word spread about the Facebook posts, largely through e-mail, parents reacted.

Diane Danielson, a parent who has written extensively on social networking and its appropriate uses, said many Facebook users are not using their privacy controls to their advantage.

"This is basically employment 101: don't insult your employer in a bad economy in a public forum," Danielson said.

"As one of the most highly compensated employees on the school payroll, I expect a little more. I expect a lot more. The lack of technological acumen is also disturbing, especially considering her leadership role in technology education in our schools," said Trish Morse of Forest Avenue.

Morse also hoped the events could be a lesson for all.

"At the very least, it will be a lesson to young and old on the very public nature of social media and how to use it wisely," Morse said.

The Facebook posts

There were more than a dozen Facebook status updates from Siple on her profile wall, most were innocuous, but two drew attention for being inappropriate this week:

"I am so not looking forward to another year at Cohasset schools. The residents of Cohasset are so arrogant and snobby! I need to work where the community has real problems that I can be part of the solution!" – Posted on July 25 at 10: 19a.m.

"Ok…who took my immune system? Now its a sinus infection, a bladder infection, and an infection in both eyes! Three antibiotics…now I remember why I stopped teaching! Kids…they are all germ bags!" -Posted on February 4 at 8:46p.m.

Are adult Facebook users protected?

According to a study done by Consumer Reports this past spring many users of Facebook are not using their privacy settings to protect their identity and personal information. In a survey of 2,000 online households across the nation, 73 percent shared their Facebook content with friends but only 42 percent customized settings to control who can see their information. This survey suggests a great many users think they are only sharing with friends, but may in fact be sharing with the world.

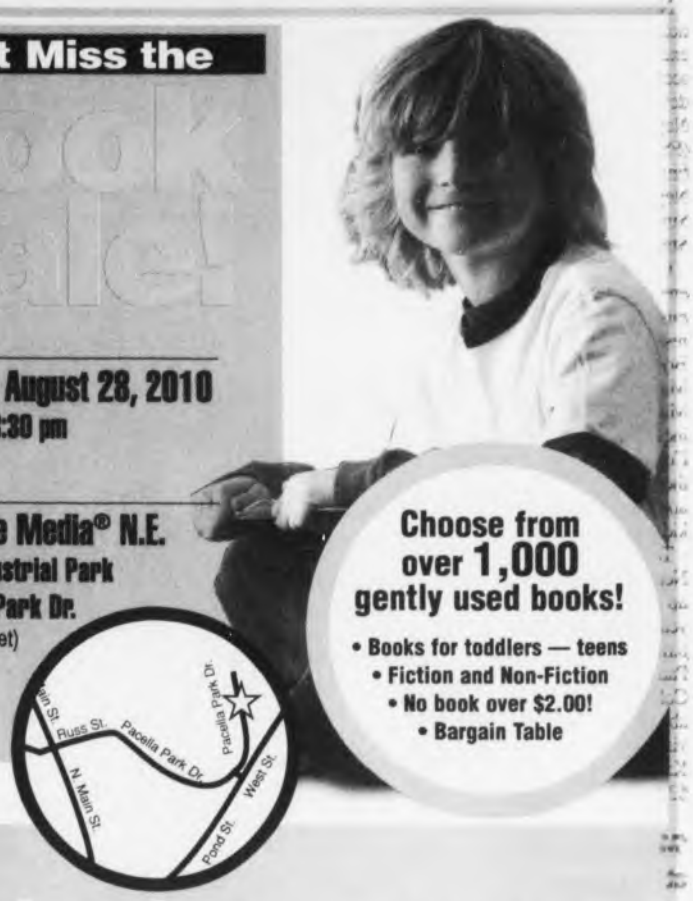
In December 2009 Facebook updated their privacy settings and re-set users privacy to a default public setting. Unless users went in to their account settings and adjusted them, the information posted on Facebook from comments to birth date became public.

Absentee Ballots available for State Primary

Absentee ballots for the State Primary on Sept. 14, 2010, are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Sept. 13, 2010, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. People should vote in person on Election Day if they are in town and able to come to the polls. People may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, which ballot is requested, Democrat, Republican or Libertarian, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant. If a voter is Un-enrolled (Independent) he needs to choose a ballot and will remain un-enrolled after the primary. If you are enrolled in a party you must vote that ballot. If you wish to change your party affiliation it must be done on or before Aug. 25, 2010. Voters who are enrolled in a political designation may not vote in primaries.



If you are enrolled in a party you must vote that ballot. If you wish to change your party affiliation it must be done on or before Aug. 25, 2010.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Sept. 14, 2010, to be counted.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

CNC SUPER TEAM

Softball

NAME: Deanna McMahon
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Hanover
STATS: McMahon's outstanding control helped keep opponents in check and helped Hanover to a 14 win season. Coach Joe Messina said she was the difference-maker during the season, even with Hanover's high-power offense. Her best game may have been a two-hit shutout against Rockland early in the season.

NAME: Kelly Naegelin
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS: Naegelin had another strong season on the mound, including a 17-strikeout performance early in the season.

NAME: Morgan Walsh
GRADE: Freshman
SCHOOL: Norwell
STATS: At some schools, freshmen don't get a chance to play at the varsity level, but at Norwell High School, that's quite the opposite. And when you put up the numbers Morgan Walsh did this year as a freshmen, there's no questioning her place on that roster. The South Shore League all-star hit .524 and knocked in 23 RBI to lead the team into the postseason.

NAME: Kelly DuVal
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Hanover
STATS: DuVal concluded a senior season in which she hit .500 and had 40 RBI. The Hanover catcher had eight home runs, five triples and eight doubles. DuVal had more extra base hits than singles during the year. DuVal was also outstanding defensively behind the plate.

NAME: Meredith Kelly
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS: Kelly made a smooth transition from first base to shortstop in her senior season. One of Cohasset's finest all-around athletes, she'll be headed to Bates to play basketball in the fall.

NAME: Ericka Stearns
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Hanover
STATS: Stearns was over the .400 mark at the plate and made the transition from first base to shortstop seamlessly to help lead Hanover to the playoffs. She played error-free ball for the last 10 games of the season.

NAME: Briana Gentry
GRADE: Sophomore
SCHOOL:: Norwell
STATS: Gentry, a second-year starting catcher for the Lady Clippers, had another explosive year at the plate. She didn't just hit the ball, she crushed it. She capped the regular season with a grand slam and six RBI in a win over South Shore Voc-Tech. The South Shore League all-star was also a force defensively behind the plate.

NAME: Amanda Abromson
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Braintree
STATS: Abromson is one of the most versatile athletes at Braintree High School. She is a star on their Bay State winning ice hockey team and this spring moved from second base to shortstop, filling in for ex-Super Team standout Laura McDonough Amanda earned Bay State All-Star honors with a .500 batting average. She batted cleanup and hit three homer runs and knocked it 18.

NAME: Jackie Gauthier
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Braintree
STATS: Gauthier also hit .500 for the Wamps this season, but she was more than just a good hitter for Tom Grandy's girls. She was a leader on and off the field and one reason why Braintree advanced to the post-season. Said Grandy during the season: "Jackie is our catalyst at the top of our order. She is leading us in just about every major offensive category. She's on base all the time, and since I've been here, when she hits and is on base, we almost always win."

NAME: Laura Walter
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: A young Duxbury varsity softball team had to rely on its pitching, and the Lady Dragons got that and then some this season from senior Laura Walter. The Patriot League all-star struck out more than 175 batters and had an earned run average less than 1.00. She posted 11 of Duxbury's 12 regular-season wins, carrying the team into the playoffs.

NAME: Kelly Norton
GRADE: Sophomore
SCHOOL: Abington
STATS: As the year progress, Norton developed into one of the premier pitchers in the regional, taking a young, inexperienced team to within a victory from the South Shore League title and into the post-season. It was a team that had to scratch for every run and without a pitcher like Norton, the Green Wave would have never even had a winning season.

Rivalries anew

Cohasset Legion stars all headed to Atlantic-10

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

For three local baseball stars, different paths have led them to similar circumstances and a chance to renew friendships – and rivalries on the field over the next few years.

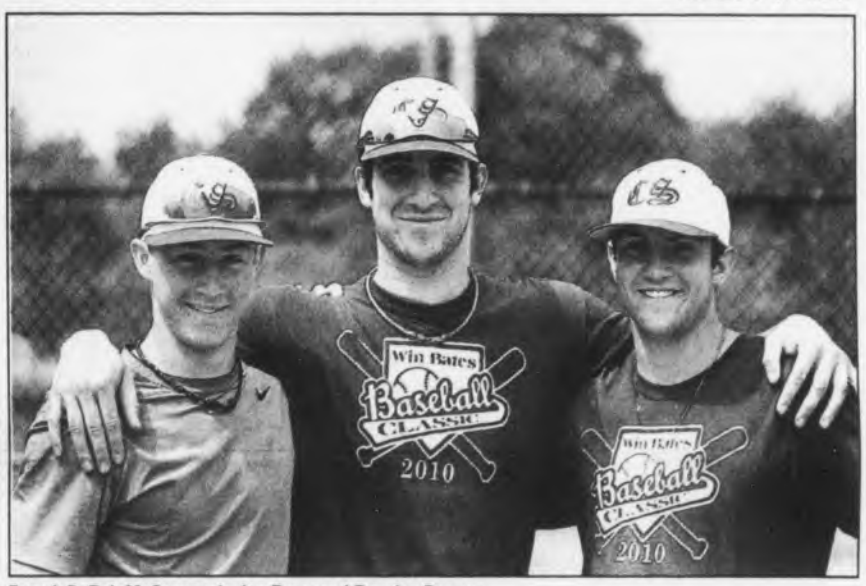
Cohasset's Jordan Berry played his high school baseball at Milton Academy, where he pounded six homers, including stretch with two grand slams in three games, while Rob McCunney honed his skills at B.C. High.

Brendan Doonan stayed home and was a huge factor in Cohasset's run to a Div. 4 State Championship this season as a pitcher and third baseman.

All three had outstanding senior seasons, and all will be headed to college this fall.

In a fun twist, all three will be attending schools in the Atlantic-10 Conference next season.

Berry, a first baseman, will head to George Washington University. McCunney is headed to Fordham, a team that was in the national spotlight last year for beating nationally-ranked Miami and for the Fordham Flip, a spectacular play by junior Brian Kownacki (check it out at www.fordhamsports.com/sports/m-basebl/) and Doonan is headed to the University of Rhode Island.



McCunney played shortstop at B.C. High and hopes to play either shortstop or second base. Berry expects to be at first and Doonan said he'll probably play second base or outfield.

While they didn't play together in high school, the trio played American Legion baseball together in the summer.

"We've been playing together since we were seven," Berry said after his Cohasset/Scituate team's game in the 2010 Win Bates Baseball Classic on Sunday. "We won the Braintree 9-and Under Friendship League championship."

"We still practice together," McCunney said. "When we need to get some work in we know who to call. It's exciting to have friends going to the same league."

In the single elimination round on Sunday, Cohasset started with a 10-2 victory over Quincy National.

Jack O'Donnell pitched lights out for the team, and Gray Thomas, Ben Smith and Ian Appleby had key hits to secure the victory. Thomas Marshman pitched game two for Cohasset against their nemesis Burlington.

Cohasset got the hit parade going against Burlington with a 12-3 victory. Ben Grimes, Mike Sanderson and Ian Turpel were solid at the plate. The final pitted No.1 seed Wellesley against Cohasset.

Zander Gomez took the mound for the final game, which Cohasset won 4-3.

Luke Adams and Jack Wipf made key plays in the field during the final inning to secure the hardware for Cohasset.

Not living through my kids

POPPIN' OFF

William Wassersug

All season long I've been hearing stories of poor sportsmanship and self absorbed parents living through their kids on the way to making others miserable in their wake.

I know it happens, and I've been pretty lucky in the towns I cover that I haven't seen this behavior up close.

Yes, I was at one game where I overheard one mom saying that she wouldn't sit with dad because he gets way too wound up during games and it made her crazy.

There was another who mentioned a player who always played better when dad just watched the game and didn't speak, or yell from the stands.

These comments varied from Little League to high school and just made me a little relieved that my kids aren't particularly athletic, so if they ever do play sports I'm not going to get too wrapped up in it.

I'll save the pride and smiles for their reading skills, artwork and writing and other endeavors they choose.

In the past I have had some of the best in the business showing my kids how they do things.

When she was just five or six years old, my older daughter had some informal boxing lessons from a USA Boxing National Champion.

No, she never got in the ring, or really trained, but it was fun when she told us about them.

Earlier this summer, she came home from a Best Buddies outing and told me how a Patriots player, possibly Pierre Woods, taught her the proper way to throw a football.

I've shown her a few times, but it never stuck.

We occasionally go to the batting cages, but all I can muster up is a keep your head on the ball, hold the bat higher and nice swing for either of my kids.

Best junior golfers in nation challenge Old Sandwich

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

People who frequent the Old Sandwich Golf Club in Plymouth know they truly have a diamond in the rough. Some extra shine glowed on this hidden gem last week when the top junior golfers in the nation arrived for the Canon Cup.

Course of the Week

The Canon Cup is the junior golf equivalent to the Ryder Cup of the PGA tour. In battling for the Cup, 20 of the best male and female junior golfers from east of the Mississippi River team up to take on 20 of the best from west of the big river over four days of golf.

For the second year in a row the competition was as close as could be, but the West eventually pulled out a 25.5-24.5 win. It was the sixth win in a row for the West squad in the 21-year-old tournament.

"This is the first tournament we have put together here at Old Sandwich that was for the public," golf course manager Drew Ford said. "It was brought to our attention that the American Junior Golf Association was looking for a course to host the event this year. We thought it was the right size of an event where we could give it a go."

The East took four of the first five head-to-head matches to bridge the gap between the teams. But the West went on a run, and then the East's Kristin Park defeated Ginger Howard to tie the competition 23.5-23.5 with three matches left.

The next two matches were won by Western stars – Preston Valder over Drew Czuchry and Rachel Morris over Karen Chung – giving the West the tournament win.

"These are some incredibly talented golfers and respectful young men and women," Ford said. "It was an honor to have them around for the week, and I think this week shows that we can handle a tournament of this type. You're going to need every shot in your bag with this course, and the weather really cooperated to keep the course challenging and in great shape."

For Ani Gulugian, the week in Plymouth was a fine way to wrap up her junior golf career. The Irvine, Calif., native played her final tournament last week as she gets ready to the next chapter of her life as a student athlete at UCLA.

"The course was challenging, but I really enjoyed playing Old Sandwich," Gulugian said. "The entire area was beautiful, especially downtown Plymouth. It's an adorable little town."

Gulugian won two matches, lost one and tied another last week.

Fellow California native Seiji Liu got as much as he could out of the Canon Cup, his last junior tournament also. He was part of the final twosome on the course after Morris clinched the win for the West squad.

Liu will be coming back to this area of the country soon as a member of the incoming class at Harvard University.

"I really loved the way (Old Sandwich) challenged you to hit your best shot at all times," Liu said. "It's fair, but it's one of the hardest course I've ever played."

Deutsche Bank looming on the horizon

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

It's two weeks until the Deutsche Bank Championship at the TPC-Boston in Norton.

And it's always a fun week because of the oddity of wrapping things up on a Monday instead of a Sunday like all other golf events.

The extra day of tournament action provides fun and frolic and one more day of celebrity watching, not just the Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelsons on the fairways, but those attending as well.

For instance, there is a Red Sox Legends Pro-Am on Tuesday, Aug. 31. They are always enjoyable to watch. And one of the most entertaining golf exhibitions will be on Wednesday, Sept. 1 when Dennis Walters does his thing.

He is one of the more inspiring golfers you will ever meet.

Until 1974, when he was involved in a paralyzing accident, his dream was to play on the PGA Tour.

Today, he is one of the world's top trick-shot artists in the world.

His show begins at 2 p.m.

As for the tournament, it's a Fed-Ex event so everyone will be on hand as they prepare for the Ryder Cup.

Hopefully, the tournament will remain in Norton.

There have been rumblings that the dates could be given to the PGA Tour event in Hartford in a couple of years and that would be devastating for Massachusetts golf fans.

Just remember how awful it was when the Tour left Pleasant Valley Country Club back in the late 1990s.

Those were the days.

You had the Pat Bradley and the LPGA at Tara Ferncroft in Danvers and then Blue Hills in Canton. Chi Chi Rodriguez and the old PGA Senior Tour (now euphemistically called the Champions Tour) was at Nashawtuc CC in Concord

It seems like big time golf has abandoned the region.

SSCC gets Public Links

The cat is out of the bag.

The Massachusetts Golf Association's 2011 official golf schedule is out and it has the State Amateur Public Links Championship scheduled next Aug. 2-3 at South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Less than a decade ago you would not have wanted to play any sort of tournament there because the conditions were threadbare.

The course, leased to an outside company, was sinfully neglected and practically unplayable.

Conditions were deployable.

Half of the course was a swamp and the other half was rock hard.

Earlier, South Shore CC had a waiting list with a list of prospective members that figured it was a five- or 10-year wait to gain admittance.

That list evaporated as conditions worsened. It was a swamp across the 18th, 10th, first and ninth fairways.

The landing area on the par-5 third hole was unplayable. So was the landing area on the sixth hole. The 14th hole was a joke because it was always underwater.

Simply, it was a mess.

Members left for other area clubs.

The transformation began a few years ago. Before she left for a position at Pembroke Country Club, then general manager Nora Berard put things in motion. After the leasing company's contract was not renewed, Berard hired Jay McGrail as superintendent and since his arrival a few years ago, the course has improved by leaps and bounds.

Members returned. Golfers from other clubs were impressed when they saw what was happening at South Shore and they returned.

It's amazing what some tender, loving care cant do for a golf course. Today, South Shore has a full membership again and is able to hold prestigious golf events, such as the State Amateur Public Links Championship.

Bibeau earns Publinks title

Recently the State Amateur Public Links Championship was held at Quashnet Valley on Cape Cod with Devin Bibeau of Highfields Golf and Country Club capturing the title.

Three-time champion of this event, Bill Drohen of Brookmeadow Country Club in Canton, withdrew from the competition. This marks the final MGA event of the season for Drohen, who a week earlier won the Massachusetts Father & Son Championship with his dad, Jim Drohen. He is unable to compete in next month's Massachusetts Mid-Amateur Championship because of his job as a math teacher at Southeastern Regional Vocational High School in Easton as school will be in session.

That hasn't stopped all golf-playing teachers from playing in the championship despite teaching duties.

In 1989, a Boston schoolteacher wanted to play in the Mid-Amateur Championship because of the venue: it was shared between New Seabury and Willowbend, two great Cape Cod courses, which were so much better than his home course, Ponkapoag GC in Canton.

So what did this Hanover resident do? He called in sick.

He figured, he'd enjoy the two rounds and go back to work.

But what happened?

He played his best golf and won the tournament.

The poor fellow didn't want to talk to the media. If his superiors read about his victory in the Boston newspapers, they would know his sick days weren't really sick days.

It's the price you pay for victory.

South Coastal Men's Hockey League back in action

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The start to the 2010 Fall Season for the South Coastal Men's Hockey League was legendary so to speak.

The league made some adjustments since it ended last season as they went from three divisions to two. SCHL will have only the Classics and Legends Divisions as they elected not to continue running a Masters Division.

The league made some changes in personnel in both divisions, and the Legends Division. added a shoot out if the game ends in a tie.

The first game in the division between the Toros and the Fighting Saints ended in a shootout with the Toros pulling out a 5-4 win.

Paul Brinkman was the story in the game for the Toros. The high scoring forward for the Toros had three goals including the tying goal with 4:59 left and scored the only goal in the shoot out to give his team the win.

Ray Degaust scored the other goal for the Toros, who trailed the game, 4-2 in the third period.

The Saints had leads of 2-1 and 4-2 in the game as Todd Roach led them with two goals.

Frank Elwood and Mike Ryan were the other goal scorers for the Saints, which got strong goaltending from Bob Stafford of Scituate, who had 25 saves in the game.

Ken Menkello, the Toros goaltender had 24 saves in the game, many of them big to help his team to the win.

The Classics Div. opened its schedule with the new look Red Wings scoring five unanswered goals for a 5-1 win over the Rangers.

Bob Bibeau scored off a feed by Tom Smith of Marshfield just over a minute into the game to give the Rangers a quick lead.

John Guilderson and Steve Figioli led the Red Wings as they both scored two goals apiece. Guilderson assisted on two other goals and Figioli had one assist.

Kevin Barnard had the other Red Wings goal and Ron DiCecca of Marshfield had three assists in the game.

Not living through my kids

highlight will probably be the fact that she's been involved in two triple plays when she played youth softball when she was about seven or eight. One time she turned the triple play, tagging a bag and two runners who just kept going. I think there was a fourth out there, but nobody was really sure. Another time she was the third out of a triple play on the other side.

I used to coach Little League, youth soccer and football years ago, and like some coaches could get over competitive and occasionally off track.

I made it a point not to curse and not to direct it at the kids though. My first priority was always to try to make sure the kids were enjoying themselves.

Yelling at them never helped.

I once had an assistant coach who didn't last long because after a 22-0 victory in our team's second game of the season against the Reds (we had a lot of walks, and I pulled my starters, including the pitcher in the third inning) he went on a tirade and told them if they continued to play the way they did that they wouldn't win another game all season.

Did I mention we made no errors in the game?

The kids, a Major League team ages 9-through 12 were pretty upset and a few were crying.

This all happened while I was with the opponent's coaches, who were friends, and more importantly, found some positives for their kids to work with.

As I watched my assistant berate my team while walking back to my dugout, it became very clear that the kids wouldn't be showing up by the end of the season if their coach could act that way after a win.

He was asked not to return, right there on the spot, and after a team meeting, the kids felt much better after they were told to ignore the tirade and that they just had to avoid overconfidence after such a lopsided win and enjoy the win until tomorrow's practice when it was time to move onto the next game.

The next time we played the Reds, the game was much closer, in fact, they took us into the sixth inning in a one-run game.

The third time we played that season, the Reds edged us in the final regular season game.

Having already won the league title, we voted to let the kids play their dream positions and every backup player was allowed to choose where they wanted to play in that game, but we didn't tell the other kids.

Our starting pitcher that day had pitched to a total of three batters all season, but did a nice job and actually won a playoff game with a relief appearance in extra innings a few days later.

Somehow I've gotten off the point here, and that was parents and coaches and sportsmanship.

After a mostly quiet season, this week I watched two Little League games with parents and coaches that kind of spoiled the fun.

After an unnamed (names have been withheld to avoid embarrassment, but no, there were no bad sports at Cohasset games I've been to. The Cohasset teams I've watched this season have been outstanding) team won their league title, they celebrated, ran the bases, tried to put a teammate on their shoulders and generally acted like 9-year old kids who had just won the biggest game of their young baseball careers.

Watching them enjoy the moment was refreshing and fun. A few went over to the opponents' side to congratulate them on a good game.

From that side of the field, I could hear a parent whining about too much celebrating and disrespect and showing up the hosts.

It stopped quickly when either another parent or a coach pointed out the fact that they were kids enjoying a big win and to let them enjoy their moment.

I liked that, and a few other host team parents who were just proud of their kids for a good season and for playing the game the right way.

Less than a week later, in another, I watched, almost laughing as one parent or grandparent from a visiting team (names have been withheld to protect the guilty, but again, not Cohasset) stomp around cursing an umpire after they felt a grounder to first that was called an out was a foul ball.

Personally, I couldn't see if the ball was in fair or foul territory, but I know for sure the umpire who made the call had a much better view than any of us did.

Then, right after that, the coach lit into his team after a player made contact on what may or may not have been ball four and popped out.

I really felt bad for the kids, who are there to have a good time and play some ball.

Let's hope the fall season will be another good one, and a note to parents one and all.

Remember, sports are games, especially when it comes to youth leagues.

Yes high school athletics can be a key to saving lots and lots of money in the college years, but that should be no reason to tear your hair out every time junior drops a ball, misses the net or hits a popup with a full count.

Let the kids have their fun, let the coaches do their jobs and teach the game and in the end, it's all going to work itself out.

By the way, did I mention that even though my kids might not be the greatest athletes, I'm still going to be there if they do, and I'll cheer for them or coach them, and still smile when I look at the action photo of my older daughter playing softball that sits on my desk.

One thing I won't do is try to live through them or get so wound up in their sports that I pull my hair out or give myself a heart attack.

I'm just sayin'.

Berry likes the idea of potentially playing his old friends.

"It will be fun to play each other," he said. "Three years from now we might be playing together in an All-Star game."

"I'm pumped to go," Doonan said. "It's not too far from home, but not too close either. Hopefully I'll play soon and see how it turns out."

Doonan said he'll be waiting for the games with his friends.

"We'll circle them," he said. "It will be a friendly competition."

For Doonan, the last season was a big one.

"Senior year was awesome," he said, talking as much from a team perspective as an individual one. "I knew we had a good football team, but baseball was the cherry on top."

McCunney said he was looking at more than baseball when he made his choice.

"I'm going to major in biology," he said. "I think we all wanted to find the best schools we could for both academics and sports."

The three players spent last weekend playing together in the 2010 Win Bates Classic in Braintree with a combined Cohasset/Scituate team that was made up of mostly American Legion players.

Scituate/Cohasset won their opening game of the tournament 8-2 over Milton on the strength of a five-RBI afternoon by Berry, who had a three-run home run in the morning Saturday.

Doonan chipped in a homer of his own in the win and tossed a complete game, wrapping things up with just 80 pitches.

The rest of the tournament didn't turn out as well.

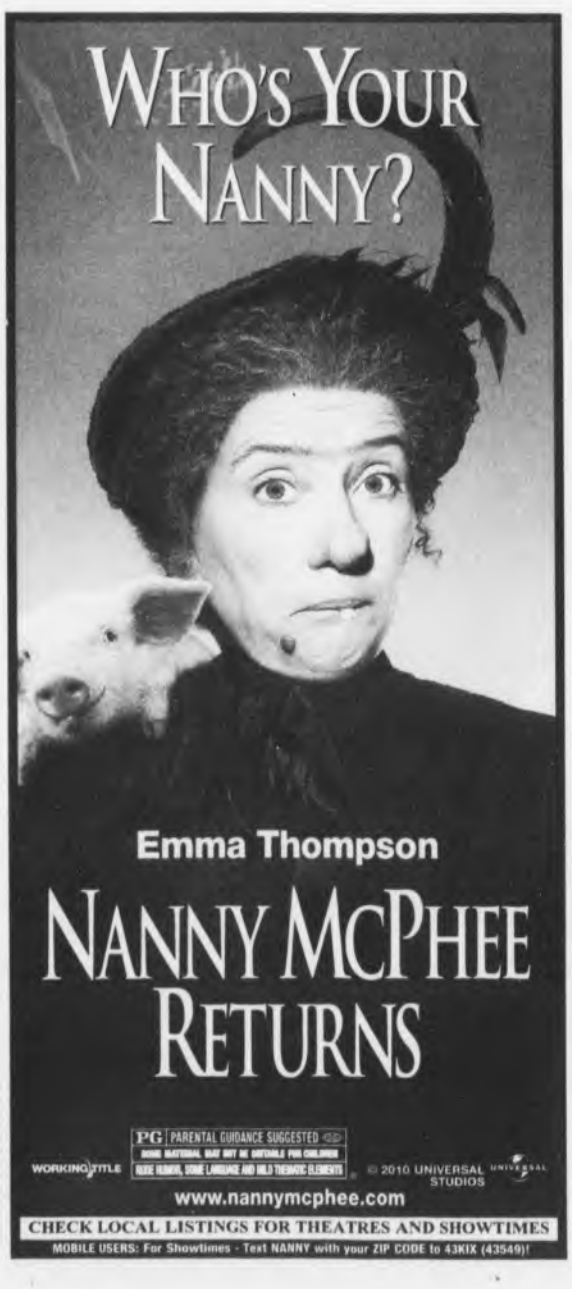
In the second game, Saturday afternoon, an outmanned Cohasset/Scituate squad lost 12-2 to tournament champion Braintree.

That knocked Cohasset/Scituate into the loser's bracket game against Milton on Sunday morning.

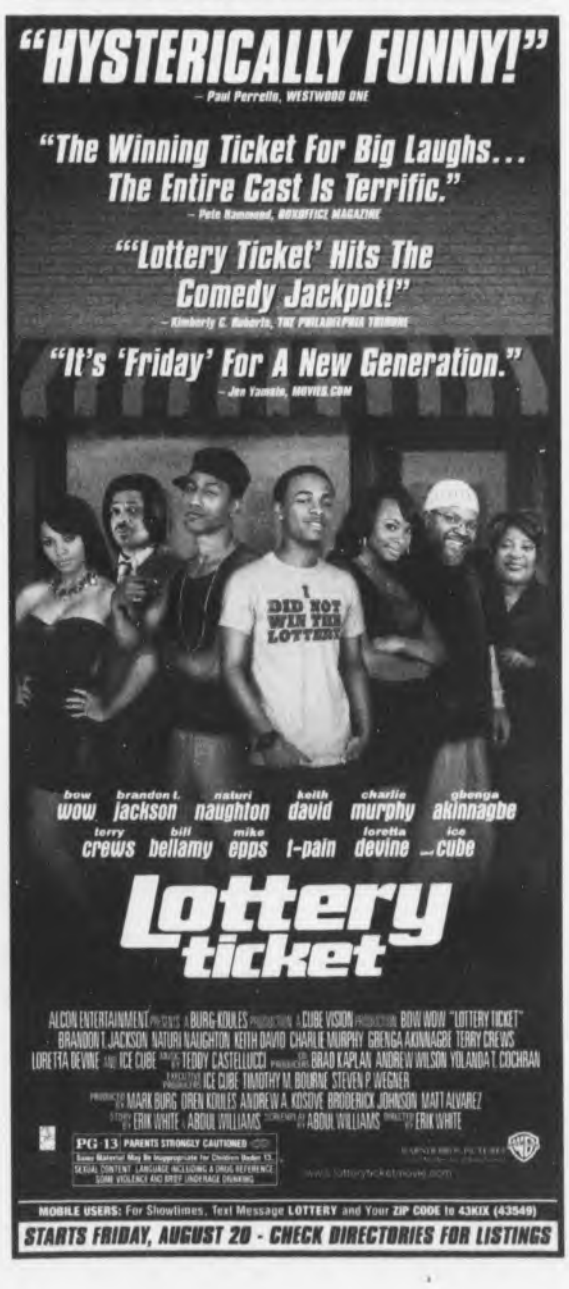
Cohasset/Scituate couldn't recreate the magic and lost a 17-11 slugfest in that one.

The result may not have been what they hoped for, but Berry said it will be a good memory.

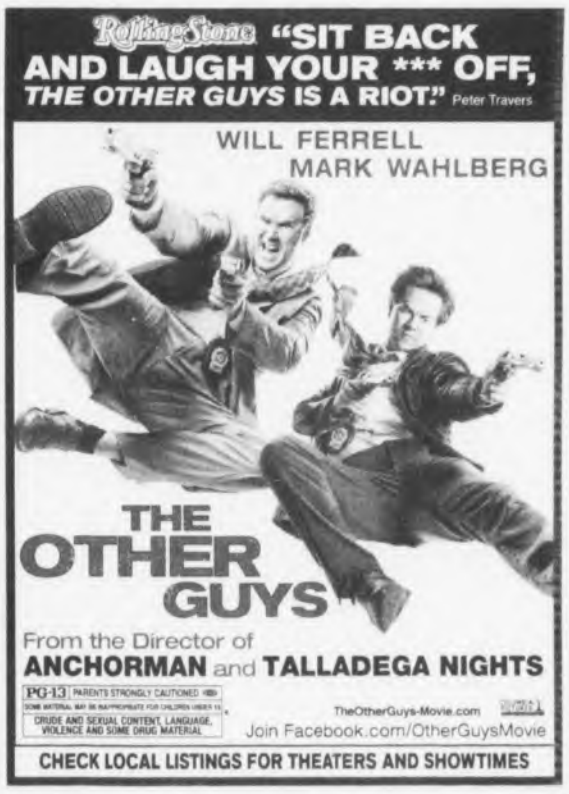
"It's always great to play together," he said. "We're always loving it. This was a last time to play Legion together. We beat Milton yesterday. Losing today was tough, but it's not the end of the world."



The Legion season seemed to go the same way, with Cohasset/Scituate battling right to the end to make the playoffs after a 1-6 start. Berry jokingly blamed Doonan and his Cohasset High School teammates.



"Because he won everything we lost it," he said smiling. "We got off to a slow start until the Cohasset kids got back. We competed. It was a little heartbreaking that we didn't make it."



Bob Barrow was one of the Cohasset/Scituate coaches. Berry's dad Ralph was the manager.

"This was fun baseball he said. "The kids get to enjoy a couple of games together. We enjoyed hanging out with the kids and the coaches."

Children's Chorus to debut on the South Shore this fall

In September 2010, the Full Circle Youth Chorus will offer children on the South Shore a new opportunity to make music together. The chorus welcomes children of all vocal abilities, and requires no audition to participate. There will be two sections, with Section I for kindergarten through second grade, and Section II for third through sixth grade. The mission of the chorus will be to build community through music. Children will make new friends in a fun, supportive environment. Singing together with friends brings joy, self-confidence, and self-expression into every life. Children will gain a thorough understanding of music, and receive instruction based on the Kodaly approach to music education.

The chorus will employ the Kodaly Concept, which is perfectly suited to singing based programs. The founders of the Kodaly approach stressed the importance of educating very young children, because they believed that when musical appreciation and musical skills are developed at an early age, a pattern of musical participation is created for a lifetime. Zoltan Kodaly (1882-1967), was a Hungarian composer, ethnomusicologist, and educator, developed a vocal methodology by observing children as they learned the music of their natural heritage. Kodaly discovered musical patterns of striking similarity, which became the basis for the Kodaly approach to music education.

The Founder and Artistic Director of the Full Circle Youth Chorus is Ms. Denise Rachel of Norwell, a musician and educator on the South Shore. A Kodaly Certified Music Instructor, she was raised in a musical family where she began singing as a church soloist at age five, and continued singing in community choruses in Cleveland, Chicago, and Houston. She has sung regularly with the Unicorn Singers in Hingham, as well as The Choral Art Society in Scituate, and Coro Allegro in Boston. Denise has given solo vocal recitals on the South Shore, and is a frequent guest at community singing events.

Ms. Rachel knows the importance of engaging children, "the Kodaly approach involves multi-sensory learning, meaning that every concept is experienced aurally, kinesthetically, and visually. Children are best engaged when their imagination is triggered on many levels at once. I place a particular emphasis on preparing children for new concepts, so that no child is ever asked to do anything before they are able. Games are frequently used to teach material, so music remains a joyful experience. As children play, the learning becomes part of the excitement! Our repertoire will include contemporary, traditional, folk and world music"

Weekly rehearsals will begin Sept. 21, and follow the school calendar. There will be full chorus performances on Jan. 23 and June 5. Rehearsals will be held at two locations, on Tuesdays at the Heritage Methodist Church in Braintree, and on Wednesdays at Cole Elementary in Norwell. Kindergarten – second grade will rehearse from 4 to 4:45 p.m., while third through sixth grade will rehearse from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Ms Rachel will lead each rehearsal, where she will be assisted by two high school vocal students, who will assist in mentoring the chorus members.

Tuition will be $275 per year for kindergarten through second grade, and $350 per year for third grade through sixth grade. For more information, contact Denise at 781-659-2001, or visit the chorus website at http://www.fullcirclesingers.org

TV game show host calls Hingham home

Todd Newton balances family, career

By Liz Fuller
CORRESPONDENT

When Todd Newton decided to move his family from Los Angeles to Hingham, he didn't expect such a warm welcome. "Everyone has been so nice to us," he said. "The people of Hingham have been spectacular to me."

Newton, who spent many years working as a host for the cable network channel, E! Entertainment Television, along with his ex-wife, Silver, made a joint decision to raise their two children somewhere other than Hollywood.

"We just didn't think it was the environment for our kids," Newton explained. Silver made a list of five top cities that she felt would provide the children with a down-to-earth childhood and stellar education, and Boston was at the top of the list. Silver made a trip to Boston to look at towns surrounding the city and came upon Hingham.

"She called me and said she had found the town where she wanted us to live," Newton recaleld. "She said, 'It's a little town called Hingham, it's on the water. This is it.' So here we are."

The family moved to town just before Christmas last year. Newton said that when they arrived there was a big snowstorm. "I'm sure that everyone here thought that was a big pain, but we loved it. We hadn't seen snow in so long."

Despite the fact that he and Silver are divorced, they are very close friends and only want the best for their children. Newton said that they decided to work as a united front and are both hands-on with the children. "It is important for us to co-parent," he said. "What's best for the children? Seeing us getting along and working together or just trying to stay together?" Newton said that he and Silver made the decision to always live within a few miles of each other so that the children are never far away from either parent. Newton expressed his love for his children by saying, "They are the reason I am alive."

Newton has been involved in hosting many game shows in Los Angeles, such as Whammy!: The All New Press Your Luck, Gameshow Marathon on CBS, *Performing As...*on FOX, Made in the USA on the USA Network, and has been a host on the Home Shopping Network. Newton also hosts The Price Is Right Live!, which is a live version of the famous TV game show at Bally's Las Vegas. "The Price Is Right Live! is the number one matinee on the strip," he said. "I have fallen in love with Las Vegas. It has top-notch entertainment and restaurants."

He is currently the host of a new game show called Family Game Night which is on the Discovery Kids network. "Discovery Kids is going to change to a new network called The Hub Network," Newton explained. "It will debut on Oct. 10." Newton said he is very proud of the game shows he has hosted. "The shows are suitable for all audiences. They are quality television. I am so, so excited and so grateful," he said.
